Hays native Seib detained in Iran

By BRAD VACURA
Sr. Staff Writer

A former Fort Hays State student and University Leader editorial page editor, Gerald Seib, was detained by the Iranian government in Tehran Saturday.
Seib, now a Middle East reporter for The Wall Street Journal, was one of 57 Western journalists invited into Iran to cover the Iran-Iraq war and attend a news conference.
Born and raised in Hays, Seib attended FHSU for one year, 1974-75, before he transferred to the University of Kansas where he graduated in 1978.
Seib's parents, Richard and Annette Seib, 1910 Main, Hays, said they were informed of their son's detention Saturday evening by Gerald's wife, Barbara Rosewicz, also a correspondent with the Journal.

Richard Seib said his wife, Annette, had just gotten home when Rosewicz called to tell them the news. Annette then called her husband at work to tell him.
"Our initial reaction was utter shock," Richard said, "disbelief more than anything because he was invited by the government to come into the country."
Richard said because his son is in the Middle East, he recognized that the possibility of this happening could occur. "The knowledge was there that it could always happen, but these things can happen anywhere."
"Our main concern has always been with plane hijackings and bombings because (Gerald and Barbara) are constantly flying in the Mideast," Richard said.

Gerald and Rosewicz, who met while going to school at KU, started the Journal's Middle East bureau in Cairo, Egypt, in January 1985, where they have lived ever since.
Gerald's brother Paul Seib, Great Bend, was the only Seib sibling who was able to come to Hays to be with his parents. He said when his brother attempted to leave Tehran with the other reporters in his group, he was taken into custody.
"When he was trying to get his visa and leave the country, (Iranian officials) told him he was being held up," Paul said. "He then went back to (the Esteghlal Hotel) and called Barbara and told her he wouldn't be back on the plane he expected to be on, and that there was a complication with his passport or visa."

After that, neither the Seibs nor Rosewicz have heard from Gerald. None of the members of the Seib family have been told where he is being held.
"We don't know where he's being held, or who's holding him or for what reason," Paul said.
Paul said while his brother did not say why he was having a problem getting his visa approved, the family is speculating that it might have something to do with a computer mix-up.
"The only thing we can figure out is that there was a computer mix-up, or that his last name sounds like someone they were looking for," he said. "It could be that the name might be spelled similar to something in their language or sound similar. Right now we think that might be the problem."

Dennis Farney, a native of Wilson and correspondent for the Journal in Kansas City, is staying with the Seibs in Hays to field all phone calls and work to quietly free Gerald.
Farney, also a graduate of the KU journalism school and friend to both Gerald and Rosewicz, said he was in Wilson, visiting relatives when the Journal called and informed him of Gerald's detention. He said the Journal then asked him to come to Hays to be with the family.
Farney said although everyone at the Journal knew being a Middle East correspondent could be dangerous, the newspaper's overall reaction to Gerald's detention was sheer bafflement.

"I talked to the New York office of The Wall Street Journal, and their initial reaction was one of bafflement," he said. "There were the questions of why he was being detained, and today the Journal is still trying to find out why he's being held."
"He hasn't been charged with anything. Right now we find that encouraging," Farney said.
Mike Walker, leader adviser from 1973-1977, was an instructor when Gerald attended FHSU. He said Gerald was "head and shoulders" See "Iran," page 3

Deadline nears for financial aid

(Editor's Note: This is the first of a two-part series detailing the financial aid process. Part two will be run in Friday's issue of The University Leader.)

The adage "Nice guys finish last" best describes baseball players who performed under Leo Durocher in the 1950s.
But, that line might also describe students who apply for financial aid as the deadline approaches.
At least in the eyes of Karl Metzger, director of student financial aid at Fort Hays State, they might finish last.
"Financial aid is a first come, first serve proposition," Metzger said.

"It isn't that way for Pell Grants and Guaranteed Student Loans. Those funds are non-exhaustable. They're always there," he said. "But when it comes to work study, National Direct Student Loans and Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, those funds are gone by April 15, so it's important to get the forms in right now."
The "forms" Metzger mentions refer to the Family Financial Statement, the first step any student must take in the long process of applying for financial aid.

Former Tiger cager Allen suffers injury

Former Fort Hays State basketball player Tyree Allen was listed in serious condition late last night after a two-car accident in the Gross Memorial Coliseum parking lot yesterday afternoon.
According to a spokesman at Wesley Medical Center, Wichita, the 22-year-old Allen suffered cervical (spine) injuries and arrived at Wichita from Hadley Regional Medical Center, Hays, at 7 p.m. last night. As of press-time, Allen was in surgical intensive care.
"He was transferred by LifeWatch to Wesley at about 5:30 p.m.," Debbie Scheimo, nursing supervisor at Hadley, said.
A dispatcher from the Ellis County Sheriff's Office said he had no official release, but approximated the time of the accident.
"We had a report to get an ambulance to Gate 3 (of GMC) at 2:42 p.m.," Morris Denning, dispatcher, said.

An employee of the Ellis County Ambulance Service said he could not release any information due to privacy laws.
Although details of the incident are sketchy, unofficial sources at the scene of the accident said Allen's vehicle and another vehicle collided in the parking lot south of the coliseum.
According to details, the left rear wheel of Allen's car was detached from his vehicle as a result of the accident.
Donald Brown, chief of university police, said the official accident report would not be available until this morning.
Allen, Lorton, Va., senior, was a member of the 1984 and 1985 NAIA national championship teams. He transferred from Hutchinson Community College.

