Celebrate National Undergraduate Research Week

Hello! My name is Dr. Chris Jochum, and I'm the Chair of the Department of Teacher Education at FHSU. Prior to coming to FHSU, I spent 8 years at the University of Nebraska at Kearney where I worked extensively with undergraduate research students in the field of foreign and/or second language education. My students conducted both quantitative and qualitative inquiries in the U.S., Costa Rica and Peru. Mentoring undergraduate research students is a great experience that I highly recommend! To support undergraduate research week, I'll be posting daily tips to assist faculty members and highlight some of the benefits of the program.

Share your passion

One of the many benefits associated with mentoring undergraduate research students is that it affords faculty members the opportunity to step outside of their typical coursework and share their passion for research and creativity with students. Often times, students are unaware that their professors are productive scholars in their respective fields, which includes activity beyond the confines of the standard, subject-based curriculum. Developing a research agenda with undergraduate students provides them a unique, enhanced experience within your specific areas of expertise.

-Leslie Z. Paige, Office of Scholarship and Sponsored Projects
