CAMPUS

• The Protestant Campus Ministry is collecting donations for a dishwasher for the Northwest Kansas Family Shelter. Donations can be brought or mailed to the Ecumenical Campus Center, 507 Elm St.

• The Fort Hays State senior debate team of Eric Krug and Chris Crawford, Great Bend seniors, defeated the University of Alabama's team to capture first place at the eighth annual Saluki National Invitational at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, Ill., Jan. 29-31. Krug and Crawford won with a record of 12-7.

The freshman team of Martin Horn, Goodland freshman; and David Klein, Hays freshman, placed fifth. Horn won the seventh-place speaker award from among 86 open division debaters. There were 20 schools from nine states. FHSU's next tournament is this weekend in Winfield at Southwestern College.

• Financial analysis and planning will be discussed at a workshop in the Memorial Union Pioneer Lounge next Tuesday and Wednesday from 8:30 to 9:30 p.m.

The workshop is sponsored by the Hays Chamber of Commerce, the Small Business Development Center and the management development center at Fort Hays State.

The workshop will be led by Robert Camp, dean of the school of business.

Workshop fee is $40. To enroll, contact the Small Business Development Center at 628-5340.

• Western Kansas high school chemistry teachers will discuss issues in chemistry at Fort Hays State at 10 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 20 in Albertson Hall.

The discussion is sponsored by the academic alliance in chemistry at FHSU.

Max Rumpel, chairman of the chemistry department, said university and high school instructors will discuss textbook choices, lab preparations, grading lab works, technique tips, formal lab write-ups, field trips and preparing the secondary school instructor.

• The Volga-German Society of Ellis and Rush counties and the Leo J. and Albina Drelling Charitable Trust has made money available for scholarships for sophomore, junior, senior and graduate students who are descendants of settlers of Munjor, Pfeifer, Schoenchen, Liebenthal, Catherine or Victoria. For application forms and more information, contact Leona Pfeifer, Rarick 304.

• Prospective Fort Hays State students and their parents will be coming to the campus for the Senior and Transfer Day Saturday, Feb. 13.

Registration will be from 12:30 to 1 p.m. in the Memorial Union Black and Gold Room. A $3 registration fee includes the evening meal in McMinder Hall and tickets to the FHSU-Wayne State College basketball games that evening.

Old Man winter hit Hays this week in the form of snow and an outbreak of flu, strep throat and respiratory infections. Students bitten by the "bug" are encouraged to consult with the Student Health Center or a local physician for information about treatments and over-the-counter medications to help relieve the symptoms. Student health is located in the basement of the Memorial Union.

Cold and flu causes misery on campus; Student Health Center provides advice

By LISA STORER
Staff Writer

Colds and flu are responsible for discomfort among Fort Hays State faculty and students, as well as other Hays residents.

Hays High School reported an increase in absences due to cold and flu related illnesses.

Twenty percent of Hays High's enrollment -- 144 students -- missed classes on Monday.

FHSU students have also been fighting the cold and flu bugs.

"We saw 79 people yesterday," Kathy Douglas, director of the Student Health Center, said.

"The majority had colds and flu. There were a few cases of strep throat."

Douglas said the key to staying healthy is not to get run down.

"Two weekends ago I felt really sick," Sherree Zerr, Quinter sophomore, said. "I had a sore throat, and my nose was stuffed up. My cold and sore throat lasted a whole week."

"I had a fever and an upset stomach," Suzanne Commerford, Roswell, N.M., sophomore, said. "Anything I ate didn't settle well." Typical flu symptoms include fever, chills and sweating, headaches, muscle pains and a cough.

The flu usually takes two to three days for the worst part to end, but a fever could last up to five days. It may also take several days or even weeks for a person to completely regain strength.

Colds usually begin with a sore throat, sneezing and a runny nose. After a few days, the nose becomes stopped up and the eyes become watery. Drowsiness, aches and pains and sometimes a low-grade fever strikes. Often a cough follows.

While these symptoms occur at different times, almost 90 percent of cough and cold medicines on the shelf contain a combination for all of the symptoms.

According to Douglas, Student Health is advising students to take aspirin, drink plenty of fluids and get extra rest.

"February is always a busy month," Douglas said, in response to whether she thought there was an end in sight or not. "We don't expect it to get any less busy for three more weeks."

Increase needed to maintain status

Health center seeks more funds

By MARVEL BALL
Staff Writer

An increase in enrollment fees is being sought by the Student Health Center.

Kathy Douglas, director of the center, is looking for a way to maintain the current services offered by them.

"What we are talking about here is maintaining," Douglas said. "We need the increase just to maintain our services."

The present fee that students pay for services is $1.25 per credit hour, up to 15 hours.

The amount of increase that Douglas is looking at is 50 to 75 cents per credit hour.

"If we would only increase the fee by 25 cents, we would still be in the hole $6,700," she said.

An increase of 50 cents would give them a $20,000 excess but may also cause another increase in the next year or two.

The center is funded strictly by enrollment fees, and receives no extra monies from the state.

Although the increase will make enrollment fees higher, the small cost that students pay for health services is minimal to what they would pay at a local doctor's office.

"I had a girl tell me that while we were closed over Christmas break, she saw a nurse practitioner -- which we have also -- and had a throat culture and received prescription medicine, and her total bill was $60," Douglas said.

"If we had been open, she could have come here, and we could have done the whole thing for $1."

Even though the fee for seeing the doctor is only $1, students still complain about having to dish out the extra money.

Also included are Ace wraps, crutches, slings, bandages, Chlamydia testing, Gonorrhea culture, Syphilis tests, some contraceptives, health pamphlets, immunizations, allergy injections, health advice.

tetanus injections, pregnancy testing and counseling, physical examinations and throat cultures.