Committee will disclose finalists

By DAVID BURKE
Copy Editor

The names of the seven finalists for the new Fort Hays State president will be made public.
A debate over whether the names of finalists should be released to the public highlighted the open session portion of the presidential search committee meeting Friday afternoon.
Larry Gould, committee chairman, asked for the committee's endorsement to release the names.
According to his plans, the names would be sent to the Office of University Relations, and a press release would be made available in the middle of this week.
"We're at about that stage in the process," Gould said.
Stanley Koplik, executive secretary for the Board of Regents, disagreed.
"I'm not sure the Board of Regents wants you to give any names out," Koplik said.
"I think you invite the possibility of someone taking over your process," he said.
"You may invite comment and pre-presentation of candidates that would counter the work that you have already done," Koplik said.

Gould said he would rather have the public find out through the press release.
"I'm afraid we'll reach a point where people will find out anyway, in a process we're not happy with," Gould said.
"Anonymity will be difficult," Koplik said.
Gould said he would prefer to control the release of information rather than have the public find out "through the peaceable process."
Koplik said that he would check with Regent chairman Frank Becker for the possibility of releasing the names.
Yesterday, Gould said the names would be released, pending the approval of all seven candidates. "They backed off a little," Gould said.
He said he spoke with Koplik early yesterday morning, who received the authorization from Becker.
Gould said that all seven candidates must agree to the disclosure before the names were released.
"If one of them says no, it short-

Alumnus returns for premiere

By BETTINA HEINZ
Copy Editor

Mark Selby, Fort Hays State graduate, returned to his alma mater for the premiere performance in the tour promoting his new album.

The Backdoor was packed with more than 100 students attending Friday night's Gallery series concert.

"It's great to be here," Selby said, already picking his guitar to the tune of What's The Matter With Love from his first album.

Introducing his next song, Smokes And Shades, Selby described how he comes up with ideas for his songs.

"One day I just finished taping a song and looked over to the piano. On top of the piano were sunglasses and a pack of cigarettes. 'Smokes and Shades' sounds like a song title to me," I thought. And sure enough it was," Selby said, putting on his sunglasses.

Selby's brother Monte joined him on stage for the presentation of two songs. Selby introduced the first song as a love song from his first album with the title As The Years

Go By.

Pinball Wizard from The Who received a lot of applause from the crowd. It was the last song before the break.

The crowd seemed ready for Selby to return with his second, shorter set. He asked the audience to sing along, and it did.

"I can't believe it -- nobody sings along these lines the first time. This is great," Selby said.

"I was thinking about doing this song when we had Martin Luther King Day," Selby said. "It was one of his favorite songs, and a favorite song on peace marches."

When he started playing We Shall Overcome, the crowd joined in.

Selby played two classical guitar pieces, and said the main reason he had transferred from Oklahoma to attend FHSU was to study guitar here.

After No Surrender by Bruce Springsteen and Selby's version of Stars And Stripes Forever, Selby concluded the concert with another song from his new album.

But the applause for Selby did not end, not even as Jim Costigan, concert committee chairman, got up on the stage to make some announcements.

Selby returned to the stage to give an encore. "Let's do one more song to sing along with," he said, finally concluding the concert with Woody Guthrie's This Land Is Your Land.

Students said they enjoyed the performance.

"I like him because he plays a variety of music. It's music that makes you feel good about life," Kamela Jones, Garden City sophomore, said.

Mark Selby performed Friday night at the Backdoor.

Miss Fort Hays reinstated

By KIM KONKEL
Staff Writer

Miss Fort Hays will be chosen for the first time in a decade.

The winner of the pageant will represent Hays for the first time in 10 years in the Miss Kansas pageant.

"We were the only town our size that didn't have a pageant," Jana Jordan, project organizer and former Miss Kansas, said.

Jordan said the Hays Jaycees decided a local pageant would promote Hays. The pageant is scheduled for April 25.

"We are just starting over from scratch. We had no idea if there would be any interest in this area for a scholarship pageant," Jordan said.

A small group gathered for an informational tea Sunday afternoon. Organizers discussed the approaching pageant with perspective candidates.

"It is more than a beauty pageant," Jordan said.

She said the talent competition is worth 50 percent of the score, while 30 percent is for the personal interview, and 20 percent is for the personal appearance of the candidate.

"The pageant is a great place to showcase talent," Jordan said.

Jordan said each contestant will receive a face makeover and facial along with other gifts from local merchants.

A hair seminar is planned for contestants as are pizza parties and hamburger parties.

"It's going to be fun for you. We are going to do everything to make it fun," Jordan said.

The only requirements are that each contestant be between 17-26 and single. There is no entry fee.

"Because we are running an open pageant, the contestants for this contest do not have to be from this area. They do, however, have to be a resident of the state of Kansas," Dorothy Wall, pageant organizer, said.

The winner of the preliminary pageant at Hays wins a $500 scholarship to the college or vocational-technical school of her choice.

The winner also has a chance to run in the Miss Kansas pageant and possibly the Miss America pageant, which is the largest scholarship program in the United States for young women.

Jordan said anyone interested in participating should contact her.

