Committee approves extra pay hike

by David Clouston
Senior Staff Writer
and Vince Hess
Copy Editor

Fort Hays State's long struggle to make FHS faculty salaries equal with those of faculty at other state universities may soon be over.

The Ways and Means Committee of the Kansas House approved yesterday a motion to add $340,000 to the 1981-1982 FHS budget for faculty salaries. This money, earmarked to bring FHS faculty salaries in line with those for peer institutions Emporia State and Pittsburg

State universities, is an addition to the $50,000 approved by the Kansas Senate for the same purpose.

The total of $390,000 would immediately bring FHS faculty salaries in line with those at the other schools. University officials had originally hoped for making up the difference over a period of several years, but were "very pleased" that the House committee is recommending giving the entire sum in one year.

The motion was made by Rep. Sandy Duncan, R-Wichita, chairman of the FHS subcommittee in the House.

President Gerald Tomanek said he received a call from a Regents' staff member yesterday afternoon informing him of the committee vote. The bill has "a good chance" of passing the Legislature, he said.

The entire Regents' appropriations bill, which was passed by the Senate Tuesday, is being examined by the committee. From the committee, the bill must be approved by the entire House, then must be approved once again by Senate.

Tomanek said he thought FHS had been able to persuade the House subcommittee that the salary request is justified, and the legislators decided to try and settle the problem all at once.

The news for FHS and other Regents' institutions from the Senate was not encouraging. Tuesday, Senate approved a $10-million cut in the proposed budget for state universities next year.

The bill cuts statewide expenditures by $5.8 million, raising tuition 15 percent for the next school year. A recommendation by Gov. John Carlin for an 8-percent faculty salary increase was cut to 7 percent, which constitutes a savings of $1.7 million. Funds for books and other incidental operating expenses for colleges was cut $660,000.

The Senate approved an extra $50,000 for FHS faculty salaries, which was $29,648 less than the $79,648 needed for an extra 1-percent salary increase. FHS also received all of the $48,760 requested for student salaries, which would give students an 8.1-percent increase.

The Senate approved a total operating increase of $1,263,191 for FHS. This is less than both the Board of Regents' appropriation of $1,802,485 and Carlin's proposal of $1,298,381. The total amount appropriated for all the state universities was $500,000,000.

Many senators expressed their displeasure with the cuts, citing the result as the cutting off of human resources within the state. Sen. Merrill Werts, R-Junction City, a member of the Ways and Means Committee and chairman of the FHS subcommittee, said some university faculty are bewildered by the cuts. He expressed his belief that the state schools will "lose good faculty members because of this."

Sen. Jerry Karr, D-Emporia, said, "We are trying to prove that we can cut budgets better than anyone else, and we are going to suffer for it."

State senate passes teaching requirement

by Vince Hess
Copy Editor

Faculty members at state universities who work in research instead of teaching may not receive a pay increase under an amendment passed Tuesday by the State Senate.

The provision, an amendment to the appropriations bill for Regents' institutions, requires faculty at state universities either to teach at least one three-hour course a week or to receive an exemption from the university president during the next school year. Faculty who fail to abide by the rule would not receive a 7-percent pay increase, which was included in the same Senate bill.

The appropriations bill, including the three-hour amendment, is being examined by the House Ways and Means Committee.

The amendment, if passed by the House, will not affect Fort Hays State. Dr. James Murphy, vice president for academic affairs, said, Fort Hays State is a teaching institution, he said, and no faculty member works only in research; each member teaches at least one three-hour course a week. The amendment will mainly affect University of Kansas, he said.

The senator who originated the idea for the amendment, Sen. Jim Francisco, D-Mulvane, agrees.

"Anybody who's not going to teach three hours a week should get out of teaching," he said. "I think we're going to see lots of people that we're paying to teach at K-State and KU who are actually doing research."

Francisco said he has a son at Wichita State University and that he has talked with other students at Wichita State. They are concerned about professors who show up for class only for the first and last days of the semester. A graduate student teaches the course while the professor is being paid to teach it. Francisco also cited the KU professors who went to Iran over a year ago, leaving their classes while still being paid to teach.

A year from now, he said, all six state universities will have to report on how many faculty members are teaching at least a three-hour course. Those who have received an exemption or have not complied with the rule. The amendment is a way to "have more information on higher education in the state," he said, since information is currently available on how many faculty members at state institutions are doing research instead of teaching.

Sen. Ed Rutz, R-Pittsburg, who introduced the amendment, said he feels the rule is designed to deal with abuses concerning faculty and research that senators feel are occurring in state universities.

