Local crime down

By CARL PETZ
News Editor

Despite the state's increase in criminal offenses, Hays crime decreased 10 percent from 632 to 569 in the third quarter of 1986. The figures come from a Kansas Bureau of Investigation report on quarterly crime statistics.

"We have the same amount of officers doing the same amount of work," Captain Don Deines, Hays Police Department, said. "It's just that the public has helped us out a lot," he said.

Deines said these figures were not campus-related and the Hays Police Department does not work at all on the Fort Hays State campus.

"There are, however, students who live off-campus who may be victims or who possibly contribute to these figures," Deines said.

University Police Chief Don Brown said he had not seen the report or any figures, so he could not comment on the statistics.

"The university is usually included in the reports that we receive," Brown said.

Deines said the figures usually are sent to the media before they reach the police departments.

Crime in Ellis County also decreased 2.5 percent for the third quarter of 1986 with a figure of 728 criminal acts. There was a total of 747 offenses in 1985.

The number of arrests made in Ellis County was 697 with 599 of those being adults. This number is the eighteenth largest of the 105 Kansas counties, the report said.

Reports released by the KBI show crime statistics have risen in both of the Kansas quarterly crime statistic categories.

The categories include part one and part two crimes.

Part one crimes consist of murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny/theft, motor vehicle theft and arson.

Part two crimes include such offenses as assault, battery, vehicular homicides, kidnapping, forgery and other less or non-violent criminal acts.

The report said there was a total of 31,844 part two crimes in 1986.

Part one-crimes rose 10.9 percent in the state from the January through September period, figures released by the KBI said.

The total amount of these crimes in 1985 was 79,252, while the 1986 figure was 87,905 offenses.

"Approximately 300 local law enforcement agencies reported to the KBI for the January through September period in 1985 and 86," the report said.

"Violent crimes increased 3.4 percent with murder being the only violent crime to show a decrease," the report said.

Figures showed property crimes rose 11.6 percent with burglary reflecting the largest increase.

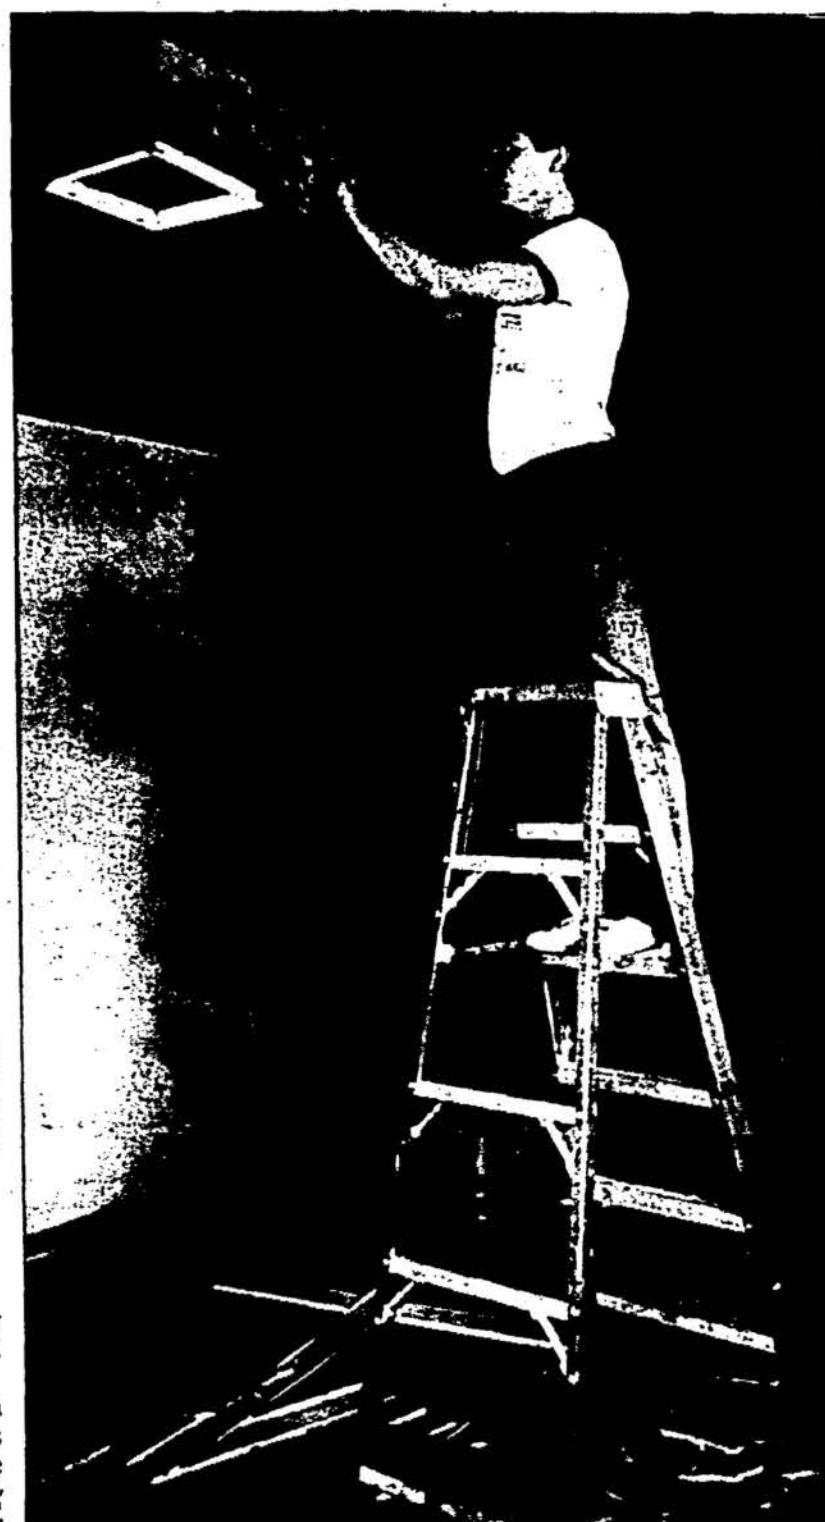

The value of property stolen increased 16.2 percent, which increased the figure to $47,242,544 the report said.