"Everyone who I have met who has participated in the program feels like it has been a real rewarding experience," Jordan said.

above any of the other journalists in school.
"He had a real gift -- a good nose for news. Jerry had a good sense of what it took to put a newspaper together," Walker said. "He knew all about the serious part of newspapering."
Walker, who now lives in Phoenix, Ariz., said he has been following Gerald's career quite closely. "I wasn't a bit surprised to hear that he was in Iran. He knows where the big story is and covers it. That's what newspapering is all about."

"If someone were to ask me who the single best student I ever taught was, I'd say it was Jerry Seib -- no question about it," Walker said. "This was a kid who was ready for the olympics."

circuits the whole process at this time," he said.
As of yesterday, three had approved.
Gould said he was unsure of the method in which the candidates' names would be announced, whether it would be a news conference or press release.

In other business, Gould said that he will gather a list of constituencies to be considered for interviewing the candidates.
"It's very important for the candidates to see these people, and for them to ask questions," Gould said.

Aid/ from page 1

"When a student fills out the Family Financial Statement, that's the application for financial assistance, he's applying for everything in the world," Metzger said.
"You fill that out and send it on in to ACT (the American College Testing Program), and we'll take it from there on," Metzger said. "If we need any information or requests for verification, then those letters will go out to those students, asking for more information."
Although the initial step of filling out a form sounds simple enough, Metzger said it is here where most students stumble, prolonging the process even longer.
"A lot of times there are mistakes on the Family Financial Statement," Metzger said. "A student doesn't sign it, or they fill in the dollar figure wrong. They put in cents, and they're not suppose to put any cents in it."

Mistakes often delay processing of the forms by weeks, and since a mistake-free form takes about six weeks to process, Metzger said completing the form correctly carries as much if not more weight as completing the form quickly.
Besides simple mistakes such as forgetting the John Hancock, Metzger said students who are planning to marry also make a common error when filling out the forms.
"Everything on this form is taken into consideration, the family condition, as the day it is filled out," Metzger said. "If those kids who are thinking about getting married will come in and visit with us, then we'll be able to counsel them on how to fill this thing out."
Not only do future newlyweds sometimes experience difficulties in the financial aid process, but transfer students often face an invisible obstacle also.

"Transfer students are under the impression that their financial aid is going to follow them wherever they go, from one school to the other," Metzger said. "It doesn't work that way. They've got to start all over again."
"We'll make a copy of their file and send it to wherever they're going to go, and that will short-circuit some of the process, but all of their aid will be cancelled here so they must start over again at the other school."
Transfer students, although maybe disillusioned about their aid shadowing them, are not half as blind as the students who withdraw from school while receiving financial assistance.
"The students who withdraw are in for a rude awakening," Metzger said, "because they're going to be in repayment for all of those entitlement programs."

The same applies to students who have been overawarded with grants, scholarships or loans.
"There's no choice; the student has to repay that loan. Well, that may have come in in December, and it's already blown. That money is gone. He's used that for educational expenses, or pizzas, or beer or whatever, and that really makes me feel good," Metzger said sarcastically.
"That's the only bad thing about this job. You award what you think is fair, and then something else happens, and you have to turn around and say 'now you owe me $500.'"
Not only do transferring and withdrawing students possess false images about financial aid, but other students, most of whom show a real need for the money, also lack the facts.
"They probably think it's not available," Metzger said, "especially when they pick up the paper and read that Reagan is going to cut it by 41.5 percent for next year. They say, 'well, what's the use? I'm not going to get any anyway.'"
However, Metzger said the aid is available, and he disagrees with the cutbacks in education.
"The idea that financial aid increases the tax burden on people or whatever is a bunch of crap," Metzger said. "Education is our best investment ever. It's been proven over years and years and years that we need to educate our youth."

Gerald Seib, former Fort Hays State student, has been detained in Iran since Saturday night.

Release of names vital

Larry Gould has the right idea. Gould, chairman of the presidential search committee, successfully petitioned Stanley Koplik, executive director of the Board of Regents, to release the names of the seven semifinalists for the presidential vacancy at Fort Hays State.

In the presidential search committee meeting last week, Gould asked that the names, along with biographical information on the finalists, be released to the media this week.

Koplik did not want the names to be released.

But with Board chairman Frank Becker's approval, the names will be made public after all seven of the candidates OK the release.

It is important these names be released so the campus community can also scrutinize the finalists. Since one finalist will become the new president, students and faculty deserve to know who he or she might be and what qualifications this person has to make him or her the right person for the job.

Columns depict opinion

Dear Editor,

Your Jan. 27 edition offers a good occasion to respond to the current survey on the Leader. I refer to the articles by Bettina Heinz and Paige Arnoldy, on abortion and sex education, respectively.

To be sure, I have serious problems with Ms. Heinz's argumentation (as would any student of logic worth his salt).

And, while Ms. Arnoldy makes a fair case for sex education, one could suggest that good sex education might also address the fact that often enough pregnancy (especially the unwanted kind) results simply from uncontrolled human lust (which, incredibly, she does not even list as one of the causes of teen-age pregnancy!).

But my point is really this: By what stretch of the imagination can either of these columns be considered as anything more than glorified letters to the editor? The only difference seems to be that these were written by Leader staff members.

Are the columns supposed to be editorials? Then they should be labeled as such, and they would be received accordingly. Are they feature articles? Or are they just an occasion for a couple of people with staff connections to let off some steam on a favorite gripe?

I certainly defend the right of Ms. Heinz and Ms. Arnoldy and anyone else to express their opinions. But what is the proper forum?