What about those faculty members who are doing research full time? Francisco said he questioned whether they should be paid at all as faculty members, since many university researchers receive special grants to perform their work.

The possibility that sometime in the future the state will not pay faculty salaries to those engaged in research was not considered, he said.

Senate ratifies allocations proposal

by Jodi Dannels
Staff Reporter

After several proposed amendments and much discussion and argument, Student Senate passed the 1981-82 budget, as originally presented by the Allocations Committee, in a roll call vote, 25-1-1, at last night's meeting.

The bill now needs the signatures of Student Body President Jim Anderson and President Gerald Tomanek to be valid.

Kelly Isom, committee chairman, explained to senators that after the proposed budget was released, a public hearing was conducted, at which only two groups and one individual appeared. Kappa Iota Delta Sigma, a newly formed education organization, and Model United Nations are satisfied with their allotments, he said.

Glenda Riddle, Concordia junior, spoke at both the hearing and last night's senate meeting, asking the senators to find a way to make more campus activities free of charge. Kevin Faulkner, business senator, told Riddle that senate has no control over what is done with the money allocated once it is given to a specific organization, such as Memorial Union Activities Board, which sponsors many campus activities, and that senate could merely take a stance on the subject.

Controversy arose when two amendments, one to add money to the funding of athletics and one to subtract money from the same item, were motioned. Dave Remus, at-large senator, proposed to add $2,000 to athletics' original $103,000. He said that of the $310,000 the Allocations Committee had first planned to budget, only $307,000 had actually been divided among the organizations which requested funding. He also said that in the past two years, MUAB has received a 70-percent increase. Special Events a 46-percent increase. Student Government Association a 40-percent increase. Leader a 26-percent increase. Reveille a 23-percent increase, and athletics only a 22.6-percent increase.

Discussion continued as Nancy Bauck, business senator, said, "I don't think athletics provides the students a third of the activities, so how can we give them a third of the money?" Bill Wright, at-large senator, said, "I don't think they

Coretta Scott King to speak on 'Challenge of the '80s'

Coretta Scott King, widow of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., will speak on "Challenge of the '80s" during her appearance on campus Tuesday.

The lecture is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. in the Memorial Union Ballroom.

Her address is to deal with problems of the decade, including poverty, racism and unemployment.

Presidential debate scheduled Monday

Student Government Association will sponsor a debate Monday between the two candidates running for student body president.

Tom Moorhous, Oakley graduate student, and Mark Tallman, Hays junior, will participate in the one-hour debate which will start at 8 p.m. in the Memorial Union Black and Gold Room.

The debate will begin with a 10-minute speech by each candidate. A 30-minute period will follow in which the candidates will have the opportunity to ask each other questions. The last 10 minutes will be reserved for questions from the audience.

"It's a perfect opportunity for people to see who has the best ideas on topics such as student fee raises and faculty salaries. Student Body President Jim Anderson said of the debate

Art council to sponsor exhibit

Approximately $1,000 in purchase awards will be available, and a total of $1,500 in cash will be awarded to outstanding entries in the Hays Arts Council's annual Smokey Hill Art Exhibition April 26-May 9 in the Hays Public Library.

The exhibition is one of the oldest jury shows in the area in which Kansas artists may show and sell their work publicly.

Juror for the 1981 exhibit is Leroy Twarogowski, a member of the Colorado State University faculty at Fort Collins. He will examine the media categories, which include oils and acrylics, watercolors and acrylics, photography, mixed media works, sculptures, ceramics, glass-blowing, textiles and jewelry.

Carol Heil, director of the Hays Arts Council, said, "One of the main purposes of this show is to serve as an outlet for Kansas artists, and it also shows trends in the state in visual arts." She said that with the wide variety of categories, it is usually a balanced show. "Everyone can usually find something they like," she said.

Artists presently living in Kansas are eligible to enter their work completed in the last two years. Each artist may submit a total of four items. Entry fees for the exhibit are $6 for the first item and $4 for each additional item submitted.

Entry forms are available through the Hays Arts Council, Box 869, Hays or by calling (913) 625-7522.

'Pippin' to appear as part of series

The New York cast of Pippin, the long-running Broadway musical, will make an appearance at 8 p.m. April 26 in Sheridan Coliseum.

The performance is the last event in the 1981 Encore Entertainment Series for this semester.

Tickets are $6 for adults, $3 for Fort Hays State students and faculty with activity tickets and $3 for students of high school age and under. Tickets can be obtained from the Student Service Center.

