Search committee seeks student input

By KRISTY LOVE and CARL PETZ
Staff Writers

Student Senate President Kevin Amack announced at the Student Government meeting last night that applications for the student representative seat on the presidential search committee are now being taken.

The committee, made up of students, faculty members, alumni, and administrators, reviews applications for university president and makes nominations to the Kansas Board of Regents.

Amack said that he currently has three applicants for the position but is encouraging more.

"It's very prestigious for a student to be on the committee," Amack said. The committee's decisions can have a great impact on the university, he said.

In other business, five new senators were ratified. They are: Jay Befort, Hays senior, at large; Curtis Pahls, Tipton senior, education; Ted Bannister, Hays freshman, and David Anne Brewer, Dodge City junior, general studies; and Lola Winder, Waldo senior, nursing.

Three bills from the appropriations committee were introduced. The Society for Collegiate Journalists has requested $813.96 to attend a national convention in Washington, D.C. Sigma Alpha Iota requested a reimbursement of $88.84 for costs of attending their Province Day at Emporia. The Collegiate Music Education National Conference is also requesting a reimbursement of $32.95 for sending one delegate to their annual conference.

Those appropriations will be up for approval at the next SGA meeting.

Renew program offered for spiritual growth

A new program that will begin this fall in the Salina Diocese is Renew. The Catholic Campus Center is now in its final planning stages for the Renew program.

Renew is a spiritual Renewal process designed to help people develop a closer relationship with Christ. It is more than Renewal of individual persons. It is a parish renewal that creates a spiritual climate throughout the parish community. Renew invites the total parish, including inactive members to participate.

Unlike some Renewal efforts, Renew is not a brief, intensive weekend experience or retreat. Renew pursues a gradual process of conversion to allow people to internalize their experience and deepen the impact after the structured process has ended.

"Renew is not a Bible study or a theology class. It is a chance for people to get together and share their own experiences of living as Catholics," the Rev. Vincent Rohr, campus minister at the Center said.

The two and a half year full parish experience is divided into five six-week sessions, one season per semester, with each season revolving around a particular theme.

The first season of Renew begins Oct. 12 with the theme "The Lord's Call."

"Various parts of the liturgy such as the homily, the atmosphere created by music, the artwork, and the symbols express the theme in an integrated, vital way," Rohr said.

"Renew is truly a process of basic spiritual formation which calls for continued growth," Jeanette Pianalto, lay campus minister at the Center said, "but the most exciting aspect of Renew is that you can feel the enthusiasm of students as well as faculty of this community as they celebrate Sunday liturgy and work together on various committees."

Both Rohr and Pianalto are very excited that many students as well as other parishioners are getting involved in Renew.

"We are grateful for the cooperation and help of those involved and we extend an invitation to anyone who may be interested in participating in the program," Pianalto said.

Economy still affected by Travenol closing

By JANE COSTIGAN
Staff Writer

Travenol's closing had a big impact on the Hays economy. Now the search is on for a replacement company.

In April, the last Travenol workers left the building. Baxter Travenol is still maintaining the building by keeping the boiler going and doing maintenance, Ken Carter, Hays city manager, said.

"The financial impact on Hays by Travenol based on selected 1982 data was $18,000,389. The direct impact in wages and salaries for employees living in Hays was $6,980,400. The indirect impact in value of expenditures by Travenol and all employers was $11,019,989," Jim DeMarco, Ellis County Director of Development, said.

Fort Hays State students probably feel the most impact in the lessened job availability especially during the summer. It is becoming very important for the area to create new jobs to retain people, DeMarco said.

Most federal aid programs will not help the Travenol situation. Puerto Rico is probably our worst competitor right now. The federal government set up a program of tax incentives to help Puerto Rico's poor economy and per capita income to keep the people from migrating, DeMarco said.

"The financial impact on Hays by Travenol based on selected 1982 data was $18,000,389."

--Jim DeMarco

"Perhaps the time has come when all the advantages (Puerto Rico) has are disadvantages to other states, especially rural states," DeMarco said.

"I call most (federal programs) 'casket cases.' You have to be dead, and they try to revive you rather than preventing death," DeMarco said.

The search for a replacement company is not an easy task. Once a company shows interest the next step is to "continue to encourage their further interest in the property by telephone and personal visit if this should become appropriate," Dick Compton, chairman of the Travenol Replacement Committee, said.

One company is looking for a building 200,000 to 500,000 square feet. There were 160 buildings in eight states that met their requirements. That is a very high amount of competition, Carter said.

"A major problem with the building is the ceiling height. Some of the companies need a 20 to 28 feet ceiling height. Travenol has a 12 to 14 feet clearance. That's a major drawback. It limits the type of company," Carter said.

The Travenol building is currently being promoted in several ways. "We currently have an industrial real estate agent that is in contact with many firms throughout the nation on a regular basis," Compton said. "Through the cooperation of the staffs and personnel at Midwest Energy, Jim DeMarco's office, Senator Dole's office, and the city, we have made numerous mailings to target groups throughout the country."