Property recovered also increased 17.5 percent, which left the net property loss at $29,662,830 for 1986, the report said.

The total percentage of property recovered was 37.2 percent up from the 1985 figure of 36.8 percent.

The report said the number of law enforcement officers who were assaulted declined by three from 765 to 762.

Arson offenses reported increased 33.4 percent, but the value of property damage declined 19.8 percent from the 1985 figure, the report said.

Visitations may be cut

Student teaching is just one more of the areas on campus that might be affected by Gov.-elect Mike Hayden's 3.8 percent budget cuts.

Although it is too early for department personnel to be sure, they are already planning for a budget decrease.

"I don't know for sure" what the education budget will be, Richard Baker, professor of education, said. "I think a lot of things will be affected."

Baker said right now rather than planning cutbacks on the number of visits Fort Hays State personnel makes to student teachers at schools, they are streamlining the budget to make it more efficient.

One cost saving device is to place students closer to Hays, Bob Chalender, department of education chairman, said.

"We're going to place them as close to Hays as possible," he said.

Baker said he is trying to place students in a similar area so out-of-the-way visits will not have to be made. Students will also be placed in conjunction with travel routes of continuing education and other departments.

This, Baker said, will make it more efficient for instructors to visit students on the same day they would be teaching a continuing education class in another town.

Baker said he would rather not see the number of visitations cut.

"I don't want to let the evaluation of the kids in the field suffer."

He said he is looking at a minimum of three trips per semester to visit student teachers.

There are approximately 130 student teachers for the spring semester, Baker said. This is comparable to last spring's number of teachers as this fall's number is comparable to last fall's number.

Entertainment coming to Backdoor

By DONNA TUCKER
Senior Staff Writer

The destiny of the Backdoor in Custer Hall was decided last night.

Representatives of SAGA food service, the Resident Hall Association, Memorial Union Activities Board, Housing, McMinder Hall and BACCHUS made important decisions about the future of the Backdoor.

The Backdoor was formerly known as a bar and grill. Since the new alcohol policy took effect in the fall of 1985, however, interest in the Backdoor has decreased. Now it serves only late-night dinners to meal ticket holders.

To combat the Backdoor's declining popularity, the group initially decided to move the late-night food service from the Backdoor to the McMinder Hall cafeteria.

But beginning with the 1987 spring semester, the Backdoor will become a snack bar and entertainment center for the Fort Hays State campus.

Resident Hall Association president Eric Rogers, Great Bend junior, was not completely happy with the decision.

"I felt the best situation would have been to run the coupons (meal tickets) and snack bar at the same time," Rogers said, "but I believe in the democratic system, and it just didn't work that way."

However, the food service issue was not the only concern of the committee.

"Our main objective is to make the Backdoor a fun place for campus activities," Rogers said.

That is the goal of Tony Naab,

Liberal sophomore and Backdoor representative from MUAB and RHA.

Naab, for instance, has taken a poll of hall residents and has compiled a list of movies to be shown on a weekly or twice-weekly basis. Movies have been previously shown.

RHA has other plans too. "We're also hoping to have a DJ once a week and dances once in a while," Naab said.

MUAB plans to move much of its programming out of the Memorial Union and into the Backdoor.

In the first three weeks of the spring semester, MUAB has already planned many events for the Backdoor, I.B. Dent, director of student activities, said.

The first week of school includes a game night and a movie night scheduled in the Backdoor.

During the second week, in addition to games and movies, Michael Johns will perform in a music and comedy Sundowner concert. The Sundowner will offer a Sunday night supper at the Backdoor, since the residence halls do not serve Sunday dinner.

In addition, Dent said other events are in the works, such as a night of Family Feud.

"We'd like to get teams together from sororities and fraternities and organizations and make it really fun," Dent said.

As these activities are being planned, Mike Munkel and Kevin McCoy of SAGA will be setting up a cash-only snack bar. And Munkel said he looks forward to making the Backdoor a popular place.

"The snack bar will work in conjunction with the committee," Munkel said. "If we're going to work with the Backdoor, we're going to make it an attractive place to be."

The menu, hours of operation and more of the programming for the Backdoor will be decided at the next meeting of the group on Monday. Plans for redecorating will also be discussed.

Dent, like Munkel, is hoping that this project will be successful.

"I don't see this as an RHA building or an MUAB building," Dent said. "I see this as any other building on campus -- for the whole university."

Cards mailed to help Sheridan

By WAYNE LAUGENSEN
Staff Writer

All they want for Christmas is a truckload of money.

"We have some folks who could make this a very happy Christmas for Fort Hays State," Ron Pflughoft, vice president for development, alumni and university relations, said.

Pflughoft said the university is counting on Christmas donations to help complete a fund raising effort to renovate Sheridan Coliseum. The western Kansas landmark is slated to become a performing arts center by 1990.

"If you'd write me a check for $400,000 we'd name it, and be done with it," Pflughoft said.

But that, Pflughoft said, is not likely to happen. So what officials want to do this Christmas season is complete the fund drive $500 at a time. This, they hope, will be accomplished through the sponsorship of seats.

"The seats alone could do it. If we could complete that project it would generate $600,000," Pflughoft said.

Yesterday the Sheridan project received three new seat sponsorships, bringing the number of sponsored seats to 379. Each seat in the coliseum can be sponsored for $500. Pflughoft said the university mailed out 5,000 Christmas cards yesterday encouraging seat sponsorship.

"The seat project is a good way for some of the younger and older alumni, who don't have a lot of money, to get involved with this project," Pflughoft said.

The 5,000 cards were sent to members of the Alumni Association. Previous mailing campaigns have each spurred about 100 sponsorships. While Pflughoft thinks the Christmas spirit will increase the number this time, he does not think the mailing will complete the drive.

"I'd love to say we'd be done with it by Jan. 1, but I think it will go beyond that," Pflughoft said.

