Residence halls face 10.7% cut

By STACY SHAW
Copy Editor

It looks like housing fees will be raised for the 1987-88 school year. Fort Hays State, as well as five other institutions have requested housing rate increases.

The proposed increase for FHSU is 10.7 percent. This is the largest percentage increase of all the institutions this year.

The proposals will be up for first reading by the Board of Regents at their meeting in Topeka. The meeting began yesterday and will end today. The Regents are expected to vote on the issue at their December meeting.

According to an article in the Tuesday edition of the Hays Daily News, the increase is only due to a cost-of-living increase. In the article, Dale Johansen, vice president for administration and finance, said FHSU has not asked for a cost-of-living increase for the past two years. He said that most schools come in every year to request fee increases.

If the FHSU proposal is passed, the charge for a residence hall room will increase from $1,954 to $2,163 for a person on the 20-meal plan, $1,898 to $2,097 for the 15-meal plan, and $1,876 to $2,071 for the 10-meal plan.

The room rate for Custer Hall, a co-operative living hall, would also increase. Fees would increase from $1,752 to $1,941 for the 20-meal plan, $1,696 to $1,875 for the 15-meal plan, and $1,674 to $1,849 for the 10-meal plan.

All of the rates for the residence halls, including Custer Hall, are based on a double-occupancy room for two semesters.

An additional $25 application fee is charged to all of the residents.

The increases will not affect Wooster Hall residents.

According to James Nugent, director of housing, the fee increases basically apply to new students so he doesn't think it will affect the number of people living in the residence halls.

"I don't think it will affect us much, especially since our current students will not be affected by the increase because of our incentive program," Nugent said.

The housing department has several incentives to make the residence halls more attractive to students.

Scholarship in the amount of $200 are awarded to freshmen and transfer students who have a 3.25 grade point average or better who live in the residence halls.

The housing department also matches departmental scholarships up to $600. When figuring the departmental scholarship awards, the housing department figures in the $200 scholarship award towards their contribution towards a student on campus housing.

Returning students will not see an increase in their housing fees. They will also qualify for reduced rates depending on the number of semesters they have lived in the residence halls.

A student in his third or fourth semester of residency will pay $1,779 for a 20-meal plan, $1,723 for a 15-meal plan, $1,701 for a 10-meal plan, and $1,025 for someone who is not on the meal plan.

A fifth or sixth semester student will pay $1,679 for the 20-meal plan, $1,623, for the 15-meal plan, $1,601 for the 10-meal plan, and for a person who only wants a room, it is $925.

Seventh or eighth semester students, pay $1,579 for 20-meals per week, $1,523 for 15-meals, $1,501 for 20-meals, and $825 for a room only.

A student in his or her ninth or tenth semester of residency pays, $1,479 for the 20-meal plan, $1,423 for the 15-meal plan, $1,401 for the 10-meal plan, and $725 for a room and no meals.

All of these prices include incentives and a $25 application fee.

A transfer student will qualify for two semesters of residency, if the housing application is received by June 30, 1987.

In order for a student to qualify for the incentives next year, the first payment must be made by June 30, 1987. After this date, a student must pay the new student level housing fees.

Nugent said he expects the Regents will pass the proposed housing fee increases.

High-priority issues decided by ASK

By KRISTY LOVE
Asst. News Editor

The Associated Students of Kansas determined its 1987 legislative platform Sunday at its meeting in Topeka.

ASK discussed 19 issues, selecting three as high-priority issues. Priorities were determined by a vote of the representatives from the six Regent schools in Kansas. Representatives attend according to the enrollment at their campus.

Chris Powers, campus director of ASK, Kevin Amack, Student Government Association president, and Ted Bannister, SGA senator, represented Fort Hays State at the meeting.

The first priority issue deals with the release of fees. Each university estimates how many students it will have the following year as part of its annual budget request. If the fees generated by tuition the following year fall short of this estimate, the legislature would make up the difference. If the tuition income is higher than expected, the institution does not receive the aid.

"This bill would essentially benefit the universities that grow," said Powers.

The second priority issue concerns adjusting university budgets in accordance with changes in enrollment. Under the new policy, Fort Hays State would have to grow by 1 percent to receive funds, or shrink by 2 percent to lose funds.

The state work-study issue received third priority. According to this policy, half of a student's salary would be paid by the state, and the other paid by the actual employer.

"We feel we really need to support this issue because it offers no great cost to the state," Powers said.

"We are trying to keep away from high cost issues because we are under tight budgetary restraints," Powers said.

Remedial courses was another issue that received particular attention at the meeting. "We are opposed to the issue, which calls for a fee for students taking remedial courses. We do support students being better prepared for college," Powers said.

The brain drain issue, which concerns Kansas students attending universities out of state, and an issue concerning the raising of tuition were discussed at length.

Another important issue centered on the mandatory drug testing of university athletes. "We are opposed to mandatory testing," Powers said.

Powers said that the association discussed the mandatory 2 percent cuts over the state budget because Kansas laws say the state budget has to be balanced.

"We have a $93 million deficit. A 2 percent cut will get us to a zero budget, but there will likely be more cuts so there will be a surplus," Powers said.

SGA opposes proposed program cuts

The Student Government Association unanimously passed a resolution opposing the Kansas Board of Regents' proposal to discontinue certain programs at the state's six universities.

"Several of the programs...are essential to maintaining a strong liberal arts program, or are graduate programs which benefit the university and its ability to serve Western Kansas," Chris Crawford, Great Bend junior, read from the resolution.

The Kansas Board of Regents tentatively recommended the discontinuation or cutting of Fort Hays State programs in English, music, art, and the degree program in philosophy. They will give their final say at the board meeting today.

