Features

The Memorial Union Activities Board elected new officers for the 1987-88 school year. Walter Zemanick, Great Bend junior, was selected as the new chairman for the MUAB in the upcoming year.

Viewpoint

Nineteen candidates have either announced or are expected to announce plans to run for the U.S. presidency in 1988. There are far too many candidates in contention, as the competition is too stringent.

Sports

The Fort Hays State Tigers swept Kansas Wesleyan College in double-header action yesterday at Larks' Park. Today, the Tigers will play host to conference Kearney State College, Neb., in a 2:30 p.m. twinbill.

Staff, faculty vote down UWK name

(Editor's note: This is the third of a four-part series detailing reaction on a possible name change at Fort Hays State.)

By KEVIN KRIER
Managing Editor
and DAVID BURKE
Copy Editor

If it ain't broke, don't fix it. At least that's what the majority of faculty and staff members think of a proposed name change from Fort Hays State to the University of Western Kansas.

In a random telephone survey completed by The University Leader Wednesday and Thursday, 57 percent of those surveyed said there should be no name change for FHSU.

Twenty-six percent favored the UWK name, and 17 percent were neutral or suggested other ideas.

The name change was proposed by Robert Nicholson, professor of botany, at the March 2 Faculty Senate meeting.

The resolution said that since FHSU is the only degree-granting institution in the western half of Kansas; more than 87 percent of the students come from western Kansas; the Mission Role and Scope is to serve the western half of Kansas; a new president will be inaugurated; and the present name does not provide geographic identity for the university; the name should be changed.

While the resolution gave strong points in favor of a change, many faculty members were adamant in their opposition.

The two main reasons against the change were tradition and expense.

"Tradition is important, and FHSU has a long history. I see no advantage to wiping out 75 to 80 years of history just to change the name," Ray Youmans, professor of education, said.

"I don't think service would be increased to students or faculty, and I don't think name recognition is important. I believe we get more recognition than many people think we do," Youmans said.

While Youmans likes tradition, Agnes Schumacher, supervisor of the campus switchboard, doesn't like another name change.

In 1977, the name was changed from Fort Hays Kansas State College.

"It's probably my age. I don't like a whole lot of change unless it's forced upon me. I like Fort Hays State University," she said.

"They've changed the name so many times, it freaked me out. Now they want to do another one," Schumacher said.

A computer center employee, Donna Hall, also said the name has been changed too often.

"I started school in 1967 when it was known as Fort Hays College.

Then they changed it in 1977 to Fort Hays State University," Hall said.

"I just don't think it's feasible to change it again. UWK sounds too much like a juco," she said.

Along with tradition and history, expenditure was another chief reason for the objection to the name change.

"It'll cost too damn much money to attempt to do it," Robert Berland, maintenance electrician, said. Another employee, LuAnn Pfeifer, a clerk at the Registrar's office, agreed with Berland.

"It would be too expensive to change the name now," she said. "Transfers and letterheads would have to be changed, and it wouldn't make much sense to spend that money when there are better ways to do it."

Although proponents of the resolution said the new name will aid recognition and location of Fort Hays State, some staff members polled said FHSU is already well-known.

"In the circles I travel, people know where Fort Hays State is located," Bill Moyer, Memorial Union recreation director, said. "We have a name established, and there is no need for a change."

Karen Cole, an instructor and librarian in Forsyth Library, also agrees FHSU is a well-known quantity.

"I think Fort Hays State shows where the university is," she said. "I'm an alumni, and I'd hate to say I was a graduate of the University of Western Kansas."

Robert Jennrich, university police officer, cited history as a premise for keeping the status quo.

"I don't know what we have to change it for. We have buildings named after the fort already," Jennrich said. "We have the NAIA back-to-back national champions (men's basketball in 1983-84). How are you going to change that around?"

While the majority of faculty is for keeping the name, there were several who voiced favorable opinion for UWK.

The most popular reason for changing the name is to give FHSU

Rain damages buildings, closes road

By MARY WEBER
Staff Writer

Rain poured down on Hays Monday and early Tuesday morning. According to the Fort Hays Experiment Station, 3.9 inches of rain fell in the recent downpour.

Most of the buildings around campus just suffered water damage from water beating in. However, the road leading to Gross Memorial Coliseum is another story, Dale Akers, physical plant director, said.

"I imagine we have at least a good five feet of water there," Akers said.