The story is by veteran playwright Roger Hirsion, and the music is composed by Stephen Schwartz, award-winning composer of Godspell.

"We have been pleased with the response of western Kansas to our first Encore series," Steve Wood, Memorial Union director, said.

More than 200 season tickets were sold last fall to such productions as Mozart on Fifth, the Charlie Byrd Trio and the Yugoslavian Folk Ballet.

Pippin is about a young prince and his quest for a life of total excitement. He plunges into a maze of court intrigue, sensual pleasure and bloody battles.

This musical will be presented by Daedalus Productions of New York.

Child organization to take members

KIDS, the new early childhood organization on campus, is now taking applications for membership.

Membership is open to any major and anyone interested in the advancement of children through the Nurtury Center and through providing valuable programs for future teachers.

KIDS will co-sponsor a puppeteer workshop Saturday. Members will be admitted at half-price.

Anyone interested in becoming a member should contact Deb Neff, Dr. Mike Currier or the education department today.

Reagan proposes financial aid cutbacks

by Diane Ashens
Senior Staff Writer
and College Press Service

Students receiving financial aid may find themselves in a last-minute search for funds this summer if President Ronald Reagan's administration's proposed $9.2 billion slash in federal student loans and grants is passed by Congress.

In an attempt to require families to contribute more to their children's college education, Secretary of Education Terrel Bell has placed a temporary freeze on processing financial aid applications. He also announced the government wants to change certain eligibility requirements for Pell Grants — formerly Basic Educational Opportunity Grants — and will not process any more applications for the grants until Congress votes on the change in requirements.

Congress has until April 28 to react to the proposed rules changes. If the requirements are changed as Bell requested, "maybe 100,000 students" will be knocked out of the Pell Grant program, Skee Smith of the U.S. Department of Education's Student Special Services Office estimated.

In the meantime, the freeze stops awarding of all federal financial aid, because Pell Grants are used to determine students' eligibility for other forms of financial aid.

Although the Fort Hays State financial aids staff was out of town, Carroll Beardslee, director, circulated information about the proposed cuts gathered from the American Association of State Colleges and Universities' Committee on Federal Regulations.

In his memo, Beardslee stated that during the 1980-1981 academic year, 1,363 FHS students received $1,181,959 from the Basic Grant Program — Pell Grants — and 1,309 FHS students applied for and received $2,174,000 through the Guaranteed Student Loan Program. Using estimates from the AACU committee, Beardslee discussed the effects these changes may have upon American college students.

Proposed changes in the needs analysis system for Pell Grants will mean that most students with family incomes above $19,000 a year will not receive grants at all. This will eliminate 600,000 students from the program.

"A so-called $750 'self-help' provision is misnamed; it is not that at all," the committee stated. The self-help provision is a way of computing need so that students whose total expenses are under about $2,550 will receive smaller Pell Grants if their family incomes are between about $8,000 and $15,000 a year.

The student is not required to raise an extra $750, as the self-help language suggests. Instead, he or she will receive a considerably smaller grant.

AASCU claims the effects of the provisions will fall almost entirely on students who do not live on campus. Many low-income, black and Hispanic students, as well as many self-supporting students, will be hit hard, the committee said.

Proposed Guaranteed Student Loan changes may mean 1,000,000 students may not be able to get GSL loans — some estimates go even higher. Those who do get loans will have to pay higher interest rates — perhaps 25 percent to 40 percent more. Students in the northeast states are expected to be hit the hardest.

At present, a family's eligibility for aid is calculated by subtracting certain living expenses from total family income. Regulations state that families can increase their living expenses estimates by 12½ percent to cover inflation. The administration, however, wants to scrap the 12½ percent increase, thus saving $183 million in the next fiscal year.

By figuring eligibility the administration's way, more families would show higher net incomes, and students would become ineligible for Pell Grants. New regulations would also set maximum amounts on how much a student could spend for housing, books and related school expenses.

The major problem is that most students and colleges will not know how much financial aid they will receive until just a few weeks before the beginning of fall term.

Colleges around the country have adopted two main strategies to cope with the problem. Either they will hold up all processing until the matter is settled or "go through the motions," even though the prepared aid packages will probably fall apart during the summer.

Most schools screen aid applications in late winter, forward some to the federal government for review and then receive the outcomes of each application in March, April or May. Most students hear about their final packages in late May.

But this year, students may spend the last few weeks before fall semester hunting additional funds after hearing that their aid packages have been substantially decreased or completely done away with.