"These classes may not have the biggest enrollment, but they certainly are important to our school," Jack Schmitt, Scott City junior, said.

The FHSU Faculty Senate expressed similar views when they approved a resolution on Oct. 7

Proposed budget cuts to slash $12.1 million from Regents system

By CARL PETZ
News Editor

Proposed budget cuts announced Wednesday by Governor-elect Mike Hayden could result in a cut of $12.1 million for Kansas Board of Regents institutions.

The cuts, which are based on a 3.8 percent total of the Regents' budget, will result in Fort Hays State receiving a budget cut that will be determined next week.

Ron Pflughoft, vice president for university relations and development said, "We knew the cuts would be between 2 and 6 percent," Pflughoft said. "We were hoping for a no larger than 2 percent cut which would have resulted in around $325,000 in budget cuts for Fort Hays State," he said.

Pflughoft added that it will be tremendously difficult for FHSU to take this cut without a negative impact.

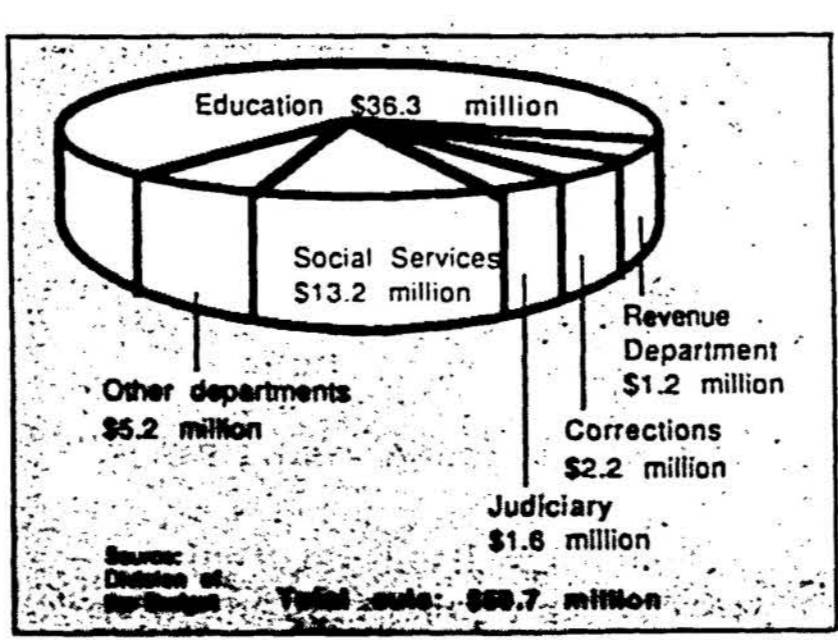

"We don't have a lot of options in this type of situation," Pflughoft said.

"We have used our resources well and we don't have the flexibility to cut large amounts of money from any specific areas," he said.

Pflughoft said that higher education has to take its lumps along with all other agencies.

"Education just has a bigger slice of the pie," he said.

"Institutions themselves will make the cuts, then they will be approved or disapproved at the state level," Kelly Hayden, press secretary for the Governor-elect, said.

"We won't know where the cuts will come from until we (university officials) meet next week," Pflughoft said.

Other university officials are in Topeka for Regents' meetings and were unavailable for comment.

Hayden said that the cuts are based on the total budget of state agencies.

"What we've got is the $60 million target budget cut from all state agencies. Each agency's budget is multiplied by the 3.8 percent to determine the total amount of cuts," Hayden said.

The Department of Education, social services, and the Board of Regents have a very large percentage of the state budget, Hayden said.

Since education has twice the budget as any other state agency, they will receive the largest cuts, he said.

Hayden said the Governor-elect hasn't made any comment in any specific areas, but that he simply said according to figures we will be $13 million dollars short unless something is cut.

The governor said that rather than single out any one agency we will try to approach it in an across-the-board manner, Hayden said.

He said that every state agency will have to try to figure out if they can reduce their budget by 3.8 percent.

"The 3.8 percent cuts are target,"

Woody Allen and Humphrey Bogart.

Each is, in his own right, an American institution.

Allen as one of the great humorists of the 20th century, and Bogart as the example for machismo set for years to follow.

Combining the two, Allen wrote Play it Again, Sam, where the autobiographical character of Allen sought advice on his-lovelife from Bogey, after being dumped by his ex-wife.

The play was turned into a movie a few years later, with Allen in the lead, autobiographical-type role.

To make Play it Again, Sam a success, the right actors are needed to play both Allen and Bogey.

Director Lloyd Frerer found them in Dennis Grilliot and Stacey Lowman.

Although neither "looks the part," each had sterling performances.

Grilliot doesn't quite have a nerdy look of a Woody Allen. He also has a youthful appearance, and doesn't pass for 29.

However, what Grilliot lacks in looking like Allen he made up for, with interest, in comedic timing.

Grilliot shoots out Allen's rapid-fire comedic dialogue with near perfection. Performing Allen's work is not easy, and Grilliot takes a firm hand.

Lowman has especially perfected Bogey's mannerisms, if not his look, and does a good Bogey. As long as he keeps his hat brim down and his trenchcoat collar up, he does well.

The female lead, Kim Brack, came across sincerely and gave a good, caring performance as Allen's best friend's wife, at her funniest with a combination of prescription drugs and champagne.

As Brack's husband, Marty Evensvold was delightful as an uptight, ladder-climbing, executive always calling his answering service.

Deb Driscoll, while only appearing in dream/flashback sequences, was wonderfully over-exaggerated as Allen's domineering ex-wife.