The road leading to the coliseum has been closed since the second blizzard in late March because of high water, Akers said.

"This is routine. When we think it is hazardous, we lock it up. It was definitely dangerous Tuesday night," Akers said.

He said they were getting ready to reopen the road before the rains hit early Monday morning.

"We were real fortunate. Not a bit of damage was done to the grounds,"

Jim Schreiber, grounds superintendent, said.

The storm left behind quite a mess around the campus, but the cleaning process has been started, Schreiber said.

According to the experiment station, the last rainfall like this on record was in August 1980. Hays is 2.18 inches ahead of the average so far in April.

The basement in Wiest Hall had water seep in. Because Wiest is located close to Big Creek, and the water level kept rising late Wednesday afternoon, water in the basement caused a problem, Jim Long, hall manager at Wiest, said.

"There wasn't a large amount of damage, just a big mess," Long said.

The campus telephone operating system, which is located in the basement of Wiest, suffered some water damage, but it was nothing too serious aside from the carpet being extremely wet, Long said.

"It just seeped in through the

No violation in SGA race

The decision that no violation occurred in the Student Government Association election that took place last week was announced at last night's SGA meeting.

Terry Poe, Hays junior, filed a protest against the election after the results were announced. Poe, who was a candidate for president, and his running mate, Jay Boley, Eskridge senior, claimed that student government bylaws were violated during voting—and counting of ballots.

The student affairs committee met concerning the issue and reported at last night's meeting.

"It was decided that no violation was committed," Marcy Harner, Sylvia junior, said.

Harner went on to say that the committee will review the senate constitution and make a final ruling statement by the end of the semester.

Bill Jellison, SGA adviser, said he thought the committee handled the situation very well.

"I think Marcy should be commended for the job she did. Everyone was very mature about the whole thing," Jellison said.

The results of the election were unanimously ratified.

Brad Wilkinson, Hays, an employee of the Fort Hays State grounds department, prepares the plastic mesh in Picken Pond yesterday morning. Lily pads, which will be added to the pond next week, are contained by the mesh.

Leaders appointed for upcoming year in MUAB interviews

By RANDY MATHEWS
Staff Writer

Fort Hays State's Memorial Union Activities Board has passed the reins to a new group of organizational leaders.

In an interview process completed Tuesday evening, current MUAB committee chairmen and I.B. Dent, director of student activities, selected eight new committee chairmen for the 1987-88 school year.

Positions awarded were Walter Zemanick, Great Bend junior, chairman; Philip Crabbe, Garden City special student, vice-chairman; Shawn Beuchat, Silver Lake sophomore, music; and Kristy Love, Zurich freshman, publicity.

Other positions included Kendra Halderman, Long Island junior, travel; Kellie Harmon, Hays sophomore, technical/lights; Kenton Smith, Plainville freshman, technical/sound; and Lisa Moritz, Hays junior, films, arts and lectures.

Matt Keller, outgoing MUAB chairman, said he was pleased with the new selections.

"I think we have a nice combination of experienced MUAB members as well as new people who will bring in new and exciting ideas," he said.

Keller said many of those selected are new to the organization.

"What's really interesting is that only two of the new committee chairmen have had previous experience as MUAB chairmen," he said.

Walter Zemanick, next year's chairman, has been travel chairman during the 1986-87 school year. Shawn Beuchat, who will be in charge of the music committee, served as technical co-chairman and sound chairman for the same period.

Dent said the high level of turnover is not unusual.

"Generally, the undergrads are still in the process of moving up within the organization. If the system is working right, most of the chairmen are juniors or seniors, so many of them will be leaving at the end of each year," he said.

Despite that fact, Dent voiced concerns over the lack of experience which is typical of new chairmen.

"I always worry when we have new people trying out for positions who have not been part of MUAB before because they often don't realize the complexity involved in putting on shows," he said.

"We will probably lose one or two of them within the first year because they don't understand the amount of time required," he said.

Dent said one position remains unfilled.

"The extra-curricular chairman has been left open. We will probably open it back up in the fall," he said.

Dent said the extra-curricular position is not clearly defined. Past MUAB-sponsored activities supervised by the committee have included Game Nights in the Memorial Union, the Family Feud game at the Backdoor, and the Reptile World presentation and Fashion Show in the Memorial Union cafeteria.