"What we are talking about here is maintaining. We need the increase just to maintain our services."

—Kathy Douglas
Director of Student health

Current services offered free-of-charge by the Student Health Center are medicines of all varieties for acute illnesses, including cold, pain, flu and cough medication, vitamins, throat lozenges, antacids, some prescription medicines, antibiotic ointment, anti-fungal medicine and anti-itch medicines.

X-ray orders, T.B. skin tests, yeast and Trichomonas testing, blood pressure checks, anemia testing, Mononucleosis tests, urinalysis, blood sugar tests, ultrasound treatments, vision screening, diet and referral counseling, stool cultures and flu vaccinations are also included.

Douglas has spent many hours working with the budget trying to find the best way to maintain the center to benefit the students.

"A Student Health Committee meeting is scheduled for next Thursday, and then I have to go to student government and make a request for the increase," Douglas said.

Douglas' main concern is providing a health service for the students at a price that they can afford.

McMindes visitation rules remain unchanged

By BECKY OBORNY
Staff Writer

The visitation policy at McMinder Hall will not be changed. The results of the voting done Tuesday and Wednesday were 164 yes votes to 104 no votes.

In order to move to the second step of voting, a simple majority of the residents had to want the extension, Mike Ediger, head resident, said.

A simple majority is one more than half of the residents now living in the hall.

There are 368 women living in the hall. Therefore, 185 yes votes were needed for the proposal to pass.

The proposal was defeated by 21 votes.

Andrea Bleker, WaKeeney freshman; Kristin Montgomery, Ellsworth freshman; and Maria Oelke, WaKeeney freshman, turned in a petition last week that asked for an all-hall vote on the policy.

Their main concern was getting the vote.

"We were wanting mostly the vote," Bleker said. "It was up to everyone else to get it passed."

"We expected a lot of yes votes. We knew there was a lot of support out there. We just didn't know how many would get out and vote," Bleker said.

Ediger said he was not surprised as much by the results as he was by the turnout.

"I was surprised it was as close as it was," Ediger said.

"But I was more surprised that as many people voted as they did," he said. "In general hall elections, not nearly as many people vote."

Kim Meyer, program coordinator, was also surprised by the turnout.

"I didn't expect that many people to vote. I think that helped a lot," she said.

Ediger said he really did not know what to expect.

"It (the vote) reflects the opinion of the residents of the hall," Ediger said. "Whichever way it passed was fine with me."

Meyer said she was somewhat relieved by the results.

"I guess I was relieved. I was kind of glad it didn't pass," she said.

Meyer also said that the petition asked for the side doors to be left unlocked longer at night, and that this decision should be made in reference to visitation hours.

"The petition said that if it (extension of visitation) passed, something would need to be done," she said.

The building security committee, organized on Jan. 25 to review this policy, has not had its first meeting.

"We were waiting on the vote," Meyer said.

However, they may still review the policy, which is to close the side doors at 11 p.m.

"If we feel like it is necessary, we will still meet," Meyer said.

Since the proposition did not pass, visitation hours will remain set at 10 a.m. to midnight on weekdays. Weekend hours are from 10 a.m. Friday to midnight on Sunday.

Editorial

City needs rec center

As quickly as a thief in the night, the Hays City Commission passed an ordinance late last year forbidding minors from entering bars in Hays.

There's nothing basically wrong with the plan itself. It eliminates trouble for both tavern owners and the endangered patrons alike. The trouble is keeping those minors active in a non-alcoholic setting.

The university can only do so much to create weekend entertainment. The Memorial Union Activities Board sponsors activities after basketball games at the Back Door, but response has been limited.

If the city commission is so intent on keeping the minors out of the bars, they should find something to keep their interest.

Other communities are finding success with a recreation center-type format to keep those under 21 occupied, and Hays should do the same.

The city could provide the starting funds, and start the ball rolling. Those communities that have rec centers have found that donations can come in at a surprisingly quick rate.

It doesn't take much: a few pool tables, maybe a pinball machine or video game and a space for dancing. Extras, in time, could include a big-screen television or jukebox.

Bands could be brought in on the weekends, providing those who are underage with a viable entertainment alternative.

But those plans were not in the proposal by the city commissioners. Nothing was mentioned about a rec center.

Would the commission rather have the undergrads, both high school and university students, resort to doing nothing more than dragging Main Street, sneaking a bottle along with them?

If the commission would rather have that than a controlled non-alcoholic atmosphere, they had better rethink their priorities. DJB

Letters

Student section earns bad rap

To the editor,

This is a letter concerning the attendance problem at Fort Hays State basketball games and the new "conduct rules."

First of all, the student section has been the most faithful and supportive fans of the Tiger team since the year started.

Last week in the Hays Daily News, Rod Gardner stated that we need support from the students for every home game, not just the two most important home games of the year.

Wrong! The student's section is always full except for the recent Spring Arbor (Mich.) game. How about the pathetic attendance shown by the season ticket holders and alumni?

They are the ones who have only filled the place up for the two big games at home this year. I believe Mr. Gardner has his facts wrong.

Second, all these new rules are fine and dandy, but how about applying these rules to everyone. If the college thinks that only the students bring liquor and say obscene things, they are sadly mistaken. Film everyone at the games, not just the students.

Finally, most colleges would welcome a wild, rowdy student section. I'm not saying I approve of throwing things on the floor, but now it's not even a tough place to play anymore for the visiting schools. If everyone is afraid to do anything for fear of being kicked out, Gross Memorial Coliseum will no longer present problems for opponents. Look at the crazy fans at Duke, KU, Notre Dame, New Mexico (nicknamed the Pit), Syracuse and so on.