As the women who run in and out of Allen's life, Mindy Seyler, Lora Singleton, Michelle McElwain, and Jenifer Oborny, all new to Fort Hays State theater, all had memorable roles for their debuts.

A more experienced actress (as the bio in the program suggests), "Anita Fixx," also had a memorable role as a wigged-out intellectual.

The only problem with Allen's script is that it is already dated. References made to the late 60s/early 70s, although some modern dialogue was added, most notably, some from recent headlines.

The set, adorned with every Bogey poster imaginable, was well done by Shawn Stewart-Larson. Steve Larson's lighting was imaginative, especially for the dream/flashback scenes.

The actors utilize every part of the set, unexpectedly appearing from nooks and crannies in the set and in the Felten-Start stage itself.

Although the majority of Frerer's actors had no experience in FHSU performances, they all did well, most notably Lowman and Evensvold.

The experience of Grilliot, Brack, and Driscoll pulled the play through, aiding the younger actors, while shining themselves.

Sam plays again at 8 p.m. tonight and tomorrow, and at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Kim and Reggie Harris provide the entertainment in the MUAB Gallery Series late Wednesday evening. The couple sang a mixed variety of music, ranging from upbeat jazz to soft musical ballads.

Liquor laws affect rock bands

By LISHA BARKOW
Staff Writer

Due to the change in liquor laws and the drinking age, area bands may be having a difficult time finding places to play. But the five man band Submytion has managed to keep a full schedule.

"Bookings are sometimes hard to get because of the change in the liquor laws. Bars aren't sure if they'll be needing bands when the laws go into effect, so they aren't booking too far ahead," Terry Barton, singer for the band, said.

However, the band usually plays every weekend. They play in a variety of areas including Nebraska and Oklahoma as well as all over Kansas.

Two of the band members, Jeff Hansen, lead guitarist, and Troy Jeffery, who plays synthesizer and bass guitar, handle most of the bookings with the help of two agencies, Diversified Talent Association of Clay Center, and Great Plains Association of Lawrence.

The sound equipment and lights for the band are run by Kenny Allen, principal of Catherine Grade School.

The band currently plays a lot of Top 40 songs and older tunes by groups like The Beatles and The Rolling Stones. Right now the band is trying to change their style a bit to include a wider variety of music.

"We are working on more of the English style of music, of bands like INXS," Jeffery said.

The band doesn't play much heavy metal in their sets though.

"Heavy metal appeals to a somewhat smaller crowd and it's not as much of a challenge to play," Barton said.

Because of the styles of music the band plays, the crowds they play for vary in age. Although they enjoy playing for the college-aged crowds, they don't show preference of one age group over the other.

"The bigger the crowd the better. It makes it more exciting," Barton said. "We just like to play for a good crowd."

Hansen, Barton, and Jeffery all attend school at Fort Hays State and Dinkel and Ginther are both employed.

"We try to practice a couple of times a week. Jobs and school take up quite a bit of time which can create a bit of a problem, but we work around it," Jeffery said.

The friendship between the members has been a big factor of the band sticking together.

"Four of us have been in the band from the start. Three of us live together and we are all really good friends outside of the band," Barton said.

The Zeta Pi chapter of Fort Hays State won their 12th consecutive Performance Evaluation Efficiency Award at the Alpha Kappa Psi Central Region Conference at Lawrence.

Zeta Pi also won the traveling trophy award at the conference. The chapter is also currently ranked third in the nation out of over 220 chapters.

The Efficiency Award is presented to chapters who have earned a total of 100,000 points during the school year. The evaluation for this award is based on five areas: professional activities, scholarship, membership, finances, and general administration. There is a limit of 20,000 points in each area with a maximum overall total of 100,000, Deana Elston, Zeta Pi member said.

Elston said the traveling trophy is awarded at each regional conference which are held every other year. She said it is awarded to the chapter who has traveled the longest round trip distance; that figure is then multiplied by the number of chapter members attending the conference, Elston said.

Seven Fort Hays State students have been initiated into the Alpha Lambda Delta, national scholarship honor society for college freshmen.

Alpha Lambda Delta recognizes superior academic performance by students who during their freshman year have maintained a B+ or better average.

Advisers for the FHSU chapter are Dorothy Knoll, associate dean of students, and Lois Lee Myerly, assistant to the president.

Eight students of Fort Hays State have been initiated into Pi Eta Sigma, a national freshman honor society.

To be eligible, students must have a cumulative grade point average of 3.5 or better during their freshman year.

The Non-traditional Student Organization will be providing a Thanksgiving dinner for a Fort Hays State student and his family. Applications can be picked up in the NTS lounge in the Memorial Union basement, McCarty 316, the Ecumenical Center, and the Catholic Campus Center. Applicants will be chosen according to financial need. The deadline to apply is today. For more information, contact Debra Creamer, at 628-2048.

The Non-traditional Student Organization needs assistance from Fort Hays State students, faculty, and staff and the Hays community in providing a Thanksgiving dinner for a needy FHSU student and his family. Donations of non-perishable foods can be dropped off at the Student Service Center, the NTS lounge, the Ecumenical Campus Center, and the Catholic Campus Center. Monetary contributions can be left in McCarty 316 and the Grab-N-Go in the Memorial Union. For more information, contact Debra Creamer at 628-2048.

Record amount pledged in telethon

By BETTINA HEINZ
Staff Writer

The Endowment Association has broken a record. In their annual telethon, $170,000 was pledged. This amount set a record in telethon history.

Such a high dollar amount was not expected because of unfavorable economic conditions, James Kellerman, telethon chairman, said. The goal had been set for $160,000.