I suggest that the Leader needs to rethink its articles, and whether the Leader ought to be used by staff members or others to propagate their personal agenda.

Economics letter has problems

Dear Editor,

While I do not presume to speak for the economics department, I would like to personally thank the writer of a recent letter to the editor (Jeffrey Van Hulzen, Jan. 23.)

Fearing that the net effect of the letter will not be enlightenment unless we carefully examine its arguments and conclusions and desiring only to instruct and not castigate its author, I propose three problem areas.

First, our author implies that the Fort Hays State economics department is one of the last remaining strongholds of the ancient art of Keynesianism, while the modern mainstream has passed on to more modern practices. (Please, students, remind me to have my half-moon-and-stars cloak pressed before the first palm is read and my conic hat blocked.)

Second, and I think rather more seriously, our author disposes rather quickly of the major -- but not, by far, the only -- contribution of Keynes, the "General Theory." Incoherent and inconsistent? Let us realize we live in a world largely defined by Keynes's insight.

But the foregoing criticisms are minor compared to what I perceive as a major flaw in the conception of economics and science writ large on the part of our author. He asks economists to "stand up and be counted" and to "defend" their philosophy, not to teach "a lie."

Let Keynes have the final word. "At the present moment people are unusually expectant of a more fundamental diagnosis; more particularly, ready to receive it; eager to try it out, if it should be even plausible."

"But apart from this contemporary mood, the ideas of economists and political philosophers, both when they are right and when they are wrong, are more powerful than is commonly understood. Indeed the world is ruled by little else."

"Practical men, who believe themselves to be quite exempt from any intellectual influences, are usually the slaves of some defunct economist. Madmen in authority, who hear voices in the air, are more powerful than is commonly understood. Indeed the world is ruled by little else."

Campus visitors deserve better treatment

In a column last week, I addressed the parking problems at Fort Hays State.

I've had several comments about it since then, from both students and faculty members. From what I've been told, most people seem to agree with what I said.

I discussed the problems of off-campus students and dormitory residents. However, it was pointed out to me that I neglected to mention the problems of another important group of people--visitors.

Have you ever noticed where visitor parking is on this campus? There are about four spaces on the east side of Sheridan Coliseum and about the same amount in front of the Memorial Union.

As far as I know, the spaces not reserved for faculty in front of Malloy Hall and Forsyth Library can be used by visitors. But, as I pointed out before, instructors and students are usually battling over those spaces. Visitors probably end up feeling lucky to make it across campus alive, let alone find a parking place.

Let's consider our visitors to FHSU are. There are prospective students and their parents, parents of students attending the university, friends of students, and people doing business here.

There is one thing that visitors all have in common -- they are all people we want to impress.

I can remember the feelings I had last year when I was considering coming to FHSU. Everything was pretty unsure anyway. Having to park four blocks from campus and walk back did not help to make me feel welcome here.

I imagine it's even worse for students who bring their parents with them to investigate FHSU. The parents probably think, "We're going to send our child to school at a place where he's just another tuition-payer, and he'll have to act like an animal to survive going from class to class."

Think about it for a minute. How well do we really treat young people who visit here? I've seen prospective students wandering around looking lost, and no one seems willing to help them. Do FHSU students really not think enough of this university's image to do things that might encourage more young people to come to school here?

Then there are parents of students here. My mom said not to ask her to visit me at McMindes Hall, where I live, because when she gets here she has to drive around for half an hour before she can park her car.

And my dad asked me where parents "are supposed to park when they come to visit -- Vine Street?"

I don't think my parents would be pouring money into my education here, if their decision was based on the visitor-treatment facet of FHSU.

It's also important to make friends of students feel welcome, for two reasons. First, there's the chance that they might be prospective transfer students.

Second, no matter how many good things we at FHSU do later, if those visiting friends perceive our school as one that doesn't welcome guests, that poor image will remain in their minds forever.

People who do business at FHSU vary from teachers and administrators of public schools to Kansas Board of Regents members to the people who deliver groceries to SAGA.

Whether it seems like it or not, it's important to treat these people like we appreciate the work they do here.

Actually, it's important to treat all our visitors like they are people who matter to us at FHSU. Whoever it is, whether it involves parking or giving directions or just being polite, it's not that hard to make them feel welcome.

Odds, ends provoke roaming thoughts

Odds and ends.

From the "Just wondering" department:
The Midland Hotel in Wilson is offering a Valentine's Day special -- the price for your room is the year you were married. For example, if you were married in 1960, you would be charged $19.60.

Now what if one of these Shirley MacLain-types comes in with a guy and claims they were married in a previous life -- say, 5 B.C. Would the hotel put them up for the night and pay them five bucks?

From the "I wish I said it" department:
If you're a Broncos fan, take notice of what I heard last week. If someone comes up to you razzing about New York's win, just say the following:

"Well, I don't care about little things like that. What I'm really worried about is winning the America's Cup. That's far more important than any dumb old football game."

Same department, different aisle:
The CBS Evening News last week included a video tape of Ferdinand Marcos working out in his Hawaiian home, with the barbells, aerobics, flexing the muscles with his shirt off, the whole works.

After watching it in my current political issues class, a guy raised his hand and asked "Is that in Beta as well as VHS?"

From the "Build a Better Mousetrap" category:
Well, we've got the Clapper where we can turn lights and appliances on and off by clapping our hands, and a keychain that lets off an alarm when you whistle.