I know their crowds say bull-- and a--hole, because I've seen games at these places on TV and heard them. Do you think those people are going to be kicked out of those arenas for the rest of their college days?

The answer is a resounding no! Let the crowd get rowdy to a point, but don't treat them like convicts.

My love life spawns true confessions

If you have a few seconds, I'd like to talk to you about my love life.

I know, I know. I can already hear the yawning and the licking of index fingers, ready to turn the page. But please, bear with me. I find that it's more satisfying to share one's depression with others. You know, kind of spread it around and create a "group wallow" sort of thing.

The thing is, I never really thought I had much of a problem. It must be like alcoholism; the first step is admitting it.

I got through that stage relatively easy, I think. Of course, that's only if throwing myself at the feet of any girl that walked within a two-mile radius is considered a form of admission.

I probably should have taken the hint several years ago when I looked through the dictionary under the word "love" and it said "You've got to be kidding."

Oh well, hindsight is always better, I guess. It would have saved me years of anguish, as well as the money dished out to buy new jeans. Groveling is hard on the knees, you know.

But that's my problem, I think. I never know when to take a hint, even when I see the pendulum swinging miles in advance.

Take the other day, for instance. Now, even though I'm not Catholic, I happened to be walking by a church and thought "Oh, what the heck." So I stepped into the confession booth and realized I didn't have anything to confess.

I've never been so humiliated in my life.

After sitting there in silence for awhile, I finally concocted what I thought was a rather modest yarn, but the priest only laughed and said, "Lying is a sin, too, my son."

I don't know. It must have been something in my voice. I haven't figured it out yet.

Anyway, after that I thought I'd humor him, and soon started in with the age-old train of Platonic thought that has to do with man's free will vs. the idea of determinism.

"If God knows all -- past, present and future -- then how does man think under his own free will?" I asked. "What good is our distinction of reasoning if the One with the road map is directing traffic?"

"I mean, doesn't it seem kind of paradoxical to you?" I continued. "God gave us the ability to reason, and for what? To keep us up at night worrying about what that millisecond glance out of the corner of her eye meant?"

"Well..." "And don't tell me it was to set us above the other animals. I mean, I've never seen a pigeon do a nose-dive over unrequited love."

"And what if there's no God, anyway?" I wondered. "What if all of this is just a mistake? Who have I been talking to all this time? Myself?"

I got out of there, more depressed than ever. I felt empty and used. I felt like a non-returnable.

I have since come to the conclusion that there is nothing more depressing than depression itself.

As for my love life -- or the lack thereof -- I guess I'll just have to give it a little more time and have faith that someone, somewhere, knows what's going on.

It's either that or stock up on a new supply of jeans.

One petition proves too much for McMIndes Hall organizer

I have never been personally involved with a petition before. In fact, I had never signed one or even been asked to sign one. And now, here I am, the person behind the McMIndes Hall petition. Or rather, the person behind the persons that started the petition.

Why did we do it? Well, I did get into trouble for having my boyfriend up in my room after hours, but that wasn't the reason we started the petition. I have to admit, though, it was my getting busted that brought my attention to the problem.

I became aware that McMIndes' hours were much stricter than the other two dorms, and that didn't seem to be quite fair.

Many girls at McMIndes have boyfriends, and what normal girl wouldn't want to spend as much time as possible with her boyfriend?

We figured that since every girl living at McMIndes had paid good money to live there, the girls should have a chance to decide exactly when boyfriends or other male visitors should leave.

So I typed up a page explaining that the petition was a chance to vote on McMIndes' policy regarding the midnight curfew for male visitors.

Anyway, we wondered how many girls would actually be interested in such a change in policy, so we decided to find out.

There are six floors in McMIndes, and probably about fifty girls on each floor. My two associates and I went door-to-door, presenting and explaining the petition.

I was surprised at how many people did sign the petition. It helped that we explained to everyone that it was just for a vote. All we were asking for was the right to make our own decision.

After going door-to-door, we found we didn't quite have enough names to really prove our point, so we sat outside the doors to the cafeteria, asking every girl who came through if she had signed the petition, and if she hadn't, whether or not she was interested in signing it?

We finally finished with nearly 250 names. We thought that should be enough, and it was.

We got what we wanted, and now the rest is up to the McMIndes residents.

After all my experience with this petition, I have a few suggestions for anyone who is thinking about starting one.

My first piece of advice is -- don't.

One must be positive of the facts, and know that there will be a decent amount of support for it.

Do not start a petition that no one will want to sign, and be sure that what is being petitioned is possible.

One must be willing to give up a lot of valuable time and energy. A petition is not something that can be done overnight.

Feelings may get hurt, doors may be closed firmly in one's face. Many will say that it's a stupid idea, and some won't even sign. Don't let that ruin anything.

If it's a good petition, somebody will have to pay attention to it.

Someone will suggest ideas for other petitions. Believe me, after completing one, that will be enough for a long time.

Time rapidly drawing to a close for Ronald Reagan presidency

I can see the light at the end of the tunnel!

I can't believe it, in less than one year he'll be out. For good.

The Age of President Ronald Reagan is drawing to a close, finally. You know what? I'm still alive. Sometimes I wonder if that's a reason for rejoicing, considering the future.

Let's take a brief look at things -- things in general and things in particular.

Did you realize that most undergraduates grew up with Reagan, just as they grew up with television?

Pretty fitting though, isn't it? Former actor Reagan becomes president to a nation of TV babies.

"And now, President Ronald Reagan and the State of the Union Address -- brought to you by Ronald McDonald and the Happy Meal."

I'm quite surprised Ronnie doesn't have his own Saturday morning cartoon. "Bonzo Reagan and the Masters of the Universe."