From Oct. 13 to Nov. 11, the 20 phones in the Endowment Association office were off the hook.

Students, faculty, alumni, and Hays business and community members called alumni and friends of Fort Hays State for 18 nights of donations.

"Some students come alone, and then there are some organizations that always send groups, like the Sigma Chi fraternity, Mortar Board, and Alpha Kappa Psi," Ruth Heffel, Endowment Association administrative assistant, said.

According to Heffel, the funds pledged are used for the President's, Fort Hays State, and Dean's Scholarships, unless callers restrict their donations to a certain department or loan fund.

Kellerman said he was very pleased with the telethon.

"The support for the telethon has been excellent. I really appreciate the effort of the volunteer callers," Kellerman said.

Ever since the telethon started, a higher goal has been set for following years. This year was the first year that the goal was not raised. This was done in consideration of the economy.

Kellerman stressed his appreciation of the record amount pledged despite the economy.

"It's a very positive step. I am very pleased that there are so many people who like to help our students or those who want to come to Fort Hays State. I feel very, very happy that we met and exceeded our goal," Kellerman said.

concerning the review of programs. The resolution says that eliminating the programs in question would "eliminate programs essential to fulfilling our recognized role as the liberal arts university of western Kansas."

Kevin Amack, SGA president, met yesterday with the student body presidents from the other Regent universities in the state. The purpose of the meeting was to formally decide what the stand of the universities is on the subject of discontinuation of programs.

The presidents will present their findings at the Board of Regents meeting today prior to the Board's final decision on the issue.

Hayden said. "Hearings will be held so it may be that they may flutuate on one side or the other from target reductions," he said.

"It may be that some agencies will find this impossible and if the state agrees then they will reduce someone else's budget by more than the targeted 3.8 percent or they will fall short of their $60 million goal," Hayden said.

The proposed budget cut totals are $36.3 million for education which are broken down into $24.2 million for education and $12.1 million for Regent institutions.

Education cuts include cuts in local school districts, community colleges, and Washburn University.

Another state agency facing a large cut is the $13.2 million being cut from Social and Rehabilitation Services, which runs the state's hospitals and welfare programs.

Other areas facing cuts include the Department of Corrections, $2.2 million; the court system, $1.6 million; the Highway Patrol, $725,816; and the Kansas Department of Health and Environment, $575,883.

Gifts boost Sheridan campaign near top

The fund-raising campaign for Sheridan Coliseum continues to move forward. To the present day $1,567,202 has been raised to help fund the renovation of Fort Hays State's Sheridan Coliseum.

According to Ronald C. Pflughoft, vice president for development, alumni, and university relations, FHSU has only $432,798 of the $2 million dollars to raise. The state of Kansas will then meet that bid with $4 million dollars.

"The most recent gifts are the $100,000 donation from Dr. Emil Childers, a 1942 graduate of FHSU, and the $15,000 donation from City Services Foundation," Pflughoft said. "The City Services Group gave an excellent donation with the depressed economy in Kansas. They felt the need to be involved. We hope to contact other major oil companies who have an interest in western Kansas.

"The past donations are a good way of challenging our own alumni and friends. If they all could get together and donate something it would help."

Pflughoft said he hopes to see some donations to the project before the end of 1986. He said next year new tax laws will come into effect which deal with donations and people may not be as eager to donate their money to fund-raising causes.

Overall, Pflughoft said he is optimistic. "It is all a long, drawn out process, but we all have our own individual goals and we're ambitious to achieve them."

'Zero' turnout for show

Last Tuesday night's performance by Kim and Reggie Harris in Stouffer Lounge in the Memorial Union was a little different from the rest of this year's Gallery series.

It didn't happen. By 8:10 p.m., at a performance that was scheduled to start at 8 p.m., there were exactly -- count 'em -- zero audience members. I.B. Dent, director of student activities, and Jim Costigan, Memorial Union Activities Board music chairman, consulted briefly, then, frustrated, announced, "That's it. Let's go home."

Dent later said, "I have never, in 17 years in this job, had to cancel a performance because nobody came."

Since the Harris'es were scheduled for another show Wednesday night, the MUAB staff launched a frantic, last-ditch publicity drive that day. Kim and Reggie performed a lunch-time "teaser" at McMinder's Hall which SAGA Director Mike Munkel helped arrange. Earlier, James Costigan, chairman of the department of communication and a die-hard entertainment supporter at Fort Hays State, announced to one of his classes that he would award extra credit to any student who attended the performance.

While Costigan's effort was greatly appreciated, it seems a sad commentary that we must resort to bribery to convince students to attend these events. (By the way, only four people took advantage of his offer.)

It should be pointed out that a number of fairly legitimate explanations have been offered to account for the poor attendance at recent MUAB events.

But on the other hand, some of these explanations do not have too much merit. One of these is that MUAB doesn't serve alcohol anymore. Since when have movie theaters served alcohol? Crocodile Dundee is still saying "G'day" to full houses every night.

The question is, are these series becoming an exercise in futility? Should we keep spinning our wheels? Even if the various excuses are valid, you'd think we could at least scrounge up enough people to make Stouffer Lounge, which is the size of most living rooms, look full.

Otherwise, it may not be long before entertainers who used to look forward to coming to Hays, begin to dread the drive -- if they come at all.

Holiday season brings on stress, pressure

'Tis the season to be jolly. Yes, it's the holiday season again. Thanksgiving is less than a week away and Christmas is about a month away. However, the holiday season isn't always as fun and exciting as we would like to believe.