The fund drive has already raised more than $1.5 million, but needs to raise $2 million. If it does, the renovation project will secure an additional $4 million in state funding.

"That baby will be taken care of whether I can tell you we have the $400,000 or not," Pflughoft said.

Brian Murray, director of planning, said he expects the first phase of construction to begin late next spring. He said construction bids for phase one will begin in January.

The first phase of construction will involve the installation of new windows and the repair and replacement of limestone blocks. Before phase one begins, however, a special crew will begin removing asbestos from the building's interior.

"That's a separate contract and involves the work of a specially qualified crew," Murray said.

Murray has been working on the Sheridan project since 1978. Murray has resigned his position at FHSU and will be replaced in January.

"I've been involved in this project for a long time. It's far enough along now that I feel confident in turning it over," Murray said.

Before any of the actual renovation begins, Pflughoft and other officials will be touring the building looking for mementos. Pflughoft said he would like to salvage bits and pieces of the old building that could be sold as souvenirs.

They will be doing this while school maintenance crews remove plumbing, various fixtures and the lowered ceilings from the building.

"We thought about salvaging pieces of the old basketball floor that some of the old greats played and walked on. We were disappointed, however, to find out that it is not the original floor," Pflughoft said.

Pflughoft said they have other ideas for mementos but admitted that the search is difficult.

"When you tour it, looking for salvageable items, you don't find a lot, because this has always been a very functional building. But there are things to be salvaged," Pflughoft said.

Pflughoft said Sheridan will not have the largest performing arts center in the Regents system but thinks it will be one of the largest and one of the best.

"We feel real good about what we're doing. Not only will we have an excellent facility, but we will be preserving a historical landmark," Pflughoft said.

One of the selling points on the building has been that it will enable FHSU to attract fine arts performers from around the nation. But more importantly, Pflughoft said, is that the building will serve FHSU students and the Hays community.

"A lot of people think we're doing this just so we can bring in operas and ballets from New York. The building will enable us to do that type of thing, but more importantly we're building this for the use of our own students who are involved in theater and music," Pflughoft said.

Earth faces destruction in Trek IV

Reviewed by Bryon Cannon

As Star Trek IV -- The Voyage Home opens, Admiral James T. Kirk, and Commanders Scott, McCoy, Sulu, Uhura and Chekov are on Vulcan, preparing their captured Klingon Bird of Prey for the return to Earth, to face court-martial by Starfleet for the various offenses they committed in the previous adventure.

But as they approach Earth, they receive an emergency warning from the President of the United Federation of Planets to avoid Earth at all costs. An alien probe is creating havoc on the planet and Earth may not survive.

The ever-aware Spock recognizes the transmissions from the probe and tells Kirk that the solution to the crisis lies in Earth's past.

The crew journeys to the San Francisco of 1986, where they split into three teams to accomplish the various tasks required to return to the 23rd century and save Earth.

The cast is reunited for the final chapter of the trilogy of Kirk's return to space and Spock's death. All the familiar character relationships are here. The characters relate to each other as old friends should.

This is a vastly more humorous movie than the other three. The script reads like "The Trouble With Tribbles" with just the right amount of "The Enterprise Incident" and "Court-Martial" for suspense and drama.

The cast has never looked or acted better. William Shatner reprises his role as Admiral Kirk with a flair worthy of a nova. Leonard Nimoy is a wonderfully confused Spock and also directed the movie. DeForest Kelley, as Dr. McCoy, is as ascerbic as ever, and the supporting characters are finally given a little something to do other than their standard lines.

No two fans will agree on the merits of the ending of the movie, but it is a definite must-see-several-times show.

Pressures of finals may lead to suicide

By LISHA BARKOW
Staff Writer

Everyone who has entered the world of a college education has suffered from the pressures of homework, due dates, and exams.

These pressures, sometimes accompanied by drug abuse, can lead to suicide for many college students.

"It doesn't seem that it is limited to specific problems, pressures that basically everyone might have," Walter Hill, manager of emergency services at the High Plains Mental Health Center, said.

"Everyone has different pressures and they all handle them in different ways."

A five-year study on suicide conducted at Southern Illinois and all of the Big 10 universities, found that too often college students see suicide as a problem solver.

"Some students find themselves in the midst of an intolerable situation and see no other way," Evelyn Gauthier, a psychologist at the University of Michigan and also part of the study, said.

The study also found that those with the highest risk of suicide are those at the junior level and the graduate level of college.

Especially males at the junior level are facing the stress of achievement tests and career decisions while graduate students are also under extreme academic pressure to succeed.

Although researchers involved in the study could not give reason why, September and March seem to be the most common months for suicides.

"Use of chemicals is one of many dimensions which increase suicide potentiality," JoAnn McFall, psychologist at Michigan State, said.

Students who are "chemically dependent" tend to show decreasing capability to cope. Although not all users try to kill themselves, the potential is there. The person is no longer in control and that "adds fuel to the fire," McFall said.

Another factor that may contribute to suicidal tendencies is the stresses of going away to college.

For most, going away to college means leaving home and getting the first real taste of responsibility. If kids do not develop any sort of independent skills while still in the home, they will find it hard to live away from their family.

There have been several nationally broadcast movies dealing with the subject of suicide, and they have become controversial.

A study published in the New England Journal of Medicine reported that there was a 7 percent increase in the number of suicides nationwide after the airing of some of these movies.

Some broadcast executives, however, have reason to disagree. After the airing of a movie called Silence of the Heart on CBS, various organizations and stations were flooded with calls from people wanting help.

"The networks usually broadcast public service announcements and news coverage about suicide after such programs," Pam Halsan of CBS said.

Stations will put a telephone number on the screen for people to call if they or someone they know is in trouble.

There are helplines and services in the Hays area that people who are troubled with thoughts of suicide can call.

Helpline is a crisis call service. The crisis line number is 628-1041.

Late aid forms no problem

By JoANN YOUNGER
Staff Writer

Students will get financial aid forms late this year, but will not have to wait longer to get their aid money, according to a College Press Service report.