I'm sure this has crossed his mind, and I'm not talking about the cartoon.

Another thing I've noticed that he gave us, especially noticeable now with the presidential campaign heating up, is vagueness.

In all the times I've listened to him speak, he never committed himself to anything more than a better and stronger American.

This candy-coated oratory reminds me of the music that our youth is subjected to on the radio -- sweetened (with 100 percent NutraSweet, of course.)

"His vague, syrupy speeches are designed to appeal and distract."

Could we call this pop-politics?

Of course we can! Most of the 1988 candidates are following Reagan's lead. I swear I heard Bob Dole's announcement speech in Russell somewhere before. It was from Reagan in 1984.

Let's get specific now. I want to touch briefly on Reaganomics.

Some of you may not realize this, but our president's main campaign premise in 1980 was his promise to balance the budget.

After he was in office, he told us of his economic plan.

The United States was weak, so we needed a mighty military.

Military spending means factories, factories mean jobs, jobs mean income and income means we are one step closer to the American dream.

Or briefly, an increase in capital goods will improve the economy in the long term.

It seems that he over-looked

America's best resource -- people. If the same money was spent on teacher salaries, school improvements, school lunch programs, health and fitness programs, we would have tapped a resource even Japan couldn't compete with.

It seems Reagan is more concerned with protecting his wealthy friends' multi-national interests in third world countries than he is in the people who elected him.

Reaganomics reminds me of a cottonwood tree we used to play on as kids. It was huge. Three of us together couldn't reach around it. It was a symbol of strength and stability, something for my future grandchildren to play on.

One night, a wind storm tore it down. It crumbled, rotten from the inside.

Oh well, the ball is rolling now. Maybe we should pay closer attention this election year.

Some people are calling this election boring because no candidate is a clear leader.

Is that dumb or what? The most exciting races are the ones with the pack going neck and neck towards the finish line for a gut-wrenching finish. Or am I missing something?

Am I the only one who thought the second half of the Super Bowl was boring?

Workshop to highlight drug awareness week

By JUNO OGLE
Staff Writer

A two-day workshop will highlight the activities promoting National Collegiate Drug Awareness Week, Feb. 8-14.

The Interventions Techniques workshop is just one of the activities planned by Boost Alcoholic Awareness Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students.

Activities will begin Monday with a speech by President Edward Hammond at 9:30 p.m. in the east living room of McMindes Hall.

His topic will be the importance of residence hall environment in a drug-free college or university.

The workshop will be next Tuesday and Wednesday in the Memorial Union Black and Gold Room.

The Smoky Hill Foundation for Chemical Dependency, Inc., and the Student Health Center are co-sponsoring the event.

Registration is Tuesday at 8:30 a.m. with activities beginning at 9 a.m. both days.

Presentations will be made by administrators, members of BACCHUS, Smoky Hill Foundation, and student health.

Topics will include attitudes towards alcohol and other drug use, the disease concept of alcoholism, children of addicted homes and support groups for abusers and their families.

Jim Nugent, BACCHUS adviser, said that workshops such as this are important in keeping information about drug abuse available.

"We need to keep the information in front of students," he said.

"You may have heard the message (of drug or alcohol abuse) 100 times, but the 101 time, it may mean something."

Other activities sponsored by BACCHUS include displays in the union, and a campus-wide bulletin board decorating contest with the theme "Hugs Not Drugs."

The film "Choices" will be shown at 7:30 p.m. at the Back Door on Wednesday.

This is the first year that BACCHUS has taken part in the national event.

National Collegiate Drug Awareness Week was founded to help establish and expand drug abuse education and prevention programs, and to reflect the message that illegal drug use is harmful.

Forsythe ratified to SGA vice president position

By DAVID BURKE
Managing Editor

A 45-minute discussion of AIDS by Student Health Center director Kathy Douglas capped last night's meeting of the Student Government Association.

Douglas said that she would like to see a health awareness class, educating students about, among other items, sexually transmitted diseases.

"Education is the best prevention," she said.

Douglas said that a year and a half ago, there were 21,000 cases reported in the United States. Today, there are more than 46,000.

Last December, there were 103 cases of AIDS reported in Kansas.

Today, Douglas estimated there are between 130 and 140.

Douglas said the AIDS symptoms are many of the same symptoms as the flu, including persistent tiredness; fever, chills and night sweat; a weight loss of 10 pounds or more; swollen lymph nodes and a sore throat; unexplained diarrhea; and pink or purple blotches on the skin.

The largest group affected, however, are those who have no symptoms at all.

In other business, Dana Forsythe was ratified as SGA vice president by a unanimous vote.

Forsythe, Hays sophomore, said he would like to enhance the communication with SGA staff and student senators.

"I'd like to have feedback back and forth with the committee chairmen," Forsythe said.

Forsythe also said he would like to have an active liaison between SGA and the Faculty Senate.

"I think that will really help out the administration and faculty as a whole," Forsythe said.

He also said he would work with SGA President Kevin Amack to help increase the voter turnout in SGA elections from the 11.68 percent turnout from last year.

In emergency business, the SGA approved the application of the Student Government Association of the Kansas Technical Institute in the Associated Students of Kansas.

"We have tried to get KTI in the Associated Students of Kansas," Lance DeMond, ASK campus director said. "It will relieve Fort Hays State of some of the western Kansas coverage."

DeMond also said more money would be received in ASK by the dues of KTI, located in Salina.

In its first reading, the SGA received the travel expenditures for three FHSU delegates to lobby in Washington, D.C.

Amack, Forsythe and SGA treasurer David Anne Brewer will represent FHSU. Student delegations from the Regents universities will meet with the Kansas congressional delegations on March 21 and 22, with the trip being from the 18th to the 22nd.