It adds a lot of pressure to our lives. I hear so many people complain about where they are going to find the money to buy all the Christmas presents for their friends and family.

You have your 25 dorm friends, other friends, your mate, all of your family, which includes your parents, grandparents, sisters, brothers, close aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, and cousins. And if you have stepparents the list grows even longer.

Then when you finally purchase and wrap all your presents, you put them under your Christmas tree, only to discover them chewed up by the dog the next morning.

I think that alone adds enough stress.

Then there is the stress of gaining many extra pounds during the holiday season. Most people have mothers and grandmothers who fix these enormous meals. Thanksgiving alone is enough to make anyone gain 10 pounds. There is the 10-course meal including lots of fattening food.

When you finally come back from the Christmas break, no one even recognizes you because you've gained so much weight. Then your friends use that word. "You look so much different since the last time I have seen you." Of course, they might as well come out and say exactly what they mean. "You look fat."

Have you noticed how funny dogs and cats act during the holiday season. You know, they accidentally get into the holiday punch. Then you have this cat or dog who can't even stand up.

Of course, there are a lot of people who walk around in the same manner as their cats and dogs. With all the pressure of the holidays, it is no wonder that some people feel the need to drink.

Then there is all the pressure of sharing the holidays with those loved ones. There is a lot of pressure on those people who don't have anyone to share it with. You've heard some of these people tell about their big holiday plans. They tell you how they are going to spend the holidays with their best friends, Lou and Fred. However, the person doesn't know that you realize Lou is his pet bird and Fred is his pet dog.

If that doesn't make a person feel bad, I don't know what would.

With all these pressures, it is no wonder the suicide rate goes up during the holidays.

Then there are all those people who insist on making poor jingles out of well-known Christmas carols.

Every item you could possibly want to buy comes in a Christmas design or shape. All the kitchen accessories, clothes, hats, jewelry, candy, and nic nac items including candles, vases, statues, and so on. Can you imagine brushing your hair with a Christmas tree hairbrush or wearing underwear with little reindeers all over them?

However, there are some very good points about the holidays to make.

Christmas is the only time in the year that a Santa Clause can find employment. It is also the only time of the year when there is a high demand for Santa Claus suits.

I don't see many full-grown trees in people's living rooms during other months either. It's kind of nice for a change. Of course, if you buy a real tree, you will get those needles all over your house. Then you destroy your vacuum cleaner by vacuuming the floor. It is also the only time you will see a poinsettia. They aren't the prettiest flowers in the world, but they seem to be an essential part of Christmas.

One can find an infinite number of flaws in the holiday season, but he can also find great joy. It just takes some effort. After all, 'tis the season to be jolly."

Smoking clinic helps smokers kick the habit

I think I really did it this time. No one thought I could do it. I didn't think I could do it.

I quit smoking. It's been 12 days, and much to my own amazement, I like it.

Now, I'm not here to preach to you about the evils of smoking, only to relate how good I feel when I never thought I would. I hope someone will listen.

It began for me with a four-part smoking cessation clinic conducted by Bill Gross, assistant professor of health, physical education, and recreation at Fort Hays State, and Cheryl Webb, director of health promotion at Hadley Regional Medical Center.

The program is called FreshStart, sponsored by the American Cancer Society. Its aim is to help one to stop smoking and to stay off cigarettes.

The first night: This session is designed to help the quitter to understand why and how smoking affects him.

After taking a short test, I realized what a mess I am. Not only am I chemically addicted to cigarettes, but also habituated and psychologically dependent. However, the FreshStart booklet says I should not despair; I am not alone.

"At this time you may be questioning your own desire to quit smoking," the booklet says. Oh, brother, am I! But I'm also beginning to see that I am not unique. I am no different from the dozen or so others in the class. If they can do it, I surely can -- or do I want to?

The second night: Well, I showed up, but I'm here only to tell them I have changed my mind about quitting. I am just going to observe tonight. I feel awful. I want to smoke.

But this second session is devoted to withdrawal symptoms, and, boy, have I got 'em. And again, it seems I'm not unique. My craving and dizziness and tension are very common withdrawal symptoms, and Dr. Gross is teaching us some stress management techniques to help get through these tough times.

Maybe I'll hang in a little longer.

The third night: It's been a week now, and tonight Bill and Cheryl are trying to help us master all the obstacles to staying off cigarettes.

The FreshStart booklet says I should now be experiencing some of the physical improvements that follow stopping smoking.

You know, it's funny. I really don't think I want to be here; I really think I like smoking. I don't think I want to quit forever, but, darn, I am feeling better. The worst is over, I think. Oh, I still have a craving now and then, but it's getting easier.

The fourth night: This is the end for our little group. Looking around at the group tonight, I realize for the first time how different we all are: nurse, truck driver, housewife, printer, oil patch pumper, student. But, yet, we're so much the same: we all have a smoking problem, and we all want to quit.

Some of these people haven't found it as easy as I have. Some, until the Great American Smokeout yesterday, have only been tapering off. But they'll make it. They have to. The rest of the group is behind them. You see, in two short weeks we've really grown to care for each other.

In fact, we care so much we hate to have the group come to an end. Bill and Cheryl have given us all the information we need to succeed, but the support of our fellow smokers is important too.

So we've staying together for a while: "Smokers Anonymous." We're going to meet at 7 p.m. on Monday in the Sunset Lounge of the Memorial Union. If you're still a smoker, stop by and visit with us. We won't preach, but we'll certainly be proud: We Quit!

Reagan's credibility down after Iran deal

"It's a strange situation," Reagan said at Wednesday night's televised press conference.