"We have prepared an advertisement that is currently running in President magazine which has a circulation of approximately 300,000 in Japan," Compton said.

"It's hard to say (when the Travenol building will sell) for many reasons," Compton said. "The community needs to be prepared for the worst, four or five years, and pray for the best."

Concert announced

Starship booked for fall concert; ticket sales to begin Oct. 1

By LISHA BARKOW
Staff Writer

The Memorial Union Activities Board has announced Starship as the headlining band for the 1986 fall concert on Saturday, Oct. 25. Tickets will go on sale Wednesday, Oct. 1 at the Memorial Union for $11, $12, and $13 to the general public and $9, $10, and $11 for students. Students will be receiving a $2 discount, instead of a $1 discount as in the past.

An opening act for the concert has not yet been named.

"We haven't got a contract as of yet," I.B. Dent, director of student activities, said. "We talked to the band yesterday (Wednesday) and the contract was in the mail last night."

According to Rolling Stone's History of Rock and Roll, Starship, originally the Jefferson Airplane, a band out of San Francisco, has been recording since 1965 when they became the first band from the Haight-Ashbury district to sign a recording contract with a major record label.

The six-member band of 1965 has since undergone two name changes. From The Jefferson Airplane to Jefferson Starship. The last name change, from Jefferson Starship to just Starship, came at the same time of the release of their latest album, Knee Deep in the Hoopla.

The band has also made several changes in band members. The band now has five members, none of which were in the original band of Jefferson Airplane.

Starship is now put together by Grace Slick, who is the only woman in the band and has been in the band the longest. Micky Thomas, formerly of Elvin Bishop's band, is the lead singer, Craig Chaquico, is guitarist, Pete Sears, is bass player, and Danny Baldwin plays the drums.

The band performs songs from the early days, such as White Rabbit and Don't You Want Somebody to Love as well as newer songs from recent albums, including tunes from the Nuclear Furniture album and current hits like Sara and We Built This City.

Stage crew and security people are needed for the concert. Those interested can apply at the MUAB office until noon Monday, Oct. 6.

Bands range in price for MUAB concerts

By ANNETTE TERRY
Staff Writer

Each year the Memorial Union Activities Board brings at least two well-known bands to the Fort Hays State campus. The average cost for one of these performances is $50,000.

I.B. Dent, director of student activities, said MUAB spends anywhere from $25,000 to $70,000 on a major concert. He said the bigger the band the more money spent.

"(MUAB) spent $100,000 on the band Alabama, but they are a pretty big name band," Dent said.

Depending on the flat fee of a band, ranging from $7,000 to $40,000, is a clue to how much money MUAB is going to have to spend. Dent said that the flat fee does not include lighting or sound.

MUAB spends $4,000 to $12,000 on lights and sound equipment, depending on how big the band is. Dent said that the bigger bands have their own lighting and sound systems, therefore MUAB does not have to rent separate systems. They do have to pay an additional fee to the band, however, for supplying their own equipment.

Dent said that if the band wants lights from the ceiling, then MUAB has to hire people who will climb up into the rafters and hang them. He said that this can be quite an additional fee.

After the band, the lighting, and the sound system has been paid for, MUAB then has to hire security and ushers. In the past MUAB has hired ushers and security people, but this year they are going to try something new.

"(MUAB) is going to have the ushers be security and security be the ushers, that way they will all be one," Dent said. "It will cost as more, but I think it will work well."

MUAB spends $12,000 to $15,000 on extra expenses. This includes the students hired to be stage-hands, ushers, security, advertising, and food for backstage.

"And naturally the bigger the band the higher the cost will be," Dent said.

Dent said MUAB usually makes a profit, but there has been some concerts where they have lost. MUAB tries to clear at least $1,000 each major performance.

"When Alabama performed, (MUAB) took in $120,000," Dent said. "We had never had a name that big (at FHSU) and we took in the most money."

Another main concern MUAB has when they bring in a "big name band" is the cost for the audience. Dent said this year the student discount will be raised to two dollars, as opposed to the passed discount of only one dollar.

"MUAB just definitely tries to keep tickets as low as possible, especially for students and even community," Dent said. "You can't find prices lower than what we offer here."

Musical ensembles help celebrate festival

By BETTINA HEINZ
Staff Writer

Once again Bonner Springs is turning back the wheel of time. It's the 10th anniversary of the Renaissance Festival.

The festival started on Sept. 6 and will last until Oct. 19. It is only open on weekends, and it extends over an area of 60 acres. It is located adjacent to the Agriculture Hall of Fame. Visitors coming east on I-70 should take the Bonner Springs exit.

"We expect about 150,000 visitors this year, that would be a little more than in previous years," Debbie Gray, populace relations for the Renaissance Festival, said.

Both the Fort Hays State Singers and the Recorder Ensemble are participating in the festival Saturday.

"It is a lot of fun. The guests really enjoy the performance of the Fort Hays State groups," Gray said.

The festival features an authentic reproduction of a 16th century harvest village. All 3,000 participants celebrate a successful harvest and the visit of King Henry VIII and Queen Anne.