What's next? Standing in the parking lot and yell, "Yo, car!" and have your vehicle come right to you?

Press a button in a crowded department store, and your kids are magically transported to you?

In the "I Saw the Light and Heard the Dog Whistle" file:

A Tulsa, Okla., disc jockey claims a 900-foot vision of Lassie appeared to him, and told him to build a 60-story "Kennel of Kare," for cats and dogs around the world.

He then claimed that if his listeners didn't send $4.5 million in pledges by March, not he --- but his listeners -- would die.

From the "Hey, Let's Get it Right!" category:
I'm sick and tired of people mispronouncing Iran. Most people say "ear-ran" or "eye-ran" and there's the select few that say, very incorrectly, "eye-ran."

I know for a fact that it's "ear-ahn." My aunt and uncle were missionaries in that country 15 years ago, and my aunt has an easy way to remember how to say it.

"You have an ear on the side of your head." As for spelling Gadhafi, you're on your own. From the "Order Before Midnight Tonight" arena:

There's an ad out now on TV for the "greatest hits" of Red "The Trucker's Best Friend" Sovine. It's offered on records, tapes and now on compact disc.

Compact disc?
To that, I say what Jay Leno said about Twisted Sister on CD. "Is there some subtle little nuance I'm missing out on with my normal phonograph record?"

In the "Siskel & Ebert in 12 Seconds" file:

It's a strange case in movies when Steve Martin's five minute bit in Little Shop of Horrors, and Chevy Chase in the Paul Simon video You Can Call Me Al were funnier than the entire movie Three Amigos in which they co-starred.

That takes care of spring house cleaning. For now, keep your head in the ground, and keep reaching for your feet ... or something like that.

Philippine native comments on turmoil

Corazon Aquino is facing her biggest challenge since she took over the Philippine government.

Last week the military crushed a coup attempt by mutinous soldiers. The attempts to take over military bases and media centers in the Manila area was the most serious effort to overthrow the Aquino government since she became president.

The mutineers were supporters of deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos out to destabilize the country before yesterday's national plebiscite on Aquino's proposed constitution.

If Aquino remains strong in this time of turmoil, there is still hope that the Filipinos will live in peace one day.

Up 'til now, she has displayed an amazing strength and courage, but it is not only political conditions she is struggling against, it is also the socio-economic factors working against her.

Elena Encarnacion, Larned junior, is from Puerto Princesa in the Philippines. She was last in the Philippines in 1978.

"I feel there is really a need for a big change. I'm glad that there was a revolution of the dictatorship by Marcos' government and an exposure of the corruption," Encarnacion said.

"Encarnacion is very concerned about her people right now, she said.

"I'm very much concerned right now for the unity of our people. They are too partisan. There are followers of Marcos, internal turmoils," Encarnacion said.

The first violent clash with anti-government demonstrators left 12 killed and 94 wounded when marines fired into a crowd of 10,000 leftists demanding land reform.

"It was the first of a kind of demonstration where people died. The world was so happy to see the turnover, a peaceful turnover, and now they want to overthrow the Aquino government," Encarnacion said.

She said the Filipinos are too impatient.

"The people are too aggressive now. They want everything now by demand, like the equal distribution of land. The Aquino government will be strong enough to handle the situation, but they will have to do it by force," Encarnacion said.

According to her, the poor people are being used by former members of Marcos' elite. She said the peasants are easy victims, because they need money.

"Because for all you know, the poor people are being paid. If they would be influenced in a peaceful manner, I would like it, because they need the money. The poor people are being used by the elite. The elite people enriched themselves so much under the Marcos government, now they are paralyzed," Encarnacion said.

The communist ideology is not a serious threat to the Philippines, Encarnacion said.

"The oppressed people, the New People's Army, are not communists. The communists take advantage of them, they are easy victims of an ideology. The communists will never triumph in the Philippines," Encarnacion said.

Despite all the turmoil, Encarnacion misses home and would like to return.

"There is no place like home. I would like to go home and stay there," Encarnacion said.

Her siblings are still in Manila. Her youngest sister is the Dean of the School of Nursing at St. Luke's Hospital in Manila, and her brother is Chief of Protocol in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Encarnacion said she is worried about her siblings, but her faith gives her strength.

"If things come to worst -- they live right in Manila. I have a strong faith in God and keep praying. Cory has a solid faith in God, too, I hope that will really help," Encarnacion said.

Fort Hays State forward Mike Miller is fouled late in last night's game by Benedictine guard Paul Johnson. Miller missed the ensuing front end of a one-and-one free throw opportunity, but the Tigers still managed to escape with a hard-fought 81-76 win over the Ravens.

FHSU escapes with 81-76 win

By ERIC JONTRA
Sports Editor

Don't try to tell Benedictine head coach Del Morley that Mark Harris isn't one of the best players in the CSIC, because he won't believe a word you say.

Especially after watching Harris score 35 points last night as the Fort Hays State Tigers edged Morley's Ravens 81-76 in District 10 action in Gross Memorial Coliseum.

"He's a stud. There's no question about it," Morley said of Harris' performance. "He's a great one-on-one player, he can penetrate and do a lot of things. He can just jump up and shoot the three-point shot, and in my opinion, he's the best player in the district."