Karl Metzger, director of financial aid, said that he does not see a problem with the forms being later this year.

"We received them on Tuesday," Metzger said, "and students can pick them up anytime."

Metzger said the hold-up should not delay the financial aid process.

The College Board, whose College Scholarship Service processes many student aid applications for the government, said it has been slowed down because it had to change application forms to comply with the new Higher Education Act of 1986.

Board president George Hanford said that there will be an estimated $20 billion available in various types of federal, state and institutional financial aid for students enrolling in college in the fall of 1987.

Hanford said that the College Scholarship Service could not print the application forms until Congress passed and President Reagan signed the new law, which has to do mainly with independent students.

Independent students can qualify for more aid than students whose parents pay part of their college costs. Under the new act, students who turn 24 by Jan. 1, 1988, will be considered independent for the 1987-88 academic year.

The forms usually are available by mid-November and should be completed as soon as possible after Jan. 1, 1987.

Jim Hart, campus security officer, places a ticket on a pick-up yesterday morning in front of West Hall. The fines from the tickets are added to the restricted fee account.

Enrollment means deadline

Time drawing near to pay fines

By JANE COSTIGAN
Staff Writer

During finals week, everyone is concerned with taking care of all the little things necessary to complete this semester. One of those little things may be paying a parking ticket, or perhaps several.

Each semester some Fort Hays State students receive a letter from Don Brown, chief of university police, informing them that, "It is necessary that all traffic fines be paid."

Included in that letter is a list of the student's unpaid fines," Brown said.

"These fines must be paid before a student can graduate, transfer, re-enroll for another semester's study, or clear their transcript," Brown said.

The university officers check the parking lots and streets daily for students in staff parking places and people with expired or no permits, Brown said.

"The first three weeks of a semester we will give out 250 to 300 tickets a day," Brown said. "Now it's down to probably 50 a day," he said.

The money from parking tickets and permits goes into a restricted fee account, Brown said. It can only be used for the care and upkeep of the parking lots. That includes money for signs, paint and the parking permits, he said.

"A few years ago, the department had $70,000 saved to put black top on the lot across from the union, but the bids were a lot higher than that," Brown said.

"The last thing we've done is Gustad Road (the road between Malloy Hall and Gross Memorial Coliseum)," Brown said.

Another student appeared before the traffic committee over his complaint.

"During the exterminator's convention, the Memorial Union parking lot was closed by 9 a.m. By 9:15 a.m. even the lot behind Malloy was closed and traffic was being directed to the Gross lot," Randy Mathews, Salina senior, said.

"I ended up parking in a staff parking place, getting a ticket, and being late for class," Mathews said.

"I appeared before the traffic committee a few weeks later. I told them that I appreciated that they needed to maintain public relations by holding these conventions," Mathews said.

"But it's not fair to students, who pay $8 to park on campus and then are forced to park off campus when they have conventions," he said.

"Students should be the number one concern of the university," Mathews said.

"The committee discussed this issue and came up with some tentative solutions," Brown said.

"Next year, they will try to plan conventions far enough ahead to put an ad in the Leader warning students when there may be a parking problem," he said.

Brown also said that for such major events as the math relays, the buses will drop students off and park at the Coliseum lot.

There is also the campus psychological services of the Kelly Psychological Services.

"That's one of the things we're here for," Richard Schellenberg, associate professor of psychology, said. "It's important for a person who has suicidal thoughts not to suffer in silence."

The Kelly Clinic personnel are trained to work with persons who are suicidal.

"It's also important to emphasize that if someone has a friend or knows someone who mentions ideas of suicide, they should be taken seriously and as a sign to help them to seek help," Schellenberg said.

New toys too violent

Christmas season is upon us. And with it comes the latest craze in children's toys.

But this year is a little different. Beginning yesterday and running until Dec. 24, editorial cartoonists across the nation will be using their space to combat the combat toys on the market.

These cartoonists are following the lead of cartoonist Bob Staake, who became concerned with war toys after his two-year-old son was found with a plastic hand grenade.

Staake says that these war toys, or action toys as manufacturers call them, make up 35 percent of toy sales. This makes it a $2.1 billion a year industry.

This year's top seller is G.I. Joe, whose aircraft carrier sells for $130. Other top sellers include Laser Tag, a toy gun based on weapons of the future, Transformers and M.A.S.K. action figures.

Surprisingly toys that are selling well in Hays are not the so-called war toys. The hottest sellers seem to be Cricket Doll, Laser Tag, Daisy Pursuit, a toy gun similar to Laser Tag, and Fisher Price's Magic Vac representatives from Wal-Mart, K-Mart and Toy Towne said.

The old-fashioned board games have become very popular again in the Hays area. Big sellers in this area are Pig Pong, Mousetrap and Deluxe Wheel of Fortune.

Toy Towne and K-Mart officials said that the old-fashioned games and toys seem to be the most popular item this Christmas. They said all Fisher Price toys are doing very well, along with skateboards and train sets. One of the best sellers at Toy Towne in this category is Brio. This is a wooden train set geared for pre-school aged children. The train is made in Sweden.

Toys included on a list released by Americans for Democratic Action that pose safety problems are Hot Wheels Tricar X-8, Voltron Blazing Sword Set, Stack and Pop, Rambo M-24 Assault Rifle and Crack Shot Automatic Pistol.

Staake says the best toy on the market is Etch-A-Sketch. This item is also on ADA's list of recommended toys.

Maybe it's time to slow down today's fast pace and look more closely at these types of toys. Are they really good for today's children?

After all, how did this generation ever grow up without a Rambo M-24?

First semester at college memorable time

I never know exactly what to say when someone asks me how I like school. I usually just say something like, "It's fine," or "I'm having fun," but actually it's hard to say what I think of college.

Here it is, almost the end of my first semester. It doesn't seem like it's been four months since I walked onto this campus, a "green" freshman.