The 3,000 participants, who are all dressed in authentic costumes, comprise 2,500 actors and entertainers and 500 artisans.

Turkey legs, apple fritters, corn on the cob, and stir-fry are part of the festival as well. Fifty food shops offer a variety of foods.

The craft shops are replicas of the building from the 16th century. Everything the crafts people sell is handmade, from pottery to clothing, from jewelry to toys and paintings.

Craft demonstrations show the trades of the time, including a blacksmith, weaving, and glass-blowing.

Participants are both professionals and volunteers. Most of them participated in the Renaissance summer school, learned the English of the time, studied their customs and costumes.

The Fort Hays State Singers who call themselves "Fort Hays State Renaissance Singers" at the festival are performing for the fourth time.

"We will be performing five or six times Saturday at different locations. It's a lot of fun. I'm looking forward to going down there," Donald Stout, Fort Hays State Singers adviser, said.

The group will perform madrigals, Renaissance love songs that are either gently sad or humorous. Madrigals were usually sung after dinner and the Singers try to create an equally informal atmosphere in their performance.

For the first time, the Recorder Ensemble will participate in the festival also.

"Of course I had heard a lot and only good things about the festival, so I contacted them and they sent us an application," Gary Ritcher, Recorder Ensemble adviser, said.

The ensemble consists of two soprano, two alto, and two tenor recorders.

"Four out of our six members have performed with the ensemble last spring, so we have a pretty good group," Ritcher said.

As the group has been performing at the annual Madrigal Dinner, they already have Renaissance costumes and are used to performing in that setting.

The Singers and the Recorder Ensemble will not perform together. "We might run into each other, but we are scheduled to perform separately at different locations," Ritcher said.

This weekend is the Wizard Weekend, including a Lord Lionfire Look-Alike Contest.

"Lord Lionfire is the King of Wizards. He is a fictitious character. We picture him as having a long robe, long white hair, and a lot of paint in his face. Everyone can enter the contest," Gray said.

Admission to the Renaissance Festival is $7.95 for adults and $3.25 for children from 5 to 12. The fee includes parking.

Sheridan campaign continues

A campaign to raise $2 million to renovate Sheridan Coliseum into a performing arts hall and student service center began 18 months ago.

To date, $1,421 million dollars has been raised, leaving $579,000 to go.

In 1973, the Physical Development Planning Workgroup noted, "(Sheridan Coliseum) would be expensive to remodel; it presently occupies a good building site; for these reasons serious considerations should be given for removal."

Demolition was suggested for 1979.

In 1978 the notes read, "This building is still in while functional replacement is being constructed. The historic value of this building requires a re-evaluation of the desirability of removing this structure."

By 1983, Fort Hays State, the Kansas Board of Regents, and the state legislature prepared a $6 million plan to renovate and restore Sheridan Coliseum.

Gutting of the building will begin around the first of the year. Completion date is now set for 1990.

Sheridan Coliseum holds a great history. Funded by a legislative appropriation in 1915 and named after Gen. Philip Sheridan, it hosted many great events. The first grand opera ever presented in Western Kansas was held in Sheridan, along with nationally acclaimed music festivals. Sheridan also served as the intercollegiate basketball arena, classroom facility, civic auditorium, livestock arena and the home for many other activities.

The state of Kansas issued a challenge. If the fundraising group can secure contributions for one-third of the cost then the state will underwrite the other two-thirds. Kansas will provide $4 million if FHSU can meet them with $2 million.

FHSU has raised 71 percent of the needed amount. The other 29 percent has yet to be raised.

Contributions have come from 800 alumni and friends. Approximately 26,200 alumni remain. If each alumnus gave a donation of $21.30 the total would be met.

"We are going to try awfully hard to complete the (Sheridan Campaign) this year," Ronald Pflughof, vice president of university development and relations, said.

"Considering the fact of the closing of Travenol and the depressed economy the fund raising has moved on," Pflughof said. "Interesting things happen. One lady sent us her social security check."

Disaster was avoidable

The latest news concerning the investigation of the space shuttle Challenger explosion is that previous to the disaster on Jan. 28, NASA had a new design on hand to improve the faulty booster rocket seals which caused the tragedy.

In fact, NASA had the plans for the improved booster rocket seals as far back as 1981.

It turns out that the improvement is identical to the one proposed six months after the Challenger explosion. When NASA knew that the seals were faulty, why didn't it put the 1981 plan to work back then instead of waiting until a disaster five years later?

It is obvious if NASA recognized that there was a problem with the rocket booster seals back in 1981, that the space agency knew the problem was worse than it had let on. Why did NASA keep so quiet for those five years that the seals needed to be redesigned?

One would think that they surely would have realized that the shuttle program would be in jeopardy if the faulty seals were not improved.

Experts around the country are saying that the redesign of the rocket booster seals -- a metal tab to insure that hot gas will not leak through the seals -- will take care of the problem. However, they are also saying the redesign plan should have been utilized sooner -- five years ago. That, they say, could have saved the lives of Challenger's seven crewmembers.

When cautious, conservative space exploration should have been the approach taken by the space agency, NASA was under heavy pressure not to put delays on many of their launches in order to meet strict launch schedules.