How true. Too bad that "strangeness" has to modify the foreign policy of a nation as powerful as the United States. If there is anything resembling American foreign policies, that is.

"I don't think a mistake was made. I don't see that it has been a fiasco or a great failure of any kind."

That was probably the only statement Reagan said the majority of the audience believed.

If nothing else, there remains no doubt that Reagan is still convinced of the righteousness of his one-man mission.

He seems to be the only one. A poll taken after his speech last week on the arms shipments reported that 14 percent of those surveyed thought he was essentially telling the truth when he said he was not trading weapons for hostages.

Fourteen percent. The figure speaks for itself. For once, Reagan's credibility seems shaky.

It didn't help that he had to issue an instant official clarification of statements he had just made denying Israel's link to the Iranian arms sale.

Confusion still prevailed. The crucial question was whether he was trading arms for hostages. Due to his major contradictions, it still is.

Presidential scholar James David Barber, Duke University, told USA Today, "Reagan has given up on logic. First, he said one of the four objectives was to free the hostages, then he said there was no attempt to swap hostages for arms."

In the context of national and international politics, it's not the question if the United States are trading arms for hostages that gives reason to worry.

It's the question of what the politics of the United States is. What is the public, what are the allies to believe?

Obviously, one cannot trust the official statements about U.S. foreign policy. Secretary of State George Shultz stood embarrassed at the disclosure because he had assured allies that an embargo on arms to Iran was still the policy.

Middle East politics are just a little too intricate to leave the question of alliances and political attitudes up to speculation.

France, for example, does not try to conceal the fact that it makes concessions to Middle East countries in exchange for hostages.

If Reagan had declared that he wants to sell arms to Iran to get the hostages out, he might have had to face criticism, but at least he would have been believable.

Western allies and the neutral countries in the Middle East could have felt assured about the purpose of the arms sale.

The way it is now all is left up to guesses. If Reagan did not trade arms for hostages, why did he OK the sale? Which faction in the Iran-Iraq war is he backing? With conditions as unstable as they are in Iran, how can we be sure that the arms get into the right hands?

The United States needs a believable and open foreign policy, because their allies base their policies on it.

Political scientists have been predicting that if there is going to be a third world war, it is going to erupt from a Middle East crisis. Therefore, the main goal of all nations striving for peace has to be to calm down the Middle East conflicts, not to add confusion.

It remains to hope that this was not a precedent. Pray that Reagan abandons his savior missions for the remainder of his presidency and that he comes up with a stable foreign policy. The need was never bigger than now.

Connie Terrell, Garland, Texas, freshman, puts the final touches on her parallel bars routine in preparation for the first FHSU women's gymnastics meet tomorrow.

Gymnasts hope to bounce back in 1986-87

By ROBERT S. CAMPBELL
Sports Writer

After suffering through an injury-plagued season last year, the 1986-87 edition of the Fort Hays State women's gymnastics squad "expects to be back on top," Tawnita Augustine, gymnastics coach, said.

Richard begin their sixth season, at the helm of FHSU women's gymnastics, and if this year's team can avoid serious injuries, Tawnita said the future looks bright for the squad.

"Talentwise, if you're talking about potential, this could be one of the best teams Fort Hays has ever seen," Tawnita said, "but it kind of depends on how the injuries hold out for us.

"Last year wasn't a real productive year for us. We had ten girls originally and dropped down to only five competitors due to some chronic injuries," Tawnita added.

This year's team has also experienced some early-season injuries, but despite the minor setbacks, Tawnita said the squad is on the right track.

"I'd say we're probably right about on schedule," Tawnita said, "maybe a little bit behind, and again it's been a few injuries that's kept some girls out that are just now getting back into it."

Three individuals of the 12-member squad are currently sidelined due to injuries, including Shelly Cooper, Dodge City freshman; Debbie Kelly, Topeka sophomore; and Cary Hertel, Wichita freshman.

"Shelly is still in rehabilitation for knee surgery, Debbie is in rehabilitation for compartment

FHSU rolls to win over Spartans

By KEVIN KRIER
Co-Sports Editor

The Fort Hays State-Marymount College rivalry used to be something special.

But, now the rivalry is just some game on each school's schedule.

That was never more evident than in last night's contest at Gross Memorial Coliseum. The Tigers steamrolled the Spartans 97-69 in a game that was decided after the first two minutes.

Gone are the days of intense, heated contests that determined the District 10 champion.

Gone are the days of former Marymount coach Dan Pratt ranting and raving on the sidelines.

Gone is former Marymount center Rich Hamilton dominating for the Spartans inside.

Gone are the days of a good old rivalry between schools separated by 94 miles of Interstate 70.

Now, all that is left is a tune-up game for the Tigers in a quest for another District 10 championship.

The Tigers now own a 14-10 series edge, but have dominated the Spartans in the Bill Morse era.

In fact, since Morse has arrived on the scene, the Tigers are 10-2 against the Spartans. Most have been closely contested games, but the tide has slowly turned into a Tiger romp.

Marymount closed to within five points of the Tigers for one very brief stage in the first three minutes of the contest. That, however, did not last long as the Tigers soon roared to a 22-7 advantage and it was never a contest after that.

Even Morse was somewhat surprised by the margin of victory.

"The margin was more than I thought it would be," Morse said.

"But, really, Marymount was threatening. They closed it down to 16 at one point, so they did a pretty good job at times."

The Tigers were led in the first half by Tyrone Jackson as he scored 16 of his 17 points in the first 20 minutes. He also pulled down six rebounds and helped the Tigers to a 50-28 halftime edge.

"After we got the big, early lead, we kind of relaxed and they loosened up," Morse said. "Of course, it's easier a lot of times to play better ball when you're 20 points down."