Now that I've had some time to think about it, there are some impressions of Fort Hays State that I'd like to share, so other freshmen can compare, and upperclassmen can reminisce.

First there was getting moved into the dorm. It seemed like I had so much stuff to move into that ugly, bare room! Now that I've lived there a while it feels just like home, and all those closets I never thought I'd fill are piled high.

One of the first thoughts I had when I moved in was, "How am I ever going to learn who all the people on my floor are?" It didn't take any time at all until they were my best friends, and I knew all their names.

Then there was the first day of class. I'd never seen so many totally unfamiliar faces in all my life as I did at 8:30 a.m. on Aug. 25.

And the walk to Cunningham Hall (that's connected to Gross Memorial Coliseum, for those of you who've never heard of it) seemed so far. I never would have guessed it could seem even farther when there was snow on the ground!

Even worse than the trip from Malloy to Cunningham was the walk back from there to Rarick. All that way and up three flights up stairs in only ten minutes--I was sure I'd be setting some new record.

That class I took because everyone said it was an "easy credit" turned out to be a lot harder than I expected. However, it was balanced out by the good grade I'm getting in that tough required course.

My first football game as a college student was quite an experience. It was so cold and miserable, but my friends and I had fun just because it was something new. Then there were the afternoon games, where it was so hot I thought I might melt right there in the stands. Watching the Tigers win was worth it, though.

I'd never been to Oktoberfest before this year. Oktoberfest and Homecoming were a lot of fun, even though the weather was bad and some of my plans did get changed.

Then there were some bad things that happened this semester, too. That low test grade because I "didn't have time to study" really made it rough in class for the rest of the semester.

And the lessons that I learned from that party are some that I'm not likely to forget soon.

The visit to the campus security office to pay for a parking ticket when I needed to save my money for other things didn't brighten my day any, either.

For the first month of school, I was awake every day at 6 a.m., even on days when I didn't have class until 11:30. There seemed to be so much to do. Now I can hardly get up half an hour before class starts, and I have even more to do.

I guess people always have expectations for the unknown. Some are met and some aren't. It's important to be realistic in one's expectations, and not be disappointed if not everything one wants comes true.

Rather than expecting things to happen to or for you, it would be better to decide some things you want to achieve, and make that your goal. Having direction and something to be motivated for can make anyone feel better about the time they are spending at school.

I guess it's safe for me to say that FHSU has left a favorable impression on me over my first semester. The things I learned in class, the accomplishments I made at work, the fun I had in the activities I've participated in, and all the friends I've made have really made this a home away from home for me.

Television, telephone tools for shopping

It's Saturday Night Live!

No, it's one of those cheap commercial you see late at night that try to pawn goods (like a genuine Chinese knife) for only $19.95.

Actually it seems almost like a cross between a commercial and Saturday Night Live. In reality it is what is referred to as home shopping.

These types of shows use a mixture of game-show, evangelistic and hard-sell tactics. It is one of the latest fads in television and marketing that has attracted the biggest names in cable television and retailing.

It has all the high-class style of junk mail. It is usually hosted by hosts with names like Budget Bob and Sam Save.

All a consumer needs to participate in this is a television, a telephone and a credit card. Shoppers can watch these types of programs on cable television, then when they see an item they wish to purchase, they call in and put it on their credit card.

Usually the merchandise is on the screen for only a limited amount of time. Once the item goes off the screen, it may not be purchased.

Some of these television shopping shows have some men trying to sell you products who are insincere and dressed like pimps. In a way, it is like an auction in that the salesman talks like an auctioneer would and the studio audience raises numbers for the items they want. Of course, all the items are selling as quick as they come on the screen (at least the show and the host try to project that idea).

On one show, the host spins around in a circle after every item sold.

These shows have the reputation for selling close-out and liquidation merchandise. According to an article in the Dec. 15 issue of Business Week, Sears, Roebuck & Co., is now joining into this new craze. Unlike most of the other programs like this, Sears will emphasize high-quality merchandise at regular prices. It will be sort of like a video of their catalog. Some of the merchandise will be offered on the television before it is even offered in the catalogs or in stores.

You can now buy everything from junk to expensive diamonds and jewels to life insurance to furniture from these type of programs.

What makes consumers tune into these home shopping programs?

There are several advantages to home shopping.

Once a consumer sees or hears an advertisement, it may be awhile before the consumer gets to a store to buy the product. With home shopping, the consumer has the opportunity to buy the product right then when it is still fresh in the consumer's mind.

Second, consumers will probably buy more when they are relaxed. They can go shopping without fighting the crowds, dragging the kids around, and walking for hours. By using the home shopping system, consumers can shop in the privacy of their own homes.

Cable Value Network shoppers can return anything with no questions asked. All shoppers like their problems and complaints handled immediately. CVN usually has the merchandise at the consumer's house within four to 10 days with the help of United Parcel Service. So the prompt service is another plus.

If some or all of these factors don't appeal to viewers then there is always another reason to watch this type of network - entertainment.

Is this a passing fad or a growing industry to which consumers will commit more and more of their dollar? Only time will tell for sure. However, the general consensus seems to be that it is only a novelty.

1987 predictions -- going out on a limb

What I like most about this time of the year, aside from Christmas, New Year's Eve, and finals week, is that it's the time for those wonderful predictions in the tabloids.

The only ones out this week are in the Globe. The creme de la creme will be out next week in the National Ink Waster.

These are from the Globe. To research this column, I bought this publication (and I use that term ever so loosely) wearing dark shades and a trenchcoat.

Here goes: What you can expect for 1987.

- Bob Newhart talks airline hijackers into surrendering.
- Stop, or I'll do the Bus Driver School routine!
- Bo Derek's career gets a giant boost when she co-stars with Tony Danza in a spoof of westerns called Bo-Danza.

- Worth setting the VCR for, don't you think?
- Sex expert Dr. Ruth Westheimer plays herself in a prime-time sitcom.

- ...with Jerry Mathers as (you know the rest).
- Refrigerator Perry quits football to market a new soft drink called Fridge.