The American Council on Education estimates that approximately 750,000 to 1,000,000 students might drop out this fall, and another 750,000 might transfer to a less expensive college or go part-time instead of full-time. In addition, estimates are that many small private colleges, heavily dependent on student aid, might close.

The proposed ending of the Social Security student benefit program, which aids about 760,000 students at a cost of about $2 billion, also adds to the problem.

In his memo, Beardslee urged faculty and staff to write their congressmen and encourage them to work out a compromise package for student aid. He also pointed out the link between decreased enrollment and faculty employment.

Cassidy said he believes that many grants will still be available for needy students and even many middle and upper-middle income applicants who "do their homework and know where to look."

Regents to debate 20-percent tuition hike

A Kansas Board of Regents' proposal, should it be approved, will increase tuition by $40 per semester next year. The tuition hike represents a 20-percent increase needed to generate $5.8 million for the Regents' budget to fulfill Gov. John Carlin's budget.

The proposal was made at the Regents' meeting last week. The $40 increase proposal was made so that a definite decision could be entered in the first reading. Jim Anderson, chairman of the Regents' Student Advisory Committee, said. Anderson attended the meeting. At the second reading, scheduled for the April 16-17 meeting in Emporia, the proposal can be amended to change the amount of the increase.

Anderson termed the needed increase as an act of "political jockeying" to attain a total average tuition at the Regents' universities of 25 percent. The 25-percent goal was prescribed in an agreement between the state Legislature and the Regents in the mid-1960s. The goal has never been met; the schools currently pay 18 percent of the educational expenses.

The SAC favors the increase as long as tuition money is used to improve university programs, Anderson said.

However, the tuition will not be regenerated into the six state schools, Anderson said. The $5.8 million will be put in the general fund to be used to fund projects such as road construction and maintenance.

Anderson expressed his concern about the possible decline in enrollment caused by the tuition increase and President Ronald Reagan's cuts in financial aid to students. Students who will be affected most by the increase are those who are currently budgeting their money carefully in order to go to college, Anderson said.

need $103,000 — if anything, we should reduce that amount."

After defeating the amendment to raise the amount given to athletics by a vote of 5-19-2, Gerald Reese, education senator, attempted to carry through Wright's suggestion, making a motion to lower athletics' funding to $100,000. Faulkner said the Allocations Committee had an informal policy of only funding the minor sports and that Reese's proposal would only cover the minor sports presented in Athletic Director Bobby Thompson's budget.

Troy Moore, humanities senator, said Thompson withheld $7,000-$10,000 from the football program so minor sports could attend national tournaments this year.

Further discussion ended, 4-21-2, to defeat Reese's motion to decrease athletic funding.

After a few more questions, the roll call vote was taken. The bill was passed, 25-1-1. Reese's vote was the single "no," while Steve Henderson, natural science and mathematics senator, abstained.

In emergency business, senate ratified statute 307, which is to provide an orderly transition from one SGA administration to the next, following next week's elections. Duties for outgoing and incoming SGA presidents and treasurers are listed in the statute.

Anderson also urged senators to write congressmen and the Board of Regents, opposing President Ronald Reagan's proposed financial aid cutbacks.

Youth counselor views drug abuse as epidemic

by Luella Terry
Staff Reporter

In the world today, everything seems to be on the rise — college tuition expenses, the cost of living, gasoline prices.

While this sign of life seems understandably important, another more alarming and relevant statistic, often purposely ignored, yet affecting more and more people today, is drug abuse.

The authors of a new national drug study for the University of Michigan's Institute for Social Research said drug use among high school seniors "appears to be at or near its peak level," and "is probably higher than that of any other industrialized nation in the world."

Dave Kingsley, youth consultant in a program to help people with drug and alcohol problems in the Hays area, described drug use as an epidemic. "We're seeing an increase in drug use which, I believe, pretty well reflects the national picture," Kingsley said.

The Hays alcohol and drug abuse clinic is run by St. Anthony's Hospital. The center contains six staff members. Four of the six are professionals, one a director and one an office manager, dealing with 18 counties in northwest Kansas.

Staff member Mary McIntyre described the clinic's clients as teenagers to senior citizens. "Our clinic is open to everybody, regardless of age, education or income," McIntyre said.

The clinic's program for clients consists of three steps. Detoxification, the first, helps the person become medically clean. Step two is an in-patient process providing individual and group counseling plus psychological testing. The last step is an after-care program of out-patient counseling and work with a support group.

The program, Kingsley said, also works with the family of the client, because the person's life affects and is affected by those around him.