It is imperative that NASA shift its priorities around and bring safety of the missions back to the top of the list where it belongs.

With more and more evidence coming to the surface that NASA was a bit reckless when it came to the launch of ill-fated Challenger and also Columbia's launch before that -- where it was discovered just seconds before launch that fuel had leaked out of one of the huge tanks -- NASA has to be more careful. The space shuttle program would not be able to withstand another tragedy.

If NASA makes a mistake on a future mission, they just might not get a second chance.

Alumni Association serves students well

As a soon-to-be alumnus, I would like to tell other seniors who will be graduating about a wonderful place on campus designed especially for us: the Fort Hays State Alumni Association, located across from Picken in the Alumni-Endowment Building.

The Alumni Association, with Jan Johansen as acting executive director, Ruth Ann Gould as assistant director, and Melinda Keim, office manager, is responsible for a number of services.

First of all, the department must keep track of 25,650 FHSU alumni, an accumulation of over 80 years of graduates. Contacting parents and friends, former instructors and searching through paper files and former student files are just a few of the ways the office keeps in touch with graduates.

So far in 1986, the Alumni Association has made 12,000 address changes. Obviously, FHSU grads are very mobile people!

The association also keeps paper files of every graduate of FHSU. Each week it is the responsibility of one of the office helpers to collect all of the area newspapers from the Office of University Relations and search through each and every one, hoping to find news about graduates. These articles are placed in the paper files. Marriage and birth announcements, along with obituaries, are saved for the next Alumni News.

At this time, the office is in the process of completely re-organizing and updating the paper files, a task that will take approximately two years.

As an important public relations arm of the university, the Alumni Association, along with the Office of University Relations, publishes the Alumni News four times a year. Members of the association receive the Alumni News throughout the year, while all graduates are recipients of one Alumni News per year: Tiger Tales, the Homecoming special edition.

Included in the Alumni News are articles about the campus community, the campus itself, faculty profiles, and tidbits about FHSU alumni.

One of the biggest responsibilities of the Alumni Association is Homecoming.

Each year, the association organizes activities and events for honored classes to help celebrate their reunions. Honored classes at Homecoming this year include the Half-Century Club (an organization of those who graduated from FHSU 50 or more years ago), and classes of 1946, 1956, 1961, 1966, and 1976. The association sponsors events such as the Homecoming Mixer and the Alumni-Endowment Awards Banquet.

The Alumni Association also sponsors the Student Alumni Association, a club organized to promote Fort Hays State and provide an opportunity for students to get involved in the university, both now and when they graduate. Tammie Fields is the 1986-87 president of SAA. Each year SAA distributes care packages, bought by parents of current students, around Valentine's Day. SAA also co-sponsored last year's Tribedoozeatugathon, a combination of mud volleyball, bed races, and fun.

Toward the end of the year, the Alumni Association has the monumental responsibility of the graduate luncheon, a banquet honoring seniors and the Torch and Pilot Award winners. Sadly, this is often the first and last time that students have any contact with the association.

As a student at FHSU, you should take advantage of some of the services that the association has to offer. If your parents, grandparents, or even great-grandparents graduated from this school, chances are that the office has a paper file on them -- maybe including your birth announcement.

Become familiar with the Alumni Association before you graduate, get out on your own, and forget about your alma mater!

Column misses points

Dear Editor,

After much sober deliberation, I am responding to some of the points raised by Bryon Cannon in three recent Leader editorials (Aug. 26, Sept. 9, Sept. 16).

The editorial of Sept. 9 proceeds from the premise that a university is a retailer of services (education) and the students are customers who purchase these services.

Given such a system, Bryon concludes that the student-customer "...has the right to choose what extent he will partake of those services..." without fear of being penalized for skipping classes.

However, his argument fails to consider any rights held by, or obligations owed to, another component of the system: the shareholders (taxpayers), who supply about 77 percent of the cost of education at Fort Hays State.

In view of the fact that Bryon realizes that the cost of education is subsidized in tax monies (last sentence in Aug. 26 editorial), it is puzzling why he forgot to put the taxpayer in his entrepreneurial analog.

If the right to choose whether classes are attended or not is held by those who pay for the educational services, then the student-customer can make that decision for no more than 23 percent of his classes.

In order to skip any of the other 77 percent of the classes, shouldn't the student be obliged to obtain permission to do so from the taxpayer?

Certainly there is a strong correlation between missing classes and the latter. Failing grades are earned by those who do not complete classes and/or exams satisfactorily. In my experience, which I believe is not substantially different from FHSU, the primary factor for substandard scholastic performance is excessive absenteeism.

I do not deny that some students can pass courses without attending classes regularly; conversely, others may fail even though they never miss class.

Generally, faithful attendance alone will not guarantee a passing grade, but few can succeed (in any endeavor) without it.

Bryon cited a report published in Science Digest, in which the results of a survey indicate that med students who skip 80 percent of their classes performed nearly as well scholastically as those who attended regularly.

As soon as Bryon reveals the precise source of the report, I intend to read it and may have some comments later.

