ComputerLand®

Business to Business
Person to Person

In order to be productive in today's office, you usually have a computer running expensive productivity software. When you spend that much money on software, you should be able to get the most out of it. To often software users are not getting the full benefit of the packages they are operating.

That's where ComputerLand comes in. ComputerLand offers training in the most popular productivity software available. Whether you are an accomplished user wanting advanced training in Microsoft Word, or a beginner wanting to learn the ins and outs of Windows 95, there is a class for you. Stop in or call ComputerLand and request the current calendar of classes, and we will be happy to mail one to you.

In addition to a competent software support staff, ComputerLand also offers support from four service technicians, four network engineers, and three customer representatives to offer you almost any computer solution you are in need of.
