Fresh Food Friday

This week's Fresh Food Friday is Green Garlic!

What IS green garlic, you ask?? It is the immature garlic plant before the bulb we all know and love develops. It looks a lot like a green onion, and you prepare it in the same manner. Green garlic is a little milder than bulb garlic and can be used in any recipe that calls for garlic.

Stop by the Tiger Food Exchange (located on the main floor of the Forsyth Library) after 1pm to pick up a bundle! In the event no one is in the Exchange, the bundles will be located in the fridge. As with all our Fresh Food Friday offerings, please only take one per person.

Contact Shane at sfkeller2@mail.fhsu.edu with any questions or concerns.

Celebrate National Undergraduate Research Week – Friday's Tip of the Day

Enhance your own research agenda and scholarly creativity

As with any quality mentoring relationship, the benefits must be mutual between the mentor and mentee. Working with undergraduate research students can be very rewarding for the sponsoring faculty members as it can require them to more accurately refine and/or articulate their own research agenda and related methods. In addition, for Primarily Undergraduate Institutions (PUIs) or non-doctoral granting institutions, working under the guidance of a mentor professor enables the students to have access to mentoring and projects similar to what graduate and research assistants receive at larger, research-based institutions. This can, in turn, enable faculty members to more thoroughly investigate their areas of inquiry though collaborating with their undergraduate research students.

Hello! My name is Dr. Chris Jochum, and I'm the Chair of the Department of Teacher Education at FHSU. Prior to coming to FHSU, I spent 8 years at the University of Nebraska at Kearney where I worked extensively with undergraduate research students in the field of foreign and/or second language education. My students conducted both quantitative and qualitative inquiries in the U.S., Costa Rica and Peru. Mentoring undergraduate research students is a great experience that I highly recommend! I hope you found the daily tips useful!