For the moment, I can only offer a sentiment similar to one that was expressed after Charles Darwin published his revolutionary ideas about organic evolution in the mid-19th Century. Under the mistaken impression that Darwin believed humans to be descended directly from apes, a member of upper class English society reportedly remarked, "Let us hope it isn't true; but if it is, let us hope it doesn't become generally known."

Sincerely,

John R. Razlaff
Associate Professor of Earth Sciences

The bleary-eyed raiders of a lost cause

There is a perfectly good reason why about 400 girls attended class with bleary eyes on Wednesday.

It has something to do with the attempted panty raid on McMinder Hall Tuesday night.

I say attempted because no one actually got raided; at least not on fifth floor, where I live. However, I understand that there was plenty of excitement on some of the lower floors.

It all got started at about midnight. A girl from second floor called up to tell us that there was a panty raid going on downstairs. She became our chief informant, due to the fact that she could see and hear everything that went on.

In our hall handbooks, it lists direct instructions for what to do in a panty raid: stay in our rooms with our doors locked. I doubt that there was a moment all night when all the girls on my floor were in their rooms at the same time, let alone everyone in the whole dorm waiting behind locked doors.

The second call that came up from downstairs reported that a window had been broken out. The report was later changed to a bottle being broken on the sidewalk.

The next call concerned the campus security chasing about a dozen guys across the back parking lot. According to another girl on my floor, the cops apparently got confused when someone in a car left the parking lot. The raiders, who were on foot, tried to take the opportunity to escape.

Most of the girls turned in after hearing that the excitement was over. However, more was in store later that evening.

Everyone had just settled down again when we got another call. Supposedly there were guys crawling on the window ledges on the backside of McMinder. Our informant said that security was checking over the back wall, looking for the raiders.

I wonder if this is where the second part of our handbook's rules for panty raids comes in. It says that under no circumstances are we to remove the screens from our windows during a raid. I, for one, was expecting to see boys crawling along the ledge of my fifth story window at any moment, and I'm sure that if I had I would have ripped the screens off immediately.

I decided that the chances of my floor seeing any of the action for the rest of the night were slim, so I went to sleep. However, there was another, more serious incident later on.

Someone vandalized a car in the McMinder parking lot. According to University police chief Donald Brown, campus security was at Wiest Hall questioning the alleged panty raiders when the incident occurred. He acknowledged that there was some vandalism but said that the two incidents were not necessarily related.

Wednesday morning there were several rumors going around about what really happened Tuesday night. One story was that there was an actual panty raid as far up as the fourth floor. Another said that a group of girls let the raiders into McMinder Hall for the event. Whatever really happened, nearly everyone on campus had some version of the story to tell by noon Wednesday.

I have no idea when the first panty raid occurred on this campus, or even when the most recent one took place. I have heard that there was some media coverage on a raid at Wiest Hall a few years back. Maybe that will be the next excitement.

I don't know if it will be of any help to the hall directors or the university police, but I imagine that several of the teachers on campus could be of help identifying the Raiders of the Lost Cause. They were the dozen or so bleary-eyed guys in classes on Wednesday morning.

U.S. intent on taking on 'Darth' Gorbachev

Are the actions of the United States toward the Soviet Union based on sound and tempered judgment of the circumstances? Or are they founded on an overly reactionary stance toward the U.S./USSR? With the Daniloff-Zakharov spying incident and exchanged accusations and denials, this becomes a pertinent issue (actually, it always is).

Consider the spying matter. The government wants Daniloff to be allowed to leave the Soviet Union; otherwise, there may be no summit meeting between the two countries. Is this a valid response? It places the very vital matter of arms agreement and U.S./USSR communication at risk. Certainly, it places such major considerations in a secondary role. But to what? Holding a U.S. journalist as a spy? Attempting to extort an exchange? Or a question of striking back and playing tough with the Red menace? To decide if this nation's responses are appropriate and judicious, the thinking that prompted them has to be clear. The U.S. must know its own mind.

Also, the United States has ordered 25 Soviet-United Nations mission diplomats out of the U.S. Admittedly, this country has desired to reduce the somewhat bloated Soviet diplomatic missions. The question is, however, is this the right time and the right way to achieve that goal? If not, then possibly the U.S. government is being led in its actions by some unfortunate desire to score a point on the "evil empire." Take that, Darth Gorbachev.

Such an attitude is detrimental. Foreign affairs should spring naturally from the perceived duties and interests of a country. They must be characteristic of the avowed purpose of the land and the people of a nation. Anything less than this belittles a nation's past and makes a mockery of its future. The United States is fortunate. The men who have forged its present in the fires of history made clear what they believed the purpose and duty of the country should be. In their words and thoughts, they tried to create a will for America which could govern its course of action.

Consider also, that rarely, if ever, are events or people addressable on a black and white basis. Gray is much more prevalent. Rambo and Rocky (those denizens of the Stallone-created world) and their counterparts make for profitable movie fare. Bad and evil are highly visible quantities. To react emotionally to their outrages is acceptable; in fact, it is the desired response.

