Media checks and balances on the government are necessary. The media, however, can go overboard and uncover vital governmental secrets, endangering the public. A Summer Review editorial examines the issue.

Sundowner series comes to a close

By Kathy Kirkman

Folk singer Janet McLaughlin was the performer for this summer's final Memorial Union Activities Board Sundowner series.

I.B. Dent, director of student activities, said approximately 150 people attended the performance.

"People come if they know the name, but they don't come if they don't know the name," Dent said. "Discouraging' is the word for it."

This summer, MUAB presented two performances, Mark Selby and McLaughlin. Dent said the attendance has improved enough over the past two summers that MUAB hopes to present two or three shows next summer.

The concerts were located out-side, north of Custer Hall. Dent said that refreshments were sold, also.

"People just come out, spread out a blanket and have a nice picnic," he said.

Dent said the audience varies somewhat during the summer.

"We have a core base of regulars, then the rest are all kinds of people," he said.

McLaughlin, Nashville, has been touring the college circuit for approximately half a year, Dent said.

"I'd say that she has some nice Nashville connections," Dent said. "I think it's a name you will recognize, eventually."

Kirkman, a sophomore from Hays, is a contributing writer for the Summer Review.

Folk singer Janet McLaughlin entertained a small crowd Wednesday at MUABs Sundowner series.

• CPS -- In its last ruling of this session, the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the actions of a high school principal who has suspended a student for using "vulgar and lewd language."

Schools, Chief Justice Warren Burger wrote, "may determine that the essential lessons of civil, mature conduct cannot be conferred in a school that tolerates lewd, indecent or offensive speech and conduct."

Observers say the ruling could help fuel a new round of disciplinary regulations, which in recent years have been applied in colleges at the fastest rate since the '50s.

Most of the new college regulations aim to comply with new drinking age laws and make it easier to get campus liability insurance.

• CPS -- A Ford Foundation study of the feasibility of a National Service system -- in which all youths would have to serve the country in military or some other capacity -- concluded last week that some proposed programs would violate constitutional prohibitions of involuntary servitude.

Requiring high school students to perform some 240 hours of public service work before graduation is probably the most workable plan, the study said.

But researchers suggested trying the proposal out on a local, experimental basis before making it federal law.

• CPS -- Hoping to attract more minority students, Virginia Tech guaranteed admission in 1990 to 30 seventh graders, provided they maintain a C+ average in high school.

Campus officials said they would tutor the students if they needed it.

Wichita State University in April announced a similar 1990 admissions program, aimed at good students who ordinarily might not stay in school after high school.

MUAB plans full schedule

By Lori Sharp

The Memorial Union Activities Board and the Special Events Committee are planning a full schedule of events for the up-coming school year.

I.B. Dent, director of student activities said a number of entertainers, a week-long event and two Encore Series presentations are scheduled for the first half of the fall 1986 semester.

The third annual Blue Jean Week, a week-long event, will kick off Sept. 14, with guitarist Dave Wopat, brother of former Dukes of Hazzard star Tom Wopat, in a Sundowner concert in the Sunset Lounge. Wopat will also perform Sept. 15 in the Gallery Series in Stouffer Lounge.

Dent said other Blue Jean Week events will include a games night in the recreation area, a comedy night and a noon-time fashion show in the cafeteria.

The week's events will conclude with an Encore Series performance of Robin and Linda Williams along with Mike Cross in the old Hays High School Auditorium.

Dent said the folk/country/pop concert will be "excellent, high energy and fulfilled." Robin and Linda Williams are known for their performances on A Prairie Home Companion show, which is broadcast each Saturday on the American Radio Network. Following his performance in Hays, Mike Cross will be featured in the Winfield Festival.

The Spotlight Series will feature Michael Johnson Sept. 28. Johnson is known for his Top-40 hits Bluer Than Blue and This Night Won't Last Forever. He is presently making his way up the country charts with Gotta Learn to Learn to Love Without You.

The Alpha Omega Players from Dallas, who performed at Fort Hays State last year, will present The Owl and the Theater department announces 4 shows

By Donna Tucker

They're calling it "The Great American Season."

The Fort Hays State theater department has announced four theater productions for the 1986-87 school year.

The season will begin in October with the musical, Working. Based on the book of interviews with working Americans by Studs Terkel, Working includes music and lyrics by Stephen Swartz, James Taylor and many others.

"Southwestern Bell has donated $1,500 to support the musical and is giving away 50 tickets to senior citizens," Stephen Shapiro, assistant professor of communication, said. "In an attempt to broaden cultural awareness, Southwestern Bell is promoting the arts statewide in this manner."

The second production of the first semester will be Play It Again, Sam, a Bogartian spoof by Woody Allen. "This is a typical, very funny, Woody Allen farce dealing with the dating dollars. As a beer commercial on a local British radio station tells it: "Miller Lite is the only thing coming over from America." In an effort to increase overseas travel, some airlines are offering reduced rates and special travel packages.

Airline security measures on international flights have been added to regenerate confidence in European travel. These security measures cost passengers a $10 surcharge and require more time to board flights. They seem to be accepted by most travelers.

Travel agents report that Americans are still traveling in great numbers, even if they are not going to Europe this year. Hawaii and Alaska are two popular destinations. The World's Fair, in Vancouver, British Columbia, is also a favored choice among local travelers.

The season will conclude with True West, by Sam Shepard. True West is a play by one of America's most interesting and prolific playwrights," Shapiro said.

Non-Traditionals to enroll at leisure

Non-traditional students will have the opportunity to enroll for the fall semester at their leisure.

The Office of Student Affairs will enroll non-traditional students Aug. 4-8 to allow students to take care of all the details of enrolling at one time.