Kingsley spoke enthusiastically of the clinic's work. "I feel really good about our program," he said. "We've got lots of things in the planning stages." He summed up the program's importance by saying it is there to be used. "It's good to know that there's a program and support group there if you need it."

The clinic is also involved with prevention and intervention. Kingsley travels to high schools to visit with students and teachers. His travels include Hill City, Stockton and Plainville, and he has been contacted by high schools as far away as Abilene and St. John.

A comprehensive prevention and early intervention program dealing with use of drugs and alcohol is being planned for the Hays school district, Kingsley said.

Kansas Alcohol and Drug Abuse News reported that in Kansas, about $12,000,000 to $13,000,000 is spent on the problems of alcohol and drug abuse, of which only about $500,000 goes into prevention effort.

Some of the St. Anthony program is funded by tax dollars. Senate Bill 467, which was passed about a year ago, requires tax on liquor by the drink. Some of the money received from this tax goes to the hospital and is directed to the drug and alcohol clinic.

Even with the large staff and clinic in Hays, not all problems are solved. There are only eight adolescent treatment centers in the country, the nearest being Valley Hope at Norton. These have limits on the number of patients they may accept and treat, causing a long waiting list of those seeking help.

Kingsley, a former alcohol and drug user himself, has worked with 85 people in his branch of the program during the past nine months, and said alcohol and marijuana are the most prevalent drugs abused.

"I think it's important for people to realize marijuana isn't harmless, and using it does lead to harder drugs," Kingsley said. He explained that using it lets people come in contact with other drugs, giving them potential opportunities to become involved with harder drugs. "I think educating the public that pot is really hurting the society is important," Kingsley said. "It's really affecting our young people."

Careers goal of department

by Sherryl Province
Staff Reporter

In the Fort Hays State department of psychology, students are busily preparing for psychology careers.

The primary goal is to provide students with a bank of psychological knowledge needed to pursue a career in psychology.

There is a need for school psychologists, and FHS is one of the highest recommended schools in this program because of the quality of the program and the professional success of its graduates," Dr. Jack Kramer, director of the graduate program in school psychology, said.

Students learn such aspects of psychology as behavior modification and diagnostic techniques, consultation procedures and formal and behavior assessment. Students practice some of this knowledge by working with children in special education classes and reading clinics in the Hays, Great Bend, Concordia, Plainville and Larned school districts.

"The goal of the student is to become a certified school psychologist upon graduation," Kramer said.

Students are carefully screened for the program. Upon acceptance, the students are on probationary status until they demonstrated an aptitude for both clinical and academic skills, Kramer said. Dedication to the program, background in psychology and skills through psychology education are major factors in the program.

Students have little clinical psychology practicum outside the Psychological Service Center. The reason for this is to give the students more practice through psychology in school systems, Kramer said, not into further practicum of areas outside of the school system, such as the High Plains Mental Health Center in Hays.

Each student is required to have at least 300 hours of practical experience as a school psychologist before being able to graduate, Kramer said.

Some students specialize in areas such as Behavior Modification, Behavioral Assessment, Exceptional Children, Learning Disabilities, Mental Retardation and Child Management.

Upon graduation, students are helped in obtaining jobs in school systems in northwest Kansas as well as in neighboring states. "We rarely have problems with placing qualified graduates after completion of the program," Kramer said.

Announcements of job openings are posted on the psychology department's bulletin boards in West Hall, Kramer said. The Career Planning and Placement Office in Picken 100 also keeps a list of job openings.

Kramer assumes duties; directs psychology grads

by Sherryl Province
Staff Reporter

A replacement has recently been made in the psychology department; Dr. Jim Ryabik, professor of psychology, has stepped down from the position of director of the graduate program in school psychology, and Dr. Jack Kramer, assistant professor of psychology, has assumed the position.

Kramer was born in Sabina, Ohio, where he lived 18 years. He attended Wabash College in Crawfordsville, Ind. four years to obtain a bachelor of arts degree in psychology. He graduated in 1974.

He then attended the University of South Carolina in Columbia, and obtained his master's of art degree in school psychology in 1975. His Ph.D. in school psychology followed in 1979.

Kramer came to Fort Hays State in August, 1979 after working in the public school system and teaching in South Carolina for one year.

He has worked with local school districts on consultations and assists with the workings of the Psychological Service Center.

"I am looking forward to it," Kramer said about the director's position. "Ryabik has already made the program a success, and I feel I can add a few ideas of my own to make the program even better." Kramer has anticipated the move for six months, he said.