To react emotionally outside movie theaters is not acceptable because real life does not embody evil in a single form for easy identification. The Soviet's every action is not the work of the archfiend. It would be comfortable to believe that there is an existing, identifiable dark force to center one's fury upon. Looking in the mirror would certainly be an easier task if true. Yet, it is not true.

Emotionally centered foreign policy, particularly one that promotes a blind reactionary hatred toward another country and people, is destructive. George Washington voiced this concern in his Farewell Address 190 years ago, dated September 17, 1796. He wrote, "The nation which indulges toward another [nation] an habitual hatred...is in some degree a slave. It is a slave to its animosity...which is sufficient to lead it astray from its duty and its interest."

Is the United States a slave to its hate? Or has this country the necessary restraint to act toward the USSR from its sense of duty and mission alone? These questions must be asked and satisfactorily answered. Our first President left his nation a valid warning in his farewell address. His words should not pass without being heeded.

Tigers make road debut tomorrow

FHSU ready for CSIC opener

By ERIC JONTRA
Asst. Sports Editor

Turn out the lights, the party is officially over. Now it's time to get down to some serious football.

The Fort Hays State Tigers will open their CSIC schedule tomorrow night when they travel to Missouri Western to take on the Golden Griffons and first-year coach Dennis Darnell.

The Tigers enter the game at 2-1, with their only loss coming at the hands of Northwest Oklahoma in the second game of the current campaign.

Even though FHSU easily defeated Lincoln University and Black Hills State in their other two contests, the Tiger squad still has not been the smooth running machine they were initially predicted to be.

Still, the Tiger gridders looked impressive during the 57-6 thrashing of Black Hills and head coach John Vincent believes that his team may have finally put things together.

"We got off to a slow start," Vincent said, "and I really can't tell you why. That's been a concern of mine since the very first day we brought everybody in."

"I wondered if a team like this could come together with so many major college transfers and guys that haven't seen the league. Now it looks like the defense is coming together and the offense is starting to click," Vincent said.

The Tiger defensive unit has allowed 236 yards per game so far this season, but allowed 397 yards against Northwest Oklahoma, by far the toughest team they have faced in 1986.

Mo West comes into the conference kick-off averaging 329 yards per game and last week against arch-rival Northwest Missouri State rallied for a last-minute, 27-26 victory. It was the first victory of the season for the Griffons, who are now 1-3.

After opening the season at home in St. Joseph, Mo., the Griffons have been on the road for the past three weeks. While the MWSC team has only played in front of the home crowd once this year, the Tigers will be on the road for the initial time.

Playing on the road hasn't been easy for Darnell's squad and to make matters even worse the Griffons have had to adapt to a new coach and his are starting to develop the esprit de corps that's necessary," Darnell said.

The Griffons run their offense primarily out of a pro or twin set with two wide receivers and for the most part depend on their running game.

MWSC has thrown the ball an average of 25 times per outing and Darnell doesn't foresee any alterations being made to the offensive unit that includes standout receiver Eric Hoskins, last week's CSIC player-of-the-week.

20-37 with 433 yards and four touchdowns.

The effort was enough to help Miller capture District 10 player-of-the-week honors. Vincent was naturally pleased with Miller's performance, and will leave him in the starting role against Mo West.

"Miller is going to start for us," the Tiger coach said, "because we don't play musical quarterbacks. We will stay with Miller unless he can't get it done anymore, and then we would make the change."

Miller will have an experienced secondary to work against when the Tigers pass, as three of the four defensive backs for Mo West are seniors. According to Darnell, the Griffon defensive backfield started the season slowly, but has looked better of late.

"Our secondary didn't play too well in the first two games of the season," Darnell said, "but they are looking better. When you get a group of seniors playing together, they're all usually committed because it is their last go-round."

Of the four teams that the Griffons have faced, three have been what Darnell considers to be passing teams, so defending against FHSU's run and shoot offense won't be a new experience.

Vincent is anxious to get the CSIC schedule underway and the second-year head coach believes that the talent in the conference is the best he has seen since he has been at FHSU.

"There are so damn many good athletes this year," Vincent said, "that the conference is going to be really tough. Statistics and point spreads don't mean anything. Normally, there are teams you figure you will beat, but that isn't the case this year."

The Tigers counter with Jeff Miller, a junior who last week made his debut as the first-string FHSU quarterback. Miller had been the backup to Randy Fayette, but replaced him against Black Hills after Fayette tossed eight interceptions in the first two games of the year.

Although Black Hills was a considerably weaker foe, Miller still racked up some impressive statistics in the contest. For the day he was

Alvamar turns monster as linksters place 5th

By KEVIN KRIER
Sports Editor

The Alvamar Golf Course is considered to be one of the toughest golf courses in the Kansas City Metro area.

Add a wind factor, and it can be downright monstrous. Those two conditions combined yesterday afternoon and gave the linksters at the Alvamar Golf Course a lesson in humility.

Bob Lowen, the Fort Hays State golf coach, had high hopes upon arriving at the tourney of a second-place finish.

