AT HAYS DEDICATION, 1,500.

Dual Ceremonies Are Held for College Library and Science Hall.

SCIENCE HALL
(By The Star's Own Service.)

HAYS, KAS., July 10.—Fifteen hundred persons attended the dedication of Forsyth library here today.

Dual ceremonies were held at the Kansas State Teachers college. Following the dedicatory address by Dr. Arthur E. Bostwick, St. Louis librarian, the cornerstone of the newest building on the campus, a $150,000 science hall now under construction, was placed by W. Y. Morgan, chairman of the state board of regents.

Dr. H. P. Cady of the University of Kansas spoke as a representative of the field of science prior to the cornerstone placing.

Declaring this "a practical age," Dr. Bostwick insisted the function of the library requires it to reach out into the masses to assist humanity rather than to remain a mere miserly guardian of musty books.

"Science is like a lamp in the night," said Dr. Cady in his address. "The brighter it is, the further we can see, but the greater the circle of darkness it reveals. Every mystery cleared up adds more to be solved."

Copies of The Star containing reports on the recent political convention were placed in the crypt in the science hall cornerstone among other papers and records.