"I've seen Emporia, Washburn, everybody, and I think he is the best player. I guess that shows in his stats because he has been averaging about 35 a game here recently. I think we probably gave him his average tonight," Morley said.

Indeed, Harris was 14-18 from the field (2-2 from three-point range) and 5-5 from the line to pace the Tigers to the win.

Still, even the spectacular performance by the 6-2 junior guard was not enough to offset the fact that the Ravens were in the game until the closing moments.

With only 19 seconds remaining in the game, FHSU led 79-76 and had 6-6 forward Mike Miller at the free throw line in a one-and-one situation. After Miller missed the front end of the bonus, the Ravens then took possession of the basketball and came down court looking for a possible three-point opportunity.

The Ravens got the opportunity, but not the result they had hoped for. Harris blocked a three-point effort by Benedictine's Paul Johnson with only seconds remaining, and Anthony Williams then recovered the loose ball and hit teammate Troy Applegate for a layup at the buzzer to ice the win.

FHSU head coach Bill Morse was not at all pleased with the play of the Tigers during the game, citing a severe lack of intensity as the problem his squad had during the game.

"That was a lackluster performance, no doubt," Morse said. "I thought that our intensity was not very good, and even though our players were trying, they were just a little bit lazy. That gave Benedictine an opportunity to win."

"You can be cold offensively, but when you struggle like that defensively, there is no excuse. That is a lack of effort."

The Tigers led 39-38 at the intermission and actually trailed for over half of the opening stanza. The biggest lead for the Ravens during the opening half was at 16-10, but 18 points from Harris gave the FHSU club the slim lead at halftime.

For a big part of the first half, 6-5 forward Tyrone Jackson sat on the bench, thus taking away from an FHSU front line that was already severely depleted with the absence of 6-9 center Thomas Hardnett.

Hardnett returned to his home in Alabama this weekend after learning of a death in his family, and is expected to be back in the lineup Friday night against Missouri Southern State College.

But with Hardnett gone and Jackson momentarily out of the game, the Tigers had a big problem. Still, Morse said he felt it was necessary to take Jackson out of the game for the remainder of a majority of the first half.

"Basically, I was disappointed in his reaction to what they were doing offensively," Morse said of Jackson. "He was playing no worse than anyone else, but I was disappointed at his reaction when we talked about the problem so I held him out for a little while."

In the second half, however, Jackson came alive and scored 13 points to help the Tigers to the win. Jackson finished the contest with 15 points, while Miller added 13 points.

The Ravens were paced in the scoring column by 6-1 senior Bill Taffinger, who scored 22 points during the game.

Morse said he thought the biggest problem FHSU had against the Ravens was the fact that the Tigers came into the game lacking an integral part of their game plan: respect for the opponent.

"I think the bottom of this whole thing with Tyrone and the whole team was simply not respecting their opponent," Morse said. "We thought we were going to go out there, get a lot of fast breaks and get these guys. Of course, Benedictine is a better team than that."

"They're the leading independent in the state, they will be in the playoffs, and they are a respectable ballclub. Our ballclub is not good enough to come up with a mediocre performance and beat anybody."

With the victory, the Tigers improved to 14-6 on the season, while the Ravens dropped to 11-10.

Now stand at 2-5 in CSIC play

Lady Tigers return from trip with split

By MIKE MARZOLF
Asst. Sports Editor

Anything can happen on a given night.

That saying was never more evident than this weekend for the Fort Hays State Lady Tigers. After being demolished by Missouri Western, 73-38, on Friday, the Lady Tigers turned around and scored a 65-56 win over Wayne State, Saturday evening. A Wayne State team that has defeated Missouri Western twice this year.

"Each game is a whole new situation," first year coach John Klein said. "To get beat so badly Friday and then turn around and get a conference win on the road against a team that twice beat the team that beat us the night before, it is really strange."

The weekend appeared to be off to a good start just five minutes into Friday's match-up, when Missouri Western called a time out with the Lady Tigers on top of a 10-4 score.

Then things collapsed. The Lady Griffons came out of the huddle, slapped on a full court press, scored the next 14 points and then never looked back. The Lady Tigers went scoreless for over five minutes.

"It just completely destroyed us," Klein said of the press. "We could not get the ball up the court, and when we did, we only had about 15 seconds to get into our offense. The press triggered everything."

Missouri Western continued its domination in the latter portions of the first half. The Lady Griffons went on another run, this one 8-0, to end the first half, leading by a score of 34-17. The Lady Griffons out-scored FHSU 30-7 over the final 15 minutes of the half.

At halftime, the Lady Tigers owned as many turnovers, 17, as they did points.

The second half wasn't much better for Klein and his squad.

The Lady Griffons began the second half as they ended the first. They scored 12 of the half's first 17 points to build a 26-point cushion, 48-22.

Lynna Cochran, 6-0 center, controlled the inside in the second half of action.

"She was really tough," Klein said. "They would get the ball inside to her, and she would just do her stuff."

Cochran scored 13 points in the second half as Missouri Western continued to build its lead to 31 points with five minutes remaining. The reserves finished up the rest of the contest, which was the lowest scoring game of the season for the Lady Tigers.

"To me," Klein said, "Western is the best team we've played so far. They play real good defense."

Chris Biser led the way for the Lady Tigers with 10 points and 8 rebounds on the evening. An evening which not only saw the lowest point total for FHSU, but also 29 turnovers, a season low 27 rebounds and a season low 25 percent shooting from the floor.