After all, two of the teams that had pounded upon his youthful team throughout the fall season, failed to show at the 12-team tournament.

Emporia State University and Nebraska Wesleyan College were originally scheduled to participate but failed to show, thus opening the gates for the Tiger linksters.

Lowen realistically gave the title nod to Kansas State University, but really believed his golfers had a good chance at second.

"Kansas State is better than we are every day of the week at this stage of the season," Lowen said. "But, I believed if we shot a 320 team total, we would have a great chance for second."

Lowen's squad, however, didn't quite reach the coveted 320 plateau. His linksters fired a team score of 332, en route to a fifth place finish in the 12-team tourney.

"The course was decent and the sun was shining, but we should have played a lot better," Lowen said. "It is a long, tough course and the wind just made it that much tougher. It wasn't too unusual for the players to have an 80 or 90 foot putt."

Tom Perkins, Scott City senior, took medalist honors for the Tiger squad with an 80, but fell four shots off the torrid pace of Kansas State's Darren Neuschaffer.

Besides Perkins' 80, the other FHSU golfers also suffered a tough day on the links. Kevin McKinney, Austin, Texas sophomore, completed the 18-hole course in 81 strokes.

Ron Storz, Phillipsburg junior, followed with an 84, and Randy Akins, Great Bend junior, followed with an 87.

Chad Bowles, Atwood junior, endured a miserable day on the course with a 93 to complete the Tiger scoring.

Kansas State captured the tourney with a 312 total while Penn Valley College of Kansas City took runner-up honors with a 324.

CSIC foes Washburn University (326) and Pittsburg State University (327) finished third and fourth, respectively.

"Perkins is getting better each time out," Lowen said. "He three-putted the last green or he would have shot in the 70s."

"Akins had a 37 on the front nine, but had three disastrous holes on the back nine for a 50," Lowen said. "He probably hasn't had a score like that since he was 12-years old."

McKinney's 81 was spiced with good tee shots, but his failure to hit the green cost him dearly during the tourney.

"He couldn't get a putt to drop," Lowen said. "He didn't have a bad score for us all year, but I guess the 81 would have to be considered a bad one."

"Storz is coming along well for us," Lowen said. "Bowles just had a real tough day."

FHSU takes the weekend off before going to Salina Tuesday for the Marymount College Invitational at the Salina Elk Country Club.

Teams represented at the tourney will be Washburn, Cloud County Community College, Marymount, Kansas Technical Institute, and the Tigers.

"Washburn has beaten us two out of two times and we'll be looking for them Tuesday," Lowen said. "We've seen these teams before and we expect to play well."

Correction

In Tuesday's edition of The University Leader, the tennis story ran with factual errors. Kim Marchand, Salina freshman, lost two matches during the 7-2 defeat at the hands of Southwestern College. Monica Morin, Plainville sophomore, won the two matches for FHSU as she won the singles and doubles match. The University Leader apologizes for the error and regrets any inconvenience it may have caused the tennis team.

Spikers host nine-team tourney

By ROBERT S. CAMPBELL
Sports Writer

Heading into the annual Pepsi Classic this weekend at Gross Memorial Coliseum, the Fort Hays State volleyball squad resembles a singing group consisting of sopranos and altos.

Head Coach Jody Wise and her 11 Tigerettes enter the tournament on a high note as the FHSU squad currently holds the 18th spot in the NAIA national rankings.

On a low note, FHSU lost their last match Tuesday night to Bethany in five games, prompting Coach Wise to say "realistically, we shouldn't have lost to them."

The Tigerettes dropped the first game to Bethany 14-16, but came back to claim the next two contests, 15-6 and 15-3. Despite holding their opponents to a mere nine points in games two and three, FHSU struggled the remainder of the night, falling 13-15 and 12-15.

"We played pretty good everywhere except our serve," Wise said. The failure to serve consistently "probably cost us the match," she added.

Although the Tigerettes experienced difficulty serving, Wise said she saw something positive come out of the match.

"One positive thing about the match, we moved better as a team than we have the last couple of weeks," Wise said.

Wise and the rest of the Tigerettes will have the opportunity to redeem themselves as FHSU faces Bethany today at 4:30 p.m. in the Tigerettes' third match of the tourney.

FHSU Volleyball Schedule

11:30 a.m.	FHSU--Sterling College
1:30 p.m.	FHSU--St. Mary of the Plains College
3:30 p.m.	FHSU--Hastings College

third match of the tourney.

FHSU opens the Pepsi Classic against Friends, with Coville County scheduled for the Tigerettes second match of the tourney. After the rematch with Bethany, FHSU winds down the day against Kearney State College.

On Saturday, FHSU faces Washburn, Sterling, St. Mary's, and Hastings, Neb.

Although the Tigerettes will be defending the tournament crown and are the only team in the tourney holding a national ranking, Wise said the road to the championship will be anything but a cake walk.

Wise expects Kearney, Friends, and Washburn to be top contenders, with possibly Hastings and Bethany pulling some upsets.

"Hastings played Kearney pretty well (earlier in the season) and Bethany just beat us and went five games with Washburn," Wise said. "We would like to win the tournament and according to the rankings, we probably should," she said.