Currently, Kramer is revamping the graduate program. Changes are being made in specific course requirements, and more emphasis will be placed on bringing the program up to date for accreditation, he said. The changes should be completed by April.

"The graduate program works within the framework of the psychology department," Kramer said. "Students get the opportunity to work with good people who make up the complete psychology program."

Health office raises pap smear price

The Student Health Office, Sheridan 205, has offered services to Fort Hays State students for many years. Recently, a change has been made in one aspect of service.

Pap smears used to cost $2; the rate has risen to $5.

Kathy Douglas, health office nurse, said this is because the office changed the lab where Pap smear testing is done.

"A new classification was developed for Pap smears, and the old lab in California is still using the old techniques," Douglas said. "We wanted the new classification, so we switched to a lab in Wichita."

"I hope that the tests will be done in a week's time. In California, it could take almost a month to get the results back."

Lab work on Pap smears in California costs $2.25, Douglas said; however, students were charged $2 for them. The Wichita lab rate will cost $5.

If a student has insurance, she can bring in the forms or number, and the insurance will cover the cost of Pap smears, Douglas said.

"Wichita also has a new system of reporting problems," Douglas said. "They have someone on staff who we can get free consultation from."

"I think it will really be an improvement on our service."

Appointments can be made for Pap smears at the health office.

In addition, Rubella — German Measles — tests will be given at the time of Pap smears. This requires a blood test.

"This test is to check for immunity to Rubella," Douglas said. "If a pregnant woman gets German measles during the first trimester of her pregnancy, there is a high birth defect rate."

"Several of the defects are deafness, cataracts, heart problems and mental retardation."

If a woman does not have an immunity to German measles, a vaccine can be given. However, women must be careful about getting pregnant during the three months after the immunization, Douglas said.

The Student Health Office offers many other services. Some of these services are blood pressure readings, physicals, confidential counseling, flu and allergy shots, pregnancy tests, blood tests, medical supplies and a referral service.

The office is open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays. Nurses are on call around the clock. The doctor is available from 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. A $1 fee is charged to see the doctor

Receives five marks of distinction

Leader wins All-American honors

Each year, the University Leader is evaluated by the National Scholastic Press Association — Associated Collegiate Press. For the fall semester, the Leader received an All-American award with marks of distinction in coverage and content, writing and editing, design and photography, art and graphics and opinion content.

Five marks of distinction is the highest rating a paper can be awarded.

Under coverage and content, the Leader received 690 points out of 700. This area covers sources, timeliness, vitality and sports coverage.

Writing and editing was the next division the Leader was judged in. The Leader received 820 points out of 900. News, feature and sports stories and copy editing, proof-reading and headline writing are judged in this section.

Range of opinion content, editorial writing, cartoons and feature opinions are listed in the opinion content division. The Leader received 700 out of 700 points for this section.

Under the design division, 625 out of 700 points were awarded to the Leader. In this division, front page, news, feature, sports, opinion, headline schedule, body type, printing and advertising are judged. The Leader received bonus points of 25 in this section for its relevant advertisements.

Photography, art and graphics was the last division in which the Leader was rated, scoring 670 out of 700 points. In this division, content, quality, graphics, cutlines and art are judged.

"The Leader is an attractive, well-written paper," an ACP judge said.

East team edges West 109-107

by Marc Trowbridge
Senior Sports Writer

In a normal game, there probably would not have been a chance for Fort Hays State's Max Hamblin to send the game into overtime, but this was not a normal occurrence.

It was the second District 10 All-Star game played March 20 at Emporia State University's White Auditorium, and the East All-Stars won, 109-107.

Several special rules were in effect for the game, one of which almost gave Hamblin his chance. One rule that had worked in the West team's favor in the late portions of each half, and set up Hamblin for the last shot, was "make-it-take-it."

The make-it-take-it rule, which allowed the team that was behind to retain possession after it scored, was used in the last two minutes of the first half and the last three minutes of the second half.

With West down by four points, Marymount College's Henry Murphy hit a layup with two seconds left and gave the West one last chance.

The West then called a timeout to set up the last shot, which was to be taken by Hamblin on the inbound play, but the pass from Andy Carrier of Bethany College was a little too high for the Tiger guard.

"I was open on the play; the pass was just a little too high," Hamblin said after the game. "I think that if I could have gotten the ball, I could have made the shot."

It perhaps should not have come down to that play, but because of a scoring discrepancy, the scoreboard showed the West two points closer than it should have been.

Though Hamblin did not get the last shot, he did hit almost everything else in the second half. He finished with 19 points.