"One thing led to another, and it was a very tough loss as far as the way we got beat," Klein said. "It was the kind of loss that really makes you feel bad. We just got frustrated, and it was a bad night."

As disappointed as Klein was Friday, he was pleased on Saturday.

He figured to see another press and could only wonder how his club would handle it.

"They showed us a man-to-man press," Klein said, "and we had no problems with it. That really pleased us."

The entire first half was nip and tuck. The game was tied four times, and neither team could gain more than a seven point advantage.

"It was a see-saw battle all the way," Klein said.

The first half of play was a little ragged offensively. FHSU still had 11 turnovers and shot only 24 percent from the field. This allowed them to manage only 24 first half points, and they trailed by four at intermission.

Not many observers could have guessed what the Lady Tigers had in store for the rest of the game.

Both teams began the half playing well. For the first 13 minutes the teams battled about as closely as two teams could. They were involved in six tie scores, and the largest margin was a meek five points.

Then, with 6:43 remaining, Staci Derstein scored a basket, to break the 10th and final tie of the game and was fouled on the play. She converted the free throw to give the Lady Tigers a lead they would never again relinquish.

From that point on the Lady Tigers went onto an 11-4 surge that put them up by seven with four minutes remaining.

"It was really nice to see our kids take charge in the final minutes," coach Klein said.

FHSU then converted their free throws down the stretch to put the game out of reach, and eventually gave them the 65-56 victory.

"When we were winning, they were fouling us to get the ball back," Klein said. "It was good to see us make the free throws."

In all the Lady Tigers made 17 of 21 free throws in the second half and hit on 25 of 32 for the contest.

The second half produced 41 points, a season high, for the Lady Tigers.

"That has to be one of the best second halves we've played," Klein said. "They come out and did a good job."

Chris Biser again led the club with 18 points and 14 rebounds.

"Chris had a great game," Klein said. "The last two wins, Chris has played all 20 minutes of the second half."

Kelly Wilhelm contributed 12 points, and a quartet of players added 8.

One of those players, Penny Fischer, sprained her ankle, but did return.

"Penny sprained her ankle but we got her back in there," Klein said. "Then she made a key basket for us down the stretch."

After a CSIC road split, the Lady Tigers are currently 2-5 in the conference. They will now play five of the remaining seven games at Gross Memorial Coliseum.

"We are in pretty good shape going into February," Klein said. "We only have two more conference games on the road. Now we have a week off so our kids can recuperate."

Tigers win finish road trip with impressive 5-1 mark

By ERIC JONTRA
Sports Editor

It is no secret that the Fort Hays State Tigers did not play well on the road last semester. In fact, FHSU dropped four of the five games it played on the road.

But that was then, and this is now.

This semester, the Tigers have won five of six games away from home, including two road victories over CSIC foes Missouri Western State College and Wayne State College this past weekend.

With the two victories, the Tigers moved their season record to 13-6 overall and 4-3 in the CSIC, and head coach Bill Morse said he could not be much happier.

"Those two wins together means that we won five of the six games on this road trip," Morse said. "Even in the one loss we had (an FHSU loss to Missouri Southern), we had a pretty good effort, so we're very happy with the way things are going right now."

The Tigers had perhaps their best performance of the year against Missouri Western on Friday night in cruising to a 90-70 victory. The fact that the Tigers defeated the Golden Griffons was not that surprising, but the way FHSU went about doing so

The Tigers led 36-29 at halftime, but blew the game wide open in the second half to ice the 20-point win. According to Morse, the Tigers combined great execution and intensity to garner the victory.

Against Missouri Western we probably played our best basketball of the year," Morse said, "and as a result, we won rather handily."

"I would say that Missouri Western is just as talented as any of the teams we've been playing, with the possible exception of Panhandle State and Washburn, but we just played real well and put them away."

Standout 6-2 guard Mark Harris claimed game-high scoring honors with 37 points. In addition, FHSU had three other players in double figures offensively, as Mike Miller and Reggie Kirk scored 12 points each, and Tyrone Jackson chipped in with 11 points.

Doniel Gambrell paced the Golden Griffons with 23 points, while his brother Jerome contributed 13 points in a losing effort.

The Tigers' excellent performance against Missouri Western could have easily been forgotten had the FHSU club lost to Wayne State on Saturday night, but Morse's squad rallied in the closing moments of the game with the Wildcats to post a Fort Hays State track coach Joe Fisher will not be hanging a Home Sweet Home banner in Gross Memorial Coliseum anytime soon.

True, the Tigers placed 28 times for the women and 25 places for the men at Saturday's Pepsi-Alex Francis Invitational, but Fisher is not a big fan of the GMC track.

"Really, this place is not a fast track. The track's slow, and we can't wear spikes on it. The curves are really tight," Fisher said.

Fisher compared the GMC track to the track at the University of Kansas, where the Tigers travel this weekend.

"At KU, they have an oversize track, 252 yards instead of 176. The curves aren't as tight; they can wear spikes on that."

Still, Fisher said he is happy with the track at GMC.

"This is a good track," he said. "We don't get exceptionally fast times."

"You have to be really good to get a good time here," Fisher said.

Fisher classified Ruben Esparza as one of those individuals, placing second in the mile run.

"Ruben ran 4:22 in the mile, and that's a pretty good time for this indoor track," Fisher said.