Lou Ann Kohl, Ellis senior, and Silver, a Yorkshire terrier, relax. Kohl was presented with the National Leadership Award. She was chosen by campus committees for her leadership abilities.

Student recognized for leadership

National award given to Kohl

The National Leadership Award recognizes students who show outstanding leadership participation while attending undergraduate institutions.

This year Lou Ann Kohl, Ellis senior, received the honor. She was chosen from the top 1 percent of her class that was eligible for nomination.

Campus nominating committees based their selections on the leadership positions occupied by the students.

"I was surprised to get it," Kohl said. "I thought there were other students who were more active."

The Disabled Students Association nominated Kohl for her work in that organization and the community.

She helped found the campus group in 1985 and, after serving as its president for two years, is the current vice president.

Kohl is also on the board of directors of the Western Kansas Association of Concerns of the Disabled, an advocacy group concerned with protecting the civil rights of disabled people.

Kohl will receive a certificate, and her name will be included in the 1987-88 National Leadership Awards registry.

Cannon fires up audience

By MAX EULERT
Staff Writer

Dynamite comes in small packages. In this case it comes in a cannon. Pamela Cannon that is.

This witty little package of musical energy stormed the Back Door this week and proceeded to blow the crowd away.

Cannon's virtuosity and versatility were highlighted by her sense of humor and easy going performance style.

And style it is. Cannon has spent her whole life performing. Growing up in Detroit, she was inspired by her father, who sang in a well-known barbershop quartet.

She began playing piano at an early age. She picked up a guitar at age 12 and formed an all-girl rock 'n' roll band in her teens.

This rock 'n' roll influence shows in her performance when she performed a great version of

George Michael's hit "Faith" and a tongue-in-cheek version of Led Zeppelin's "Whole Lotta Love."

She played a Billy Joel song which she called "Piano Ma'am." A song that fits her well, having played in a piano bar in Toronto for 10 years.

Cannon also played some original material, including a song she wrote enroute to Hays called "Life's a Bitch." The latter being a real toe tappin', beer drinkin', sing-a-long song.

Cannon also did a 1960s rock 'n' roll medley of Motown stuff. Reflecting her Detroit roots, the medley included songs by Aretha Franklin, Mitch Ryder, Martha and the Vandellas and Wilson Pickett.

Sharing her experiences on the road, Cannon told of an encounter with 200 bikers in a Key West bar. Thinking quickly, she broke into the Shangri-La's "Leader of the Pack."

Cannon also played folk and country music in her show. Her country repertoire includes a humorous song she wrote that had a national radio airplay. "I'm Leavin' Walk Out Backwards So It Looks Like You're Comin' In."

John Nelman, Cannon's soundman and drum programmer, also sang a duet of The Righteous Brothers' "You've Lost That Lovin' Feeling" with her.

Cannon mostly plays at resorts and resort towns in Colorado and Florida.

She'll be at Copper Mountain, Colo., most of February and March.

In April and May, she will be going into the studio to record her second album.

Cannon discovered Fort Hays State by accident last year when she and Nelman got stranded in Hays by a snowstorm.

"I love it here," Cannon said. "I love the people here. They are the sweetest."

Good humor enlivens 'Mikado'

Reviewed by David Newsom

One of the most popular Gilbert and Sullivan shows is back in Hays.

Back where it belongs, you might say.

Last night's opening performance of "The Mikado" -- played to a full Felten-Start Theater -- was accepted once again with warm laughter and applause from an appreciative Hays audience.

The opera first found its way to the Fort Hays State campus in 1910. Since then it has returned several times. And if last night's show is any indication, this year won't be the last time, either.

Written in the 19th century by the team of Sir Arthur Sullivan and W.S. Gilbert, "The Mikado" -- set "Once upon a time, long ago in a Japan that never really was" -- is actually a rousing satire on society in Victorian England.

Bruce Bardwell, Hays graduate student, plays the title character, a ruthless Japanese tyrant.

Bill Culver, Hays freshman, is the Mikado's runaway son, Nanki-Poo, who disguises himself as a wandering minstrel.

The object of his attention is Yum-Yum, played by Scott City senior Stephanie Janzen, a young maiden in love with Nanki-Poo, but engaged to be married to Ko-Ko, the Lord High Executioner of Titipu, played by Jerry Casper, Hays graduate student.

Casper practically steals the show with his performance, and his scenes with Pooh-Bah, a mindless politician with nothing on his mind but money, played by Maury Schulte, Norton senior, serve as some of the production's funniest moments.

The cast, made up of 30 performers, is joined by a 22-piece orchestra. Under the guidance of Donald Stout, professor of music and the director of the production, the ensemble boasts 25 musical numbers that will leave you smiling and humming as you depart the theater.

Unfortunately, the word "opera" will hit the immediate turn-off button for many. That's too bad, because "The Mikado" will take you by surprise.

The dialogue is witty, and the characterizations and performances are first-rate.

The show runs at 8 p.m. both tonight and tomorrow night in Felten-Start Theater. Ticket prices are $3 for students and $6 for adults.

"The Mikado" is not about Japanese people," Stout writes in his director's notes. "It is about English-thinking people -- dressed in Japanese costume. Perhaps that accounts for its tremendous popularity in England and in the United States during the past 100 years."

"Welcome to a Japan that never was!"

Play Review

'Chapter Two' interesting evening

Reviewed by Kim Konkol

Fantastic was the only word that came to my mind after seeing "Chapter Two" by Neil Simon in the Memorial Union Black and Gold Room last night.

The play, which was based on Simon's own marriage to actress Marsha Mason, was performed by the Alpha Omega Players.