"In the first half, my rhythm was off a little because of the layoff, but the shots started to fall in the second half," Hamblin said.

Hamblin was joined in the game by Tiger teammate Lionel Hamer, who finished with 13 points and a team-high seven rebounds.

Pacing the way for the East was Emporia State's Joe Warren with a game-high 24; tossing in 19 for the East was Mike Dennis of Washburn University.

Washburn had the most players in the game, with all four of its seniors making the team; joining Dennis were Chris Urban, Randy Dawson and Rodney Trunnel.

Other members of the East squad were Keith Miller and Larry Davis of Ottawa University, Doug Nadine and Al Spinks of Mid-America Nazarene College and Benedictine College's Art Tolbert.

The remaining members of the West squad were Larry Jones, Marymount; Doug Gayer, McPherson College; Dave Pallenier, Sterling College; Curtis Smith, Kansas Newman College; and Dale Hinton, Bethel College.

It also marked the final game of West Head Coach Ken Cochran, who indicated following the game that he is not returning to coach at Marymount next season. "But it will not be official until next month," Cochran said, "so until then, it is just a rumor."

Though it was a game mostly for fun, the teams did want to win. "It was a chance to meet some of the players that I have faced the last two years," Hamer said.

East All-Stars (109)
Mike Dennis 9 1-1 19; Chris Urban 1 4-4 6; Randy Dawson 0 0-0 0; Keith

Miller 5 6-7 16; Doug Nadine 3 0-0 6; Joe Warren 11 2-2 24; Art Tolbert 5 2-5 12; Al Spinks 4 1-3 10; Rodney Trunnel 2 1-3 4; Larry Davis 5 2-2 12.

West All-Stars (107)
Larry Jones 3 0-0 6; Max Hamblin 6 7-8 19; Doug Gayer 1 0-0 2; Dave Pallenier 3 5-5 11; Henry Murphy 3 1-1 6; Curtis Smith 5 0-0 10; Wayne Smith 6 7-8 19; Lionel Hamer 6 1-4 13; Andy Carrier 6 0-0 12; Dale Hinton 2 5-8 9.

Halftime — East 51, West 44. Total Fouls — East 23, West 21. Fouled Out — Dawson, East; Jones, West.

Tigers named to CSIC team

The Tigers' No. 1 and No. 2 scorers joined eight other players on the 1981 Central States Intercollegiate Conference's first team.

Max Hamblin and Mark Wilson topped the list of 10 players that included two players each from conference champion Missouri Southern State College, Washburn University and Kearney State College.

Hamblin, who finished the year as the leading scorer, and Wilson, who was second, were joined by Percy Brown and Jerry Wilson of Missouri Southern, Randy Dawson and Rodney Trunnel of Washburn and Jeff Veerhusen and Doug Holtmeier of Kearney State.

Rounding out this 10-man squad were Emporia State University's Joe Warren and Grady Hansen of Wayne State College.

Holtmeier of Kearney State was chosen the conference's player of the year. It was the third time in as many years that a Kearney State player has won the honor.

Tiger freshman sensation Cesar Fantuazzi was voted the league's top freshman in the coaches' poll.

Also named was the CSIC coach of the year. Receiving the award was Chuck Williams, who directed his Missouri Southern Lions to the first-place finish in conference play and to second place in District 16 play.

New coaches guide squads

Thinclads to initiate season tomorrow in quadrangular action

by Doug Carder
Sports Editor

New coaches will guide the men's and women's track teams when the thinclads open the outdoor season at noon tomorrow in Lewis Field Stadium.

Kansas Wesleyan University, Panhandle State University and Bethany College comprise the Tigers' non-conference quadrangular competition.

Coaches Joe Fisher and Tonya Dempsey will be at the helm for the Fort Hays State squads. However, the coaches are already familiar to the FHS program, after guiding their teams through cross country and indoor teams.

Fisher's cross country team captured first in the Central States Intercollegiate Conference, while Dempsey led the Harriers to a second-place finish.

The Tigers are the defending CSIC champions, while the women finished second to front runner Kearney State College in CSIC action last year.

The Tigers regained the conference crown after relinquishing the title to Pittsburg State University in 1979.

The men captured 16 CSIC titles, finished second 14 times, placed third three times and ended with a fourth-place effort once during former Coach Alex Francis' 34-year career.

Dempsey is replacing former Coach Nancy Popp.