- Bet that one's mighty nutritious.

- Marlon Brando falls for Twiggy in a movie where they star as a husband and wife wrestling tag team.

- Glad to see the old love stories will be back.

- The image of Christ will appear on television during the Super Bowl.

- Honey, Jim McMahon's goofing off again!

- Clint Eastwood opens up a fast food chain featuring buffalo burgers.

- Go ahead. Make mine medium rare.

- The Green River Killer gives himself up on Wheel of Fortune to Vanna White.

- Followed by her own spin-off, Vanna's Court.

- A non-melting ice cream becomes the rage.

- That's worth jumping around about, you think?

- Waterbeds are out and Jell-O beds become the rage.

- Whadya say, lime tonight, orange tomorrow?

- The first male pregnancy takes place in Australia.

- Funny, I can hear women around the world cheering at this one.

- Bob Hope joins Pope John Paul II in a world tour for global peace.

- Tell Dial-a-Tick you want tickets to the Hope and Pope Tour. Coming to a coliseum near you.

- Walter Cronkite becomes the new ambassador to the United Nations.

That's the way it is, Uncle Walter.

- Vanna White and Pat Sajak elope, but the marriage interferes with Wheel of Fortune.

- But honey, it's your turn to flip the letters tonight. I did it last night.

The above are all actual predictions. However, my personal psychic, the Swami Reever, has a few more:

- The Cosby Show suffers faltering ratings, due to their new competition, Good Fishing with Babe Winkelman.

- A new study will find that if your parents didn't have any children, neither will you.

- USA Today distribution boxes will be used as cathedrals for a bizarre new cult.

- Pizza delivery cars will be allowed to arrest motorists on the street for traffic violations.

- Miami Vice will stop being a TV fashion trend, replaced by Beverly Hillsbillies.

- President Reagan will replace cabinet members with football's Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

- Due to the success of Bruce Springsteen's live album, a similar set will be released by Chaco.

Here's predicting you have a good 1987.

Lack of defense key to Tiger loss

By ERIC JONTRA
Sports Editor

Bill Morse has been saying for several weeks that his Fort Hays State Tigers need to improve on their defensive play.

And on Tuesday night, the Tigers proved that in a big way as they dropped an 88-86 overtime loss at the hands of Kearney State College. With the loss, FHSU fell to 6-1 on the season.

To make matters even worse for the Tigers, they had several legitimate opportunities to put the Antelopes away, especially in the first half of action.

"If we would have just put the game away in the first half," Morse said, "I think we could have won the thing by 15 or 20 points. But we let them back in it, and then the crowd got into it and intimidated our guys while inspiring their guys."

Eddie Pope led the Tigers in scoring with 31 points, while Mark Harris added 22 points.

But according to Morse, FHSU could have all the offensive output in the world and still not win games unless the Tigers improve on their team defense.

"They played very well, but that was partially due to our poor defense," Morse said, "and we aren't going to win many games in this league playing defense like we did Monday night."

"I think they played over their heads, and I think we kind of tensed up, but things like that happen sometimes," Morse said.

Although many coaches subscribe to the theory that a loss early in the season can help a talented team, the FHSU head coach doesn't. Especially considering the fact that the loss to Kearney State was the Tigers' CSIC opener.

"We had our loss to the Spirit Express (a 78-74 exhibition loss) last week," Morse said, "and I don't think this one is going to do us any good. Losing to Spirit Express, we realized that we could have won if we had played hard, but I don't know what good a second defeat could possibly give us."

And the Tigers won't have much time to figure it out, either. FHSU will take part in the Blue Quail Classic in Bethany, Okla., this weekend.

The Tigers' first game of the tournament will be Friday night against Southwestern Oklahoma University. On Saturday, FHSU will hook up with Southern Nazarene in the final game of the tourney.

FHSU to play in tourney

By ERIC JONTRA
Sports Editor

With only two first-semester games remaining to be played, there is no way the Fort Hays State Lady Tigers can reach the .500 mark before the semester comes to a close.

But that doesn't bother John Klein in the slightest.

Klein, in his first year at the helm of the FHSU program, will guide his 4-7 squad into a tournament at the University of Southern Colorado this weekend hoping to see the Lady Tigers end the 1986 portion of their schedule with two victories.

It won't be easy, but the FHSU coach is still optimistic about his team's chances in the two-day tournament.

"I would be really disappointed," Klein said, "if we didn't come out of this tournament with at least a split."

Winning both games and the championship trophy would be a big feather in our cap, but a 1-1 record would be OK."

The first opponent for the Lady Tigers will be Western Colorado, and the two teams will square off tonight. Unfortunately, Klein and his squad don't know much about Western Colorado heading into the game.

"They beat Regis College (Denver) by 30 points," Klein said, "and we only beat them by two points. But I don't believe in comparing scores, so maybe we will be all right. We'll just have to see."

The Lady Tigers were given a day off Tuesday following a dramatic, come-from-behind victory over Bethany Monday night. And according to Klein, the team's

WHEN IS THE RIGHT TIME TO CALL YOUR BOYFRIEND?

- When the president of Phi Gamma Delta asks you to Saturday night's Fiji Formal.
- After raquetball class, to tell him that the instructor with the Australian accent and those blue eyes did wonders for your serve.
- When you just feel like telling him you miss him after all.