The Spartans pulled to within 16 with 12:51 remaining before the Tigers buried Marymount with an avalanche of points.

The Tigers outscored Marymount down the stretch 38-24 for the final 97-69 margin.

The Tigers were led in scoring by Eddie Pope with 18 points. Jackson and Mel Irvin each scored 17 while Marc Harris tallied 15, while handing out eight assists.

Morse pointed to the Tigers' ability to shut down senior Lonnie Sanders as one of the keys to the 28-point victory.

"We were able to hold Sanders to three points in the first half. I think for them to play well, he has to score well," Morse said. "I think he's probably their second best player and we did a good job on him."

"Also, we were able to get on the boards really well in the first half and we were able to run them," Morse said.

If there was one problem that Morse saw with the game, it was in their ability to handle the press. The Tigers were guilty of 12 turnovers, including several against the man-to-man full court press the Spartans employed at times during the game.

"It took us out of our style of play," Morse said. "But, I think for every steal they made, we got an easy basket, too. So, it pretty much evened out. But, that's the way Marymount has played for years and years. It seems like it's always a rag-tag game when we play them."

The Tigers, with the win, improved to 3-0 on the young season. FHSU stays at home for a game tomorrow night with Drury College.

Wrestlers receive top spot

By ERIC JONTRA
Co-Sports Editor

Mention Fort Hays State to most Kansas sports fans and they think of Bill Morse, basketball, and the No. 2 ranked team in the NAIA preseason polls.

Unless, of course, the sports fans being spoken to are diehard wrestling fans. Then they think of Wayne Petterson, wrestling, and the No. 1 ranked team in the NAIA preseason polls.

Petterson, head coach of the FHSU wrestling program, has assembled one of the most talented squads in school history for the 1986-87 season, and many feel that the Tigers are capable of mounting a stiff challenge for the national championship.

But even though the Tigers do have three All-Americans returning from last year's team that placed 5th at the national tournament, being ranked No. 1 definitely took Petterson by surprise.

"We knew ahead of time that we would probably be ranked in the top three," Petterson said, "but coming out number one has us really excited. The kids are working hard, and in fact we've had the best preseason practices we've ever had."

According to Petterson, the Tigers began their preseason workouts on Sept. 1, but did not have an official practice on the mat until early November.

With three weeks of mat practice under their belts, the Tigers seem more than ready to get the season started, and they'll have the opportunity to do just that tomorrow when they travel to Omaha, Neb., to compete in the University of Nebraska-Omaha Open meet.

Leading the way for the FHSU grapplers this year are Wayne

Simons, Marc Hull, and Billy Johnson. All three were honored as All-Americans a year ago, and along with Eddie Harrington have been voted as team captains of the Tigers squad.

Simons, a senior who placed fourth at the NAIA National Meet last year, is being touted by Petterson as one of the best wrestlers in his division again this year.

"Wayne is moving up a weight class this year and that will be a little bit of an adjustment for him," Petterson said, "but I think he'll be pretty tough. He wrestled at that weight most of last year, and was pretty successful."

"In fact, he beat last year's eventual national runner-up at 167-pounds, so he should be one of the top two or three contenders in the nation in that weight class," Petterson said.

But Simons isn't that worried about the move to a higher weight, or the fact that opponents will be gunning for him because of his All-American status.

"I try and not think about people gunning for me," Simons said, "and just concentrate on being a good wrestler. I got All-American last year, and I want it again, so I definitely have something to work towards without worrying about people trying to take me."

And while Simons is busy adjusting to a new weight class full time, Hull will also be attempting to deal with being an All-American. However, he will be in the same class this year as he was a year ago when he placed third at the NAIA National Meet.

Only a junior, Hull doesn't appear to have missed a stride in his off-season workouts, something that Petterson attributes to the NAIA

All-Star team he traveled with this past summer.

"Both Marc and Wayne gained some experience with that team overseas this summer," Petterson said, "and Marc was voted the outstanding performer on that team."

"I just don't know what to say about Marc that hasn't already been said, and there's no doubt that he'll be the number one contender in his weight class. We're really looking for some big things out of him," Petterson said.

The final All-American wrestler on the Tigers team is Johnson, who as a freshman last year placed second at the NAIA National Meet.

Johnson, who wrestles in the 118-pound weight class, has also looked extremely good in the preseason workouts. The only thing that concerns his coach is how Johnson will handle the pressure of being a returning All-American.

"Right now there isn't that much pressure," Johnson said, "but next semester, when the season really gets underway, there will be more pressure. But that's how good athletes become great athletes, by dealing with the pressure."

"My goal is to be a national champion this year, and if I can handle the pressure now there shouldn't be any at all when it comes time for the national tournament again," Johnson said.

Petterson agrees wholeheartedly. "What we're most concerned about with Billy, Marc, and Wayne," Petterson said, "is how they handle the pressure of being an All-American. They've all got a name for themselves now, so people will be shooting for them."

"But we've been talking to them quite a bit about dealing with the pressure and I think it has helped. Most of all, they can't put too much pressure on themselves," Petterson said.

Although he didn't make it as an All-American, Harrington was still a driving force behind the FHSU squad last year, and he has set his sights high for his senior season.

Lady Tigers snap road losing skid

By KEVIN KRIER
Co-Sports Editor

Playing four consecutive road games early in the season is a task difficult for any basketball team. But having to face this situation with a first-year coach and trying to implement a new system can make that a most formidable task. Fortunately for the Fort Hays State Lady Tigers basketball squad, they endured the four-game road swing and capped the trip with a hard-earned 57-48 victory over Hastings College.