New outdoor school records were set last year by Kim Stewart in the pole vault at 16'3/4"; Tigerettes Gina Youngblood in the high jump and javelin with efforts of 5'2" and 132'1 1/2" respectively; Cindy Hullman in the long jump at 17'8 1/4" and Susan Lala in the 100-meter hurdles in a time of 15.6 seconds.

The team is in good shape for tomorrow's quadrangular. Fisher said.

"We worked very hard before break and everybody came back in pretty good shape after spring break," Fisher said. "We should be in good shape for the meet."

Softball, baseball teams struggle in early season contests

Youth hinders performances

by Mike House
Sports Writer

To say that the women's softball team is young is an understatement. A half-dozen freshmen, shuffled in with only four returning players, make for what may normally be described as a young squad.

Inexperience has taken its toll on the Tigerettes, as the women have dropped their first six contests of the early softball season.

The Tigerettes' latest unsuccessful outing came Tuesday afternoon against Central States Intercollegiate Conference rival Washburn University. The Ichabods won the twinbill by scores of 8-0 and 13-3.

Leading the Black and Gold squad in the hitting department against Washburn were Cathy Roblyer and Connie Gandy. Roblyer went five for five from the plate, while Gandy connected on three hits in five attempts.

Taking the loss from the pitcher's mound was Roblyer in the first game and Rita Tomanek in the second.

"There are things that are going to happen this early in the season," Coach Jody Wise said. "However, I believe we have improved a lot since our first games."

Last weekend, the women lost two doubleheaders to Salina foes Kansas Wesleyan University and Marymount College. The Tigerettes lost to Wesleyan, 9-7 and 13-9, on Friday and dropped 11-5 and 11-9 decisions to Marymount on Saturday.

"I thought we played fairly well for so early in the season," Wise said. "Both teams we faced had already played six games."

The Tigerettes outthrew their Salina opponents, but fielding miscues hurt their chances. "We had a few errors, but that will happen this early in the season," Wise said.

Tigerette softballers will be looking for their first win of the season tomorrow as they take on the Wichita State University Shockers in Wichita. That doubleheader will get underway at 2:00 p.m.

With a young team and last year's record of 1-19 starting Wise in the face, she would seem to have every reason to be discouraged. However, Wise is optimistic about the future of Fort Hays State softball. "With this many freshmen and sophomores, there is nowhere to go but up."

Screwball

Rita Tomanek pitches a strike against Washburn University Tuesday at the Babe Ruth park. The Tigerettes were defeated in the doubleheader, 8-0 and 13-3.

Tigers fall to Kansas State

by Stacy Friend
Sports Writer

The Tiger baseball team's record dropped to 3-7 after a two-day bout against Kansas State University.

Safe

Curt Peirano returns safely to first base after an unsuccessful steal attempt against the Colorado University Buffaloes last weekend. The Tigers split the set of doubleheaders

The first game Monday went eight innings, with Kansas State coming out on top, 12-11. Fort Hays State was in the contest until a slip occurred on a backup play and Kansas State's runner scored to win the game.

The leaders at the plate were Curt Peirano, who went three for five with a triple and two RBIs, and Curt Stremel, who had a triple and a home run. Kevin Cox pitched for FHS.

In the second game of the afternoon, the Tigers lost, 9-3. "We did not have much motivation left after losing so closely in extra innings in the first game," Coach Vern Henricks said.

Stremel, Tim Thayer and Randy Shorb had a hit each for the FHS offensive attempt as the Wildcats racked up nine hits. John Holub took the loss on the mound.

Henricks summed up the problems when he said, "Our problem is inexperience with a capital I. Kansas State has played 20 more games. We're just one or two mistakes away from two or three more wins. With all our young guys, we have to play well and get some games under our belts."

Kansas State took the doubleheader on Tuesday, also. The first game went five innings, with FHS losing, 13-3.

Gary Rogers started the game and was relieved in the fourth by Gary Warren. The Tigers once again had only three hits, as KSU tallied 14.

In the last contest FHS improved its performance at the plate, but still fell short, 9-5.

The Tigers had nine hits, with Thayer going three for four and Neil Schmidt two for three. "We hit well that game. We just could not get enough hits at the same time," Shorb said.

"We found out a lot about our team at Kansas State," Henricks said. "We are starting on a regular basis, six underclassmen. It's not because we don't have anyone else, they are very capable players."

The Tigers are not preparing for this weekend. They are hosting Benedictine College tomorrow and Washburn University Sunday. Both games will be played at 1:30 p.m. at Lark's Park.

"We need to regroup. Now we're playing against someone on our level. It's very important that we come out here and play well this weekend for our confidence and team morale," Henricks said.