"Jon Hazelhorst ran real well in the hurdles again (second in the 176-intermediates and third in the 60-yard high hurdles)," Fisher said. "Martin (Schmidt), James (Pfeifer) and Timothy (Hinkle, placing third through fifth in the 176-intermediate hurdles) all ran well."

Fisher said Chrissy Sitts and Shellie Stahly each improved in the mile and two-mile. Respectively, the pair finished first and second in the two-mile and second and third in the mile.

In addition, the women's mile and two-mile relay teams each nabbed first place.

Running the mile relay were Linda Ragland, Shari Wilson, Kari Williams and Kathy Dixon.

Compiling the two-mile team were Stahly, Maggie Smelser, Rosa Vargas and Sitts.

"In the women's hurdles, Karen Borgstedt ran real well in that (placing third in the 60-yard high).

Gay Ranking (placing fifth in the 176-intermediate hurdles and sixth in the 60-yard high hurdles) ran well," Fisher said.

Deb Moore was a double-winner for the Tigers, topping the 176-yard intermediate hurdles and 60-yard high hurdles. She also finished second in the triple jump and fourth in the long jump.

Don Carter qualified for the NAIA Nationals with winning marks of 6-10 in the high jump and 48-2 in the triple jump. In addition, he set a new FHSU record in long jump, leaping 23-9 1/2.

"Steve Broxterman jumped 6-8 (for third) and Ryan Watters did better in the triple jump (sixth) and the long jump (fourth)," Fisher said. "People are just starting to get around in some of those areas."

At this week's practices, Fisher is concentrating on the runners and throwers.

"I think our sprint groups and our quarter-mile groups will have to bear down and getting some times in good. They're capable of more than they're doing," Fisher said.

Grapplers take 5th

By KEVIN KRIER
Managing Editor

When Fort Hays State wrestling coach Wayne Petterson prepared his team for the Chadron State Invitational, little did he realize the team that would make the trip would bear little resemblance to a nationally-ranked squad.

But that was exactly the case for the Tiger wrestling mentor as injury, illness and defection caused a problem for his team.

Billy Johnson (118-pound), Marc Hull (134-pound), Parrish Blanding (142-pound) and Ron Hockett (177-pound) failed to make the trip.

As a result, FHSU limped home with a tie for fifth place in the team standings and only two individual winners.

Johnson missed the trip due to a family emergency, Hull was sick with the flu, Blanding suffered an ankle injury and Hockett quit the team early last week.

Despite the woes, two wrestlers did come up with winning efforts. Wayne Simons (167-pound) and Kevin Back (190-pound) each carted home first place finishes to lift the Tigers into fifth place.

Besides Simons and Back, Shaun Smith (150-pound) placed second for the Tigers.

Kearney State College won the meet with 70 points.

The Tigers resume action Friday with a 1 p.m. dual at Gross Memorial Coliseum against Kearney State.

dramatic 70-64 win.

The contest was very close for the first 37 minutes, but the Tigers outscored Wayne State 10-4 in the final 2:19 to run away with the game.

"We played real hard but were a little jumpy and nervous," Morse said. "To start out with, we were having a terrible offensive performance, and then we lost Thomas Hardnett and were forced to play the second half without him."

"We had a mediocre game until the last few minutes, but then we started playing better and won. We did play excellent defense all the way, and that definitely helped."

Hardnett was ejected just before halftime for committing what Morse termed a "non-basketball move," and losing the 6-8 junior center made it tougher for the FHSU club to shut down the Wildcats in the second half.

For the second consecutive night, Harris paced FHSU in scoring while taking game-high honors with 26 points. Jackson and Miller were the only other Tigers in double figures offensively, scoring 13 and 11 points, respectively.

Vincent White, a 5-9 guard, paced the Wildcats in scoring with 14 points.

Gymnasts compete in Texas

The Fort Hays State women's gymnastics team returned from its trip to Texas this week pleased with its performances.

On Friday night the Lady Tigers competed in a dual with Texas Woman's University of Denton and scored 130.4 points.

Although outscored by Texas Woman's, which scored 136.4 points, coach Tawnita Augustine was pleased by how many points the team accumulated.

"I was really pleased we were able to score above 130 points and bring our score up from the previous week," Augustine said.

On Saturday the Lady Tigers scored even higher. They competed in a triangular meet with TWU and Centenary College, Shreveport, La. This time FHSU scored 133.85 points compared to 136.5 for TWU and 138.75 for Centenary.

"Overall our performance was much improved over the previous evening," Augustine said. "I was really pleased with how the team stuck together."

Augustine said the improvement in the performance of the team was due to seeing the films of the previous evening and making the correction right away.

The event that Augustine credited the improved scores to was the vault.

"Our vaulting was much better for both days, we broke the school record both Friday and Saturday," Augustine said.

This week the team will be working on the floor exercise, which gave the team some problems this past weekend.

"Most of the problems in the floor exercise came from a lack of sufficient tumbling and execution errors," Augustine said.

The team leaves Wednesday for two meets in Wisconsin. Thursday, the Lady Tigers will compete in a dual with the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire. Saturday, the team heads for the University of Wisconsin-LaCrosse where it will compete in an invitational with six other teams.

Besides LaCrosse and FHSU, other teams competing include, the University of Wisconsin-Eau Claire, Winona State University, Winona Minn., Gustavus Adolphus, St. Peter, Minn., and the University of Wisconsin-River Falls.