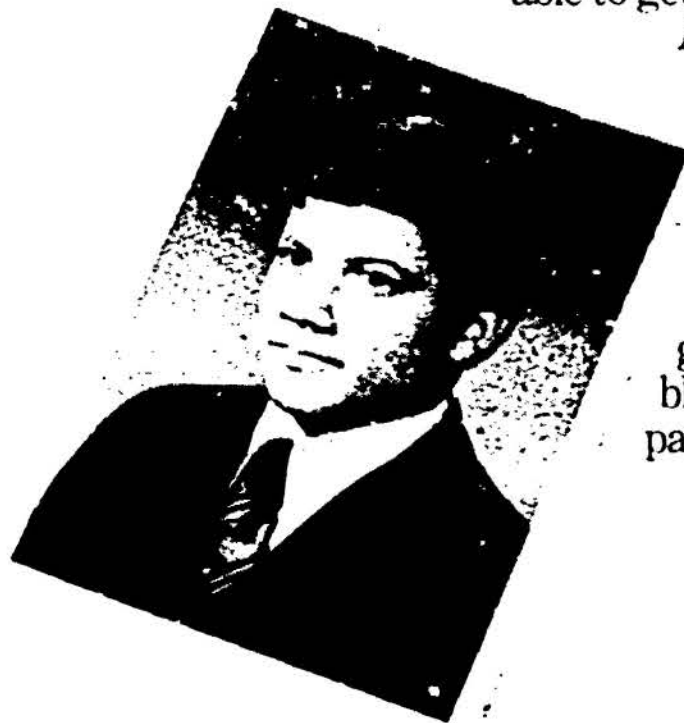

Maybe you shouldn't tell him everything that's going on. But if you still care about him, why not call and whisper some sweet things he'll never forget?

Like why you call using AT&T Long Distance Service, and why you trust AT&T's high quality service and exceptional value.

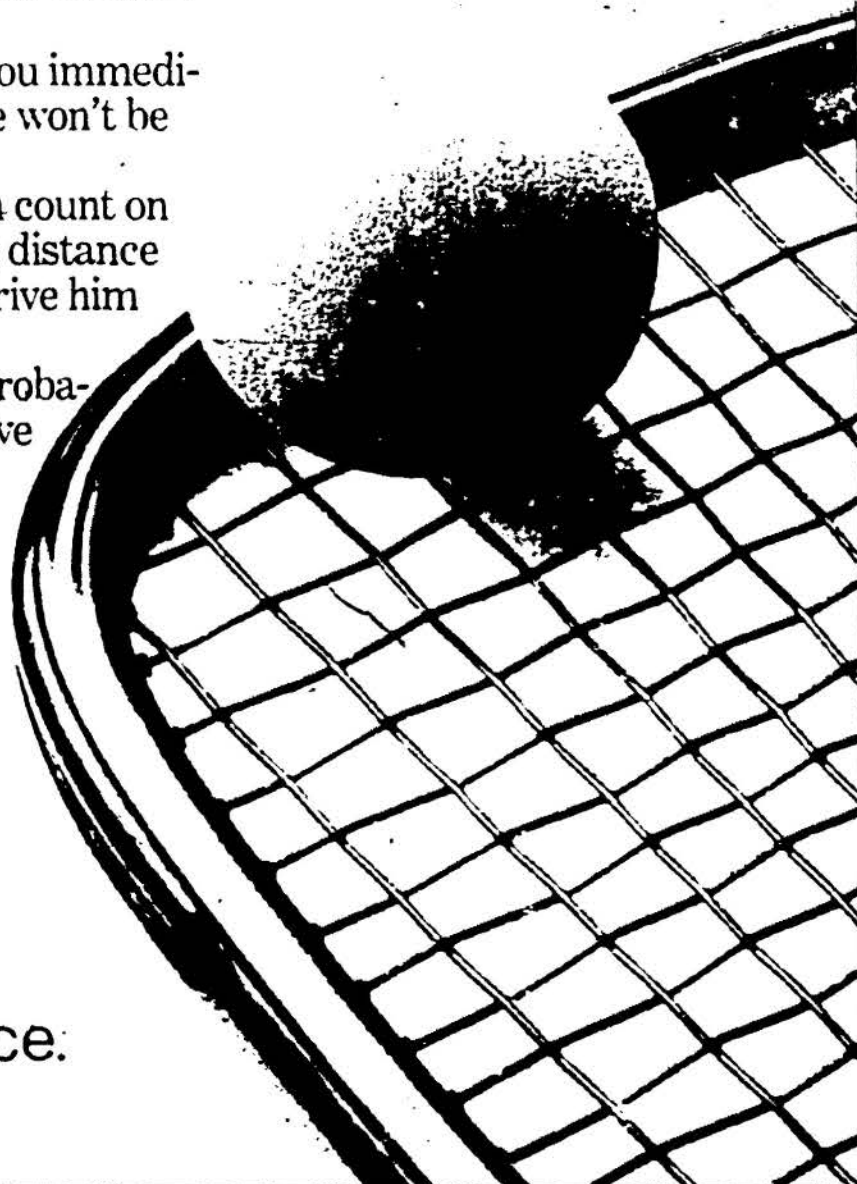

When you tell him that AT&T gives you immediate credit if you dial a wrong number, he won't be able to get you out of his mind.

And telling him you can count on AT&T for clear long distance connections will drive him crazy.

All of which will probably inspire him to drive out for the weekend, giving you an excuse to blow off that silly frat party after all.

New Orleans site for tournament

The Heat will head south

By ERIC JONTRA
Sports Editor

The majority of the students at Fort Hays State will probably spend their time away from school during Christmas break relaxing and getting geared up for second semester.

Unless, of course, they happen to be members of the FHSU intramural flag football champions, the McGrath Heat.

The Heat, through the help of both on and off-campus sponsors, will be rewarded for their undefeated season this past fall by having the chance to compete in the National Intercollegiate Flag Football Tournament at the University of New Orleans.

The tournament will begin on Dec. 28, and run through Jan. 2, 1987, with over 70 different teams competing.

The Heat had an opportunity to participate in the tournament last year, but members of the team were unable to raise enough money for the trip.

This year, however, that wasn't a problem.

"We were invited to the tournament last year," Doug Storer, one of the team's three captains, said, "but we couldn't find enough sponsors to make it. This year, we did."

"It will still cost each of us some, but not too much. We're very fortunate to get the sponsors we have this year," Storer said.

The team consists of 15 players, but not all of them will be able to make the trip. Still, the players that are making the trip are extremely excited.

According to Terry Duncan, another of the team's captains, the competition at the tournament will be fierce, with many NCAA teams competing in addition to the smaller NAIA schools.