"This is actually a 'one-stop' enrollment for the students," Bill Jellison, vice-president for student affairs, said. "During that week, students may stop by the Student Affairs Office in Picken Hall, and speak with an adviser, set up their schedule, pay fees and obtain permits and ID cards," he said.

Students may enroll during office hours or make a special evening appointment by calling ahead.

'Goodbye, farewell and amen' to FHSU

By Terry Gaston

I have heard it said that if it does not hurt to give up or leave something, then it is not worth giving up.

That is a proverb I thought I would never use to describe the past 13 months of my life, but it seems to be the most fitting one at this time.

It all started in April 1984, when my father was transferred to Hays from Pratt. Between my parents and myself, we decided it would be unfair to move just prior my senior year in high school.

So, my dad spent the next 14 months commuting to Hays on Monday, working his territory and returning home Thursday evening.

Meanwhile, I had my heart set on pursuing my journalism degree at Oklahoma Baptist University -- a school with an enrollment of 1,600 in Shawnee, Okla., which is about 30 miles east of Oklahoma City.

However, my parents had other ideas about sending their third and youngest son to an expensive, private university. So, they devised a plan to make all three of us happy.

"Terry," they suggested, "if you'll go to Fort Hays State for the first year, then we'll let you go to OBU."

Although I would have rather started at OBU, it sounded like a fair idea.

Commentary

But I never imagined I would actually like a place where I had no desire of continuing my education.

I arrived in Hays on June 28, 1985, and was ready to begin counting the days until I left for Oklahoma.

"Well," I said to myself, "I'm stuck here for about 14 months, so I guess I'll just make the best of it."

After a few days in town, I decided to check out The Hays Daily News to see if the sports editor was available. He was on vacation, so I talked to Doug Weller, the Daily News Sunday editor. (I knew Doug when he was the news editor in Pratt when I delivered the Pratt Tribune.) He said he would give the sports editor my name and told me to come back the following week.

I returned to the office the next week. I introduced myself to Rod Gardner and explained that I had talked to Doug earlier about a possible position with the sports staff.

I showed him some of my clips from high school. I will never forget his response: "Man, I didn't write this good when I was in high school."

I was amazed. I was willing to take phone calls on Friday football nights, but Rod had other ideas. In fact, he sent me out the first week to cover the Victoria-Ellis football game in Ellis.

You are probably saying, "Big deal," right? It was for an 18-year-old who was willing to sit around the office on Friday and take scores over the phone from Grinnell or Palco. I was hoping Rod would let me cover an eight-man game by the end of the season, but this was beyond my expectations.

My stint with the Hays Daily has sent me from Utica to Wichita, and from a long trip to Liberal to the Class 4A state basketball championship in Salina.

My career with the University

Leader began last October, when I submitted a story on the FHSU athletic department's $70,000 debt. Believe me, I was surprised to find my story on the front page of the Leader one Tuesday morning.

I was then given the opportunity to be the assistant sports editor this past spring. It often brought times of nail-biting and frustration, but I guess that just goes with the territory of being a student-journalist.

But while I do have my regrets about leaving these opportunities, I have some bitter frustrations which I will be happy to leave behind.

First, when I began school at FHSU last August, getting a college education seemed to be the last thing on many students' minds.

All these students seemed to be worried about was the new restriction on drinking alcohol on campus. This highly disturbed me, especially since I know there are young people out there who have the intelligence to attend college, but they just do not have the money to get a higher education.

Second, my most bitter moment at FHSU came this past semester when I took a case to the academic appeals committee.

For those of you who are unaware of the group, this committee gives students who can prove a need to add a class after the 20th day of classes to do so.

When I enrolled for the spring semester last November, the Leader staff was not yet selected. Leader staff members have the option of taking newspaper laboratory, Leader lab, for one or two hours' credit.

Since I was not yet a staff member at the time of enrollment, I enrolled in Leader lab for one hour's credit. I thought the change from one to two hours would be made after my application was accepted.

When I picked up my mid-term grades in March, I discovered that I was enrolled in the one-hour section, when I wanted the two-hours credit.

My academic and Leader adviser, Ron Johnson, told me of the academic appeals committee, and he thought we had a reasonable case to present.

Ron and I filled out the necessary forms, and I received the committee's response about three weeks later.

Much to our surprise, the committee denied my request. Even worse was its explanation for the denial of my request: "The last day to add a class is the 20th day of classes."

I thought that was the reason for the academic appeals committee, although I think I will survive without the added hour of credit. But considering I was willing to pay the necessary costs for the additional hour of credit -- especially since I had done the necessary work for the two hours' credit -- I found that to be a poor reason for denial.

Besides these two exceptions, I have enjoyed my one-year stint at FHSU, and I have been told that I would be welcome back if I ever ran into problems at OBU.

My dad said a few weeks ago that he wished he had not moved me up here. But this has been a good year, and I feel like I am better prepared to attend OBU than if I had begun there last fall. So in closing, I would like to quote the title of the final episode of "M*A*S*H," which aired on Feb. 28, 1983: "Goodbye, farewell and amen."

Gaston, a sophomore from Pratt, is a part-time sports writer for The Hays Daily News and also serves as an associate editor of the Summer Review.

"The maintenance people -- the carpenters, the painters -- everyone has done a tremendous job in a short time," he said. "And I know the movers will do a fine job as they did last time."

This is not the first time the Registrar's Office has moved. "About four years ago, we moved to the arena floor for about six weeks while our office was being remodeled," Kellerman said.

Kellerman said the space in the new office should be adequate to serve students. "The only problem we can see now is that we will not have the use of the arena floor for second semester registration. We still have the mechanics to work out, but we will get the job done."