The storyline was a familiar one for the Lady Tigers Wednesday night as they rushed to a 23-22 halftime edge.

The halftime edge was the third time in five games that FHSU held the lead at intermission. But FHSU Lady Tiger Basketball Coach John Klein did not want to see a repeat performance of Monday night's contest with Kearney State College.

The Lady Tigers led 30-26 at halftime, only to see it slip away in the second half.

This time, however, there would be no repeat. FHSU came out and took control in the second half en route to the nine-point victory.

"We came out in the second half rather tentative in our earlier losses, and it looked like we just wanted to protect the lead," Klein said. "We didn't really attack the way we should have."

"But last night (Wednesday) the fire was in their eyes, and they played to win," Klein said. "Our motion offense really clicked and we played tough man-to-man defense the entire night."

Junior center Rhonda Cramer led the Lady Tigers in the scoring column with 16 points. Junior Penny Fischer tallied 14 points and freshman Chris Biser completed FHSU's double digit scoring with 12 points.

The Lady Tigers shot 31 percent from the floor and 75 percent from the charity stripe, while Hastings connected on a mere 30 percent from the floor and 60 percent from the free throw line.

Klein credited his team with playing with poise down the stretch and some clutch free-throw shooting to preserve the win.

"We got some good calls by the officials down the stretch. We were running our motion offense incredibly well," Klein said. "They either fouled us to put us at the line, or we managed to break wide open under the basket."

And Lynette Nichol hit two big free throws for us in the final minutes to help preserve the lead," Klein said. "They worked awfully hard and it's great to see that hard work pay off for them."

FHSU now stands at 2-3 on the season and prepares for the first of three straight home contests Saturday night against District 10 rival St. Mary of the Plains College.

"From what I've been told, St. Mary's is a pretty big rivalry and the girls are really looking forward to the game," Klein said. "I'm not going to let this team get down. The players know the coaches are behind them and we go to war as one."

"This is my senior year and my last year as a wrestler," Harrington said, "and I want to have a good showing. I was so close to All-American last year, and this year I don't want to miss."

Harrington wrestled extremely well at the National NAIA Meet last year, but lost early in the tournament and was unable to fight back through the consolation rounds.

And while Harrington will be trying his fortunes in the 142-pound weight class, Petterson expects junior Shaun Smith to contribute in a big way to the Tigers team.

"Shaun scored some points for us last year," the FHSU coach said, "and he looks to have had the best off-season of anybody on the team. His strength has improved tremendously and so has his technique, so we're pretty excited about him."

syndrome surgery, and Cary just got out of the hospital from a chronic back thing that we're still trying to work on," Tawntita said.

Although injuries have already hit her team, Tawntita said she is optimistic about the return of the three players who experienced setbacks.

"Debbie is making good progress," Tawntita said, "and with her it's just a matter of time to heal the wounds from the surgery. (Shelly) is also a matter of strength. The knee has just not rehabilitated as quickly as what we expected."

"With Cary, we don't know what the doctors are going to say. At this point we're just kind of thinking positive that Cary will be back; it might just take a little bit of time," Tawntita added.

The remaining nine women get their first taste of competition of the season with an intrasquad clinic scheduled for tomorrow at noon in the gymnasium room in Cunningham Hall.

Although the competition is simply intrasquad with no other teams participating and the event has been an annual part of the season, Tawntita said this year's scrimmage has a different twist.

"We've always had the scrimmage, but I've always judged it myself," Tawntita said. "This will be the first time we've paid for the officials to come in."

Tawntita said the purpose of bringing in officials is to provide the women with feedback after their performances.

"The real reason we're doing it is because after the meet, the officials will be meeting with each individual and giving them indications of what they're lacking in their routine and where they need to improve," Tawntita said.

The first competitive meet for the FHSU squad will be Dec. 5 at the Rocky Mountain Open, hosted by the US Air Force Academy at Colorado Springs, Colo., and Tawntita said the intrasquad clinic will help prepare her team for their opening meet.

"It's kind of a preparation to get them geared-up, but most important is probably the information they're going to gain from the judges," Tawntita said. "It will help them find out what they can really do at this point and where they need to improve, because that's the only way they're going to increase their scores."

Highland juco stand-out joins FHSU roster

Maybe the rich do get richer. The Fort Hays State Tigers, ranked second in the NAIA, have added yet another top-notch player to a roster already dotted with superstar players.

Anthony Williams, a 6-2 junior guard from Kansas City, Mo., arrived in Hays this past weekend and will be eligible for action with the Tigers next semester when he begins attending classes.

Williams had intended to attend FHSU at the beginning of the current semester, but encountered financial difficulties last summer that he felt deserved prompt attention.

FHSU Head Coach Bill Morse said he is excited about Williams' arrival, and feels that he could help considerably as a ballhandler for the Tigers.

"We signed Anthony last spring and expected him in the fall," Morse said, "but he had some financial difficulties that he had to take care of. He took care of them and he's ready to go now."

"Anthony should give us a real shot in the arm second semester. He looks really good in practice, and should help our ballhandling a little bit," Morse said.

The biggest obstacle facing Petterson and his assistant coach Dave Rochholz is putting all this talent together into a squad that wrestles as a team, and not as individuals.

But Petterson doesn't see much of a problem with that.

"We have some good team unity right now," Petterson said, "and some great leaders in our four captains. The only thing that concerns me is our lack of depth, but hopefully that won't be a problem."

"We had a great year last year, and this year could be even better. On paper, we have the capabilities to be much better, but we'll just have to wait and see," Petterson said.