Wise said she expects her squad to bounce back from the loss to Bethany Tuesday night and enter the tournament "ready to play."

Wise said the tournament is of great importance because several conference and district schools participate, adding it is important to defeat those teams to remain among the top of the rankings.

The Tigerettes wrap up their home schedule at 6 p.m. Monday night with a single match (best three of five games) against Sterling.

FHSU netters at ESU Invite

By ROBERT S. CAMPBELL
Sports Writer

Fort Hays State assistant tennis coach Mark Leydig believes strongly in the ancient phrase, "Two heads are better than one."

"I think we'll be much stronger in the doubles competition than the singles," Leydig said, as the FHSU women's tennis squad prepares for the Emporia State Invitational today and tomorrow.

FHSU and Emporia State are only two of eight schools scheduled to participate in the two day, single elimination tournament. The remaining six schools include Washburn University, Benedictine College, McPherson College, Friends University, the University of Missouri-Kansas City, and Baker University.

Leydig said the Tigerettes go into the tournament not knowing what to expect because of the teams competing. FHSU has met only Baker thus far in the season.

Although unsure of the competitive level of the other teams, Leydig knows Baker will be "very tough."

Their (Baker's) No. 1 doubles team won districts last year, and in singles, Jody Fort is ranked No. 3 in the Missouri Valley Conference," Leydig said.

Michelle Birt, Hutchinson junior, and Rhonda Bronson, Great Bend junior will comprise the FHSU No. 1 doubles team, while Kim Marchand, Salina freshman, and Susan McQueen, Liberal junior make up the Tigerettes second duet.

Rhonda Hankin, Larned sophomore, and Monica Morin, Plainville sophomore, will play in No. 3 doubles for FHSU. Also, all six Tigerettes will participate in singles action.

Leydig said the women have been working on many aspects of the game, but are mainly concentrating on "the consistency of the serve."

"We're working on pinpointing our serves, hitting the corners, instead of simply hitting the ball down the middle all the time," Leydig said.

Athletic Board votes for gymnasts safety

By KEVIN KRIER
Sports Editor

Installation of a new gymnastics floor dominated discussion in Tuesday afternoon's monthly Athletic Board meeting in Rarick Hall.

After a lengthy dialogue of nearly 45 minutes, the board members voted unanimously to buy a new spring board floor for the gymnastics room. The old floor, installed in 1973 when Cunningham Hall opened its doors, was deteriorating and Fort Hays State gymnastics coach Tawnta Augustine believed it of the utmost importance to install a new floor for safety's sake.

Augustine pointed to last year's gymnastics squad and the number of injuries they endured as a reason for the new floor installation. The floor, she believed, caused a number of the injuries and it was very important for the team to have a new floor installed before the beginning of the new season.

Augustine went to Athletic Director Robert Van Poppel in recent weeks and offered to pay for an immediate installment of the floor through funds raised from the 140-member Tiger Tots club.

The cost of the installation of the new floor is $8,671 and Augustine offered to pay in monthly installments over a three or four year plan.

The board, however, decided to pick up the tab and make Augustine pay the department a monthly installment through the first year. After the first year of payments have been made, the board will re-evaluate and decide upon further action at that time.

Since the FHSU gymnastics team would also be using the floor, the board members decided that it was only right that the athletic department help pay for the installation of the floor.

Payments would be made in three installments on Oct. 1, Feb. 1 and July 1, 1987 to help alleviate any cash-flow problems that may be the direct result of the purchase.

In other action, Dr. Ellen Veed, president of the athletic board, read a letter from Gloria Pfannenstiel concerning membership on the committee from Classified Personnel.

It was decided by the board to wait until March (when new members are elected to the board) before any action would be taken on this matter.

In one final matter, Keith Faulkner brought to the attention of the board members that all cheerleaders would be eligible for yell squad duties.

Harriers return to land of the Big Eight

By LAYNE BERRYMAN

Joe Fisher, Fort Hays State cross country coach, must like the Big Eight Conference.

Last weekend, Fisher took his team to Lawrence for the Kansas University Invitational.

Tomorrow, Fisher and his squad will try, the other Big Eight school in Kansas when his squad takes on the talent at the Kansas State University Invitational.

Fisher did not take a full complement of women to the Kansas University meet last weekend because of illness and sore muscles. Tomorrow, however, will be different as FHSU takes the full squad to Manhattan.

"I did not want my girls to hurt themselves more by having them run at Kansas University," Fisher said. "The harriers are all healed up and ready to go. We feel well enough to field a good team."

Fisher said the team has been putting in the mileage during the practice sessions.

"We have had some good, strong hill workouts and some easy, long runs," he said. "We are running well."

Kirk Hunter, Hoyt senior, is the leading contender for the men's team and Fisher is expecting more of the same from the senior stand-out tomorrow.

Fisher added that Chrissy Sitts, Valley Center freshman, and Maggie Smelser, McLouth junior, ran good races last weekend for the women and Fisher expects them to be challenged tomorrow by the Tigerette harriers.