Mitch Berry, who played the male support role, Leo Schneider, greeted the audience out of character before the play.

Berry said, the Repertory Theater of America is the most active repertory in America.

"We are celebrating our 20th year by doing a Neil Simon festival," Berry said.

The simple set was an East side apartment living room which doubled for a lower Central Park West apartment living room.

The set was complete with Picasso-like paintings on the wall. The cast was well chosen for the appropriate roles.

The whole story revolved around a recent widower and a beautiful, young, newly divorced woman and their whirlwind romance.

The main characters, George Schneider and Jennie Malone, played by Nathan Thomas and Jill Giles, are supported by Leo Schneider and Faye Medwick, played by Mitch Berry and Heidi Schwarzenbart.

Leo is George's off-the-wall brother. Faye is Jennie's best friend and former flame of Leo.

A definite comedy. The audience laughed aloud even through the most emotional and serious moments.

The best line from the play was quoted by George when he said "necessity is the mother of calamity."

If the classic performance was not enough, dessert was served at intermission.

All the atmosphere of an after dinner theater for just $4.50.

But the best part was it had a happy ending.

Comments from the audience after the show were positive.

If you missed this show, you missed an entertaining evening.

Movie Review

Streisand excellent in 'Nuts'

Reviewed by David Newsom

There were moments watching "Nuts," the new movie from the hands of director Martin Ritt and starring such big guns as Barbra Streisand and Richard Dreyfuss, when I felt that I was watching a play.

That's to be expected, I suppose, since it was adapted from Tom Topor's Broadway production of the same name.

And while I never saw the story presented in its original stage form, I doubt that it could have been much better than the film version.

The film mainly centers itself inside a courtroom, where a hearing is underway to determine the mental competency of a high-priced prostitute, and to decide whether or not her case is "fit" to undergo the scrutiny of a trial.

Streisand's performance as the call-girl charged of brutally murdering one of her clients is surprisingly controlled, and, toward the end, deeply affecting.

As the film got underway, I was afraid that she would let the role get away from her and intimidate her other actors.

I should have known better. Streisand is much too fine an actress for that.

At first, it seems that Streisand's "hooker with a heart of ice" is the only one with the intelligence enough to know what's going on.

She's aware of the world around her, and knows that the society, which wants so desperately to point its finger and label her as "nuts," is just scared because it realizes that she is no crazier than the average person walking the streets.

And then along comes Dreyfuss as her court-appointed defense attorney, and follows is the delicate uncovering of a multi-layered story that unfolds, scene after scene, into two of the best performances of the year.

"Nuts" is a good movie, and for those who might boycott it for whatever ridiculous reason they might have -- i.e., fear that Barbra Streisand might actually (gasp) break into a song -- are the ones who are missing out.

Tigers face Ichabods, Hornets

FHSU season hinges on big CSIC weekend

By MIKE MARZOLF
Sports Editor

Two weeks ago, Fort Hays State was riding an undefeated season with hopes of a national championship.

Then, Washburn University and Emporia State University came into Hays, and derailed the Tigers in consecutive games.

Now, the Tigers have a chance to return the favor, as they travel to Emporia and Topeka this weekend for round two of the match-ups.

"When we played here, the pressure was on us," Tiger Head Coach Bill Morse said. "Now, the pressure is on them."

"If we play the style of basketball we are capable of playing, we have a good chance to win."

The Tigers enter the weekend play with a 15-3 overall record and a 6-2 mark in the CSIC.

After losing three consecutive contests, including losses to the Hornets and the Ichabods, FHSU came back and won the next three.

"We lost three in a row, and then we turned around and won three in a row," Morse said.

"They were not big wins, but we did some things that will help us this weekend. Really, there is no good way to prepare to play in Emporia and Washburn."

First up for the Tigers will be the Hornets.

Emporia State comes in riding a two-game losing streak, losing on a last second shot at Wayne State College last Saturday night, and then lost again to Marymount College Tuesday night in Salina.

Emporia State Head Coach Ron Slaymaker said it doesn't matter what kind of streak they are on for this to be a big game. "This would be a big game if we had lost 10 in a row or won 10 in a row," Slaymaker said. "It is Fort Hays State."

The Hornets are currently 15-5 on the season and 5-2 in the CSIC.

Bob Bailey, 6-5 sophomore, is the leading scorer for the Hornets, averaging 22.1 points.

Following Bailey is senior guard Eric Carmon, who scores 15 points a contest, and 6-4 junior forward Jeff Law, who averages 12.8. Law also is the leading rebounder at 5.6.

Eric Anderson and Mark Lackey round out the starting five.

Anderson scores 7.7 points and Lackey 5 points.

The game is also important, not only for conference reasons, but more importantly for the District 10 Dunkel rankings.

The Tigers are currently in second place in the Dunkel at 50.2, and Emporia State is third with a 48.3.

The last time the two met, FHSU had a 47-27 lead at halftime only to see it disappear in the second half.

Slaymaker doesn't think it will necessarily help the Hornets.

"We might have some carry over, but no more than Fort Hays might have," Slaymaker said. "That was two weeks ago."

"It was nice we won, and it was too bad Hays lost, but that is over with. We have to go out and play a new game."

However, it does concern Morse somewhat.

"It concerns me that they came back like they did last time," Morse said. "They played extremely well in the second half."

"They are always tough on their home floor and in front of their own fans. But, I think we are capable of winning."

The following night, FHSU travels to Washburn.

Washburn is atop the CSIC and the Dunkel. They are 17-2 overall and are 7-0 in the CSIC. Their Dunkel rating is 53.4.

Washburn Head Coach Bob Chipman said the team has not been winning very pretty.

"We have been fortunate," Chipman said. "We haven't looked good at time. But, we always seem to find a way to win."

