I missed this great Po post a couple of days ago.

I'll add the context the Google team can't: Apple's app store rule 2.5.6 means that Chrome on iOS is required to use Apple's WebKit instead of the more secure Blink.

This anti-competitive rule makes Apple's users less safe.

Not sure, but if we declare it a research article (it's certainly a scholarly inquiry of some kind... that means YOU CAN HAZ ERDOS NUMBER NAOI. Mine is 3, so yours is 4! Much easier number to remember than ORCID, but alas not uniquely identifying.)

Because The Twilight Zone has been invoked in the Kavanaugh hearings. I’ll offer this: my father believed in decency, integrity and justice. Had he written this, I assure you—there would indeed be a further FBI investigation along with some cosmic justice.

For the record: since I got tenure in 2012, my non-tenured co-authors decide where we submit our manuscripts.

Today in bizarre emails received and what is going on with science publishing. Wiley wants to charge me almost $1400 for using "my" photo as cover image for journal issue to help "promote my research". No thanks! Anyone else familiar with this nonsense? Am I missing something?

As per your cost query, should any author's image be chosen, we currently ask that authors help with the cost of production and promotion - this is $1936 USD. However, please do not let this deter you from submitting, as we understand the financial strain of some of our authors who are not supported by their institutions and do not best to accommodate them with discounts on a case by case basis.

The advantages of this opportunity are manifold: the cover will receive its own DOI in Wiley Online Library with a caption that will link directly to your article abstract which will increase your exposure and generate more web traffic to your article. Your cover will also be archived in the journal's cover gallery for future viewing and reference. Lastly, once the cover is published in Wiley Online Library you will be allowed to download the pre-press quality PDF for your own personal reference and use.

This week's guest cartoonist: Wayno

Okay, people, let's get started on our orientation. I have 666 PowerPoint slides to cover.

Welcome to Hell
presented by Satan
That’s it.
Afterword

This is a list of accounts that I follow on Twitter for news and comment on repositories, copyright, and scholarly communications. It was presented with oral commentary to the meeting of the Digital Commons Heartland Users Group at Fort Hays State University, at Hays, Kansas, October 15, 2018. I apologize for any infringement, though I would plead “transformative” re-use. I will remove anyone’s slide who asks.

The purpose of the presentation was to share access to a social media community and to encourage the 20 or so attendees to engage in it. I wish to thank all these accounts for tweeting and sharing their opinions and insights.