"The southern schools are the teams that are usually really tough," Duncan said, "but I think we'll do all right. This is my first year on the team, and I'm really looking forward to the competition in New Orleans -- and the partying."

The team that manages to win the tournament will receive a trophy, individual plaques and shirts, with the top two teams also receiving tickets to the Sugar Bowl in the Superdome.

In addition, the two teams that play for the championship will play an exhibition game before the 1987 Sugar Bowl on New Year's Day.

Although the rules at the tournament will be significantly different than the rules the Heat played under in FHSU intramurals, Todd Pittenger, the remaining captain, thinks the team will do just fine.

"This tournament will be more like real football," Pittenger said. "The field is 80 yards long and 40 yards wide, and we can kick field goals and extra points. It's different than here, but we think we have a good team and we'll do OK."

The Heat has claimed two consecutive championship titles in FHSU intramurals, going undefeated in each of the past two seasons.

The squad will depart for New Orleans on Dec. 26, and the captains will take part in a meeting just before the tournament begins to receive additional information and find out who their opponents will be.

FHSU looking for extra effort

By ROBERT S. CAMPBELL
Sports Writer

Extra effort often means the difference between winning and losing in any sporting event.

With that in mind, Coach Wayne Petterson said he is looking for his Fort Hays State wrestlers to show improvement tomorrow when the Tiger grapplers take to the mats at the Kearney State College Open in Kearney, Neb.

"We're looking this week, if anything at all, to go out and really compete at a 110 percent level every time out," Petterson said. "A tournament like this, you're looking at six matches in one day, so we're looking for a 110 percent effort every match."

The Tigers are coming off what Petterson views as a sub-par performance at the FHSU Open last weekend. Although Petterson said he is somewhat disappointed from the Tigers' last meet, he also said he is optimistic.

"I don't think we're down," Petterson said. "I don't think we had that tremendous of a performance last week in the Fort Hays Open. We didn't perform all that well, but we didn't perform all that bad either."

Petterson said the less than best showing by his squad does not have him worried, and he thinks his wrestlers are ready to do what it takes to win.

"We had some good practices this week, and we've had some team discussions and we've decided we just need to loosen up and go out and take it to the people we got on the mat with us," Petterson said.

With Petterson hoping for better efforts, the FHSU grapplers appear to have the opportunity to please their coach this weekend as Petterson said the Kearney tournament does not sound too tough.

"From what I hear," Petterson said, "this may not be that large of a tournament. Quality-wise, it may not be too tough this year."

"It's not near as strong as the Fort Hays Invitational overall, but then again, like last year, we advanced three kids into the finals and they all had to wrestle the University of Iowa kids, and that's the best program in the country, period," Petterson said.

Petterson said he does not expect the University of Iowa to participate at the meet this year and expects Kearney State, Chadron State (Neb.), and his own Tigers to battle it out for the team title.

Although Petterson said he thinks his squad stands an excellent chance of performing well this weekend, he also said FHSU will be at somewhat of a disadvantage because of injuries.

"We're a little banged up right now," Petterson said. "We're not going to take Eddie Harrington (Derby senior), Marc Hull (Andover sophomore), and we're not going to take Shaun Smith (Colby senior), three of our regulars."

"They've got some minor injuries right now that we're just trying to get them healed up, and basically all that amounts to is time. We'll be back to full strength by the time our next meet rolls around," Petterson said.

Despite the injuries, Petterson said he thinks the team will still perform well, especially if they put out the effort he is looking for.

"Right now, basically what we're looking for, like I said, is just a 110 percent effort every time out, and if we can get that, we're going to be all right. We'll compete with anybody on our level."

Morse on '87 Festival staff Klein/ from page 5

A chance to work with some of the finest high school basketball players in the United States is now a reality for Fort Hays State head coach Bill Morse.

Morse has been selected as assistant coach to the North squad for the 1987 U.S. Olympic Festival in Chapel Hill, N.C.

"It should be a tremendous experience and a lot of fun from the standpoint that it is somewhat of a relaxed atmosphere," Morse said. "I'll probably make a lot of good contacts, meet a lot of players and get a chance to work with the very best in the country."

Jud Heathcoat of Michigan State University is the head coach of the North squad while will compete in the festival on July 18, 19, 20, and 22.

Morse will report to Chapel Hill on approximately July 12 for practice sessions and will return about July 23.

He received a letter from the Amateur Basketball Association United States of America (ABAUSA) which invited him to respond if he was interested in helping with the festival.

"I really don't have that much knowledge of how I was selected," Morse said, "but I do know Jud Heathcoat from Michigan and I think it will be a lot of fun working with him."

Coaches for the South, East and West basketball teams were also announced by the ABAUSA.

Eddie Sutton, University of Kentucky, will guide the South squad along with John Kresse, College of Charleston, and Buck Van Huss, Dobyns Bennet High School, Tenn.

At the helm for the East will be Lefty Driesell, University of Maryland, and assisting will be Charles Brown, Jersey City State College, and Vincent Cullen, Community College of Rhode Island.

The West squad will be piloted by Andy Russo, University of Washington, with assistant coaches Marty Holly, College of Idaho, and Nick Robertson, Beaverton High School, Ore.

practice on Wednesday was one of the best of the semester.

"We realized that Wednesday was our last all-out practice of the semester before Christmas break," the FHSU coach said, "and it was a great one. With every win we have, they believe a little more in what we're doing, and that helps."

And considering the fact that FHSU has battled an injury problem for the majority of this semester, a 4-7 record doesn't seem too terrible.

"If we can make it through this weekend," Klein said, "we're going to be better off all the way around next semester. Staci Derstein will be able to play with a brace on her knee, and Chris Biser's shoulder should be better."

"On top of that, Tara Nelson will be eligible, and that will help our guard play some. Really, I think finishing at .500 is a realistic goal as long as we don't have a lot of big injuries," Klein said.

The winner of the FHSU-Western Colorado contest will take on the University of Southern Colorado-Kansas Newman winner on Saturday to decide the champion.