Bobby Sumler, along with Rich Hamilton are the leading scorers for the Ichabods.

It was Sumler, however, who nearly single handedly defeated the Tigers last time the two met.

"We can't let Sumler penetrate like he did here," Morse said. "That is one thing we must stop."

Both Hamilton and Sumler average 14.1 points a game.

Greg Wilson and Mike Dickerson are next for the Ichabods, scoring 9.9 and 9.8.

The other Ichabod starter is James Davenport, who averages 7.2.

Chipman said the weekend will tell a big story for the conference race.

"With a win, we could almost cement things," Chipman said. "But, if we were to lose, we could have a heck of a race on our hands."

"This is a big weekend. Every weekend in the conference is big, but when you go head to head with the one, two and three teams in the conference, a lot of things can happen."

Win or lose, Morse wants the Tigers to play good basketball.

"I just want us to go and play good basketball. That puts us in a no lose situation. If we win, we are in the race again, and if we lose, it will help us for the district playoffs."

Lady Tigers face stiff weekend tests

By TIM PARKS
Staff Writer

Women's Head Basketball Coach John Klein is pulling out all the punches this weekend, and with good reason.

Klein is doing everything in his power to help his team avenge earlier losses to Washburn University and Emporia State University.

Klein said his Fort Hays State Lady Tigers, who will take their 8-11 record on the road to Washburn and Emporia, have played well against their Kansas foes in the first half of earlier games, but have faltered in the second half.

"We feel we've played well against Washburn in the first half of both games. In fact, both games we've had the lead at halftime," Klein said.

"We just matched up with them in a man-to-man defense both times we played them. We've managed to hang with them in the first half, hopefully we can do that at Washburn," he said.

If FHSU can stay close to the 20-0 Lady Blues tomorrow evening, Klein will then put a new defense into effect.

"In the second half we are going to try to utilize a halfcourt press we've been working on. It's either going to make us or break us, but we've got to take that chance. Hopefully it will cause them to become confused offensively," Klein said.

Klein said he plans to go with the man-to-man defense in the first half, then switch to the new half-court press after halftime.

"We've got to do something differently coming out in the second half that won't allow them to adjust," he said.

The Lady Tigers will be the first team to attempt to press the Lady Blues, Klein said.

This is because many teams are concentrating on standout Kelly Jennings, the Lady Blues' 6-4 senior center. Jennings is averaging 20.7 points and 10.2 rebounds a game.

Klein said keying on Jennings may not be the way to stop Washburn's offensive attack.

"If you hold her down, someone like Brenda Shaffer will pick up the slack. That's what happened to us two weeks ago," Klein said.

Shaffer averages 17.7 points and 7.6 rebounds per game. She led the Lady Blues in scoring against FHSU in their second meeting, and was the leading rebounder in the first Washburn win at the Bahamas Goombay Shootout.

The Lady Blues also rely on 5-8 senior guard Latisha Yarnell, who is averaging 14.8 points a game.

The Lady Tigers ranked 10th in this week's District 10 Dunkel ratings, and Klein knows both games will be important if FHSU hopes to make the playoffs.

"It's a big challenge for the kids this weekend. It will be a very tough trip. Any win this weekend, or two wins this weekend, would certainly be a boost to our kids," Klein said.

The game at Emporia will be a rematch of the Lady Tigers' closest contest of the year. Two weeks ago FHSU lost 85-84 in four overtimes.

"I certainly believe they (the Lady Tigers) want to go back and beat them now. I also think Emporia won't take us lightly now. They (Emporia) know it's LADY TIGERS.

After two home meets over the weekend, the Fort Hays State gymnastics team duals in Wisconsin today against the University of Wisconsin at Eau Claire.

Tomorrow, the Tigers will compete in the University of Wisconsin at LaCrosse Invitational.

State

Emporia State lost its second game in a row Tuesday night when the Hornets lost 96-92 to Marymount College.

The NAIA's 18th-ranked team dropped to 15-5 on the season.

Washburn, however, is continuing a 12-game winning streak and remains undefeated in the CSIC.

Both teams will play host to Fort Hays State this weekend as the Tigers take on ESU Friday night and Washburn Saturday.

Kansas State still remains in control of the Big Eight standings after taking a 79-68 win over Iowa State Wednesday night.

The Wildcats advanced to 5-0 in the Big Eight following the overtime victory over the Cyclones.

Oklahoma improved its Big Eight record Wednesday to 6-1 after a 73-65 win over the University of Kansas.

KU led 31-29 at halftime, before losing its second consecutive game in Allen Field House.

National

Four new members have been inducted into the NFL Hall of Fame.

Allen Page, defensive tackle for the Minnesota Vikings; Fred Behtnekoff, wide receiver for the Oakland Raiders; Mike Ditka, tight end for the Chicago Bears and current Bears' head coach; and Jack Ham, linebacker for the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Wrestlers home for duals

By HEATHER ANDERSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Home sweet home. After a long season of duals and tournaments in various states, the Fort Hays State wrestlers will play host to the University of Wyoming and Central State University of Okla., tomorrow in double dual action.

However, this will be after a dual on the road Friday against Kearney State College.

Wrestling Coach Wayne Petterson doesn't expect easy victories over any of those teams this weekend, due to a number of factors.

Not only is CSU the No. 1 ranked squad in the NAIA, Kearney State is ranked in the Top 20 of the NAIA, and according to Petterson, the Wyoming Cowboys of NCAA classification are a highly regarded team.

Match that with a possibility of four weights open and four starters out due to injuries, and the team's approach to the duals changes.

"With our open weights, we're going to give away 18 points at the least," Petterson said.

"It's hard to realistically expect the team to win, but I've seen stranger things happen.

"This weekend, we're just going to perform well for ourselves. We hope for wins to give a good show at home and get a better record for the regional tournament next weekend," Petterson said.

At 118 pounds, Billy Johnson is still injured, but Petterson expects the defending national champion to be back in action by next weekend for regionals.

Greg Pfannenstiel will lead the team in the 126-pound weight class.

Pfannenstiel will see a rival Saturday when he matches up against CSU's Jeff Gowens.

Gowens won the first meeting of the two, but Pfannenstiel leads the series 2-1.

At 134 pounds, West Harding will meet against either Jimmy Filppo or Jerry Goss, both of CSU.

Goss is a returning All-American, but Filppo won the Fort Hays State Open with Goss taking second.

The 142-pound class is a toss-up for the Tigers, with Cliff Noce and Vernon James battling for the starting spot.

Whoever gets the varsity bid will be up against CSU's returning national champion, Todd Steidley.

Steidley was injured earlier in the week, but Petterson said that he will probably be back for tomorrow's dual.

Greg Dixon will be the starting Tiger at 150 pounds, and he will see his toughest match this weekend against KSC's Pogue.

In the 158-pound division, Mike Ellegood will tangle with CSU's other national champion, Johnny Nimmo.

FHSU will be open at 167 pounds, and possibly 177 pounds if Mike Nansel is still suffering from injuries.

"We are rather tentative as to whether or not Nansel will be able to compete this week," Petterson said.

If he is able to wrestle, he'll see key match-ups against Oliver of KSC, and Todd Stapleton of CSU.

"Gaven Ludlow could help himself out with some wins this weekend," Petterson said.

Ludlow will handle the 190-pound weight class for the Tigers.

Pete Cisneros is still out at the heavyweight division, forcing FHSU to forfeit at that weight.

"We don't know much about Wyoming yet, but we're sure they'll be tough," Petterson said.

"They're in the same situation we are with injuries and kids out, but I'm sure they'll still have a full team.

"Central State is also suffering from injuries, but I think they expect most of their team to be back."

Indoor track team to Jayhawk Invite

By TIM PARKS
Staff Writer

Head Track Coach Jim Krob knows the Jayhawk Invitational will be a tough meet, but he wants to qualify a few more team members for the NAIA nationals.

The invitational, starts at 5 p.m. this weekend in Lawrence and runs through tomorrow evening.

"I really don't know how we'll do in the meet until we get a chance to compete against some of these people," Krob said.

"We're trying to get some of these other people qualified for nationals. I'd like to see Don (Brunzell) Ruben (Esparza) and Mike Filley make their qualifying times (for nationals). I think they have a shot at it," Krob said.

FHSU will send seven men and eight women to the meet.

"It's going to be a real tough meet with KU, Kansas State, Texas, Wichita State and the junior colleges. Everybody's in one division. It's a big meet," Krob said.

Ramon Lopez, a transfer from Santa Ana, Calif., may be eligible to participate in the meet, but Krob said he isn't sure yet.

In the women's individual division, Krob plans to run Kathy Holling, Alton Junior, in the shot put. Chrissy Sitts, Valley Center sophomore, will run in the 5000 meters.

Marlys Gwaltney, Topeka

freshman, will compete in the 400-meters and Karen Borgstedt will run in the hurdles.

District 10 qualifiers from a year ago in their respective events are 60-yard hurdler Jon Haselhorst, Hays sophomore; and Steve Broxterman, Baileyville senior, high jumper.

Krob said the Tigers had a tough workout Monday.

"Monday was an excellent workout. We worked hard. Tuesday they were sore, but we'll see how they work out," Krob said.

"I'm pretty happy with the way everybody's working. They're doing a good job. Anybody that's willing to give it a shot, it's not too late. We're willing to work with them, but they need to work, because they're coming out late," he said.

going to be a game. I think both teams will be geared up for the game," Klein said.

The loss was the third of five straight defeats the team suffered before defeating Missouri Southern State College last weekend. Klein said the win over MSSC helped his team regain some confidence that may have been lost during the losing streak.

"Anytime you win with a young group of kids, it will always help their confidence. It particularly helped their confidence because we were struggling. We did beat a good team in Missouri Southern, and came back when things looked bleak," Klein said.

The Lady Hornets are led by 5-11 senior forward Denise Dawson, who is averaging 16.1 points and 7.5 rebounds a game.

Also scoring in double figures for ESU is 5-9 sophomore forward Kris Quayle, who averages 10.9 points a game.

"We're getting to the point in the season where people know just what everyone else is going to do, both offensively and defensively," he said.

WHY HAVE A DRUG AWARENESS WEEK?

The Drug-free Schools and Communities Act of 1986 suggests that colleges and universities:

! Establish, implement, and expand programs of drug abuse education and prevention.

! Develop prevention, intervention, rehabilitation, referral and education related to the abuse of alcohol and the use of controlled, illegal, addictive or harmful substances.

! Clearly reflect the message that illicit drug use is wrong and harmful.

Fort Hays State University, in response to the Drug-free Schools and Communities Act, strives to be drug free as defined as follows:

Environment

! Its commitment to create an environment that promotes and reinforces healthy, responsible living, respect for community and campus standards and regulations, the social, emotional, spiritual or intellectual and physical well-being of its community members.

Education

! Its commitment to educate members of the campus community for the purpose of preventing alcohol abuse, as well as educate them about the use of legal drugs in ways that are not harmful to self or others.

Policies

! Its commitment to establish and enforce clear policies that promote an educational environment free from the abuse of alcohol and other drugs.

Intervention

! Its commitment to provide for a reasonable level of care for alcohol and drug abusers through counseling, treatment and referral.