"It's a pretty significant committee. Imagination and creativity would be important abilities to have in that position," Dent said.

Kellie Harmon, incoming technical committee co-chairman, said she was pleased with the selection.

"I enjoy music and this is going to give me an opportunity to learn more about how it is presented and also the chance to meet some new people," Harmon said.

"We have a nice combination of experienced MUAB members as well as new people."

—Matt Keller

Kendra Halderman, who will take over as travel chairman, was a member of the committee this year.

"I enjoyed working with Walter (Zemanick) this year on the committee, so I thought I would try out for the chairman position," she said.

Halderman said she is already working on promotional materials for some of the trips in the planning stages for next year.

Keller said many of the new chairmen will begin work before the fall semester begins.

"The outgoing chairmen will get together with them this semester and show them the ropes. A lot of them will have to start programming for next semester this summer," he said.

Series ends with dramatic life story Prizes awarded in giveaway

By BECKY OBORNY
Staff Writer

A dramatized film biography of Vincent Van Gogh will conclude this season's Classic Film Series tomorrow night.

Lust for Life, produced in 1956, stars Kirk Douglas as Van Gogh and Anthony Quinn as painter Gauguin. The film was produced by John Houseman and directed by Vincente Minelli.

"The personal story of Vincent Van Gogh is absolutely fascinating," Martin Shapiro, Classic Film Series director, said.

"It was an intense, emotional life - a tragic life," he said.

"He died of a terrible illness which we later found out was epilepsy," Shapiro said.

"The main thing in the movie, however, is that the works of art are immortal," he said.

"The stars of the movie are the paintings, and the movie adores the paintings."

Shapiro said the scenes in the movie, filmed in France and the Netherlands, have been constructed to recreate Van Gogh's most famous paintings.

"They've reproduced the paintings in the same setting as the artwork," Shapiro said.

"The rooms look like the setting, and those who know the art are fascinated," he said.

Risky Business

"FUNNY, OFFBEAT AND ORIGINAL... Perhaps the best film of its kind since 'The Graduate'."

"Also, the people in the movie look remarkably like the paintings," Shapiro said.

"It's a visual delight," he said.

Quinn won an Academy Award as best supporting actor for the film, and Douglas was nominated for best supporting actor. He lost to Yul Brynner for The King and I.

The movie will be preceded by The Violinist, a 1959 cartoon featuring the voice of comedian-director Carl Reiner.

"It spoofs the idea of suffering to become a great artist," Shapiro said. Zoran Stevanov, professor of art, will provide an introduction for Lust for Life.

The film will be shown at 8 p.m. Saturday in Felten-Start Theater in Malloy Hall.

Admission is $3 for the general public, $2 for Hays Arts Council members, and $1 for students and senior citizens.

Free refreshments will be provided by Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company, Hays.

A graduating senior will be going up, up and away soon.

Bonnie Unrein, Hays senior, won the free hot air balloon ride given away by the Alumni Office last week.

During Senior Appreciation Week, April 6-10, the Alumni Office sponsored a Thank Goodness I'm Graduating open house and drawing for all seniors who will graduate this year.

First prize was a free hot air balloon ride, courtesy of Shirts T-Rific, 208 W. Eighth.

Some prizes were provided in cooperation with the University Bookstore and Poppingo Video, 107 E. 27th.

Most of the prizes, however, were provided through the Alumni Office, Melinda Keim, office manager, said.

Other prizes and winning seniors include: two free movie rentals, Kara Renz, Rush Center; $75 toward the purchase of a class ring, Kerry Swanson, Ashland; three one-year annual memberships to the Student Alumni Association, Gregory Bell, Belpre; Joyce Dinkel, Hays; and Lenora Goetz, Hays.

Other prizes were an FHSU visor, Geri Larson, Belleville; a set of commemorative glasses, Chris Powers, Hays; an FHSU sweatshirt, Christine Schmidt, Hays; an FHSU jersey, Jeff Keller, Great Bend; an autographed copy of President Tomanek's range plant book, Kathleen Drew, Hays; and a limestone desk pen set, Sharon Johnson, Hays.

"We had almost 200 people up here for the drawing," Keim said.

Jan Johansen, acting executive director of the Alumni Office, agreed with that figure. "I think we had a good turnout," Johansen said.

"This is the first year something like this has been done," Johansen said.

"We were just trying it out. I think it is something we want to continue," she said.

According to Johansen, the winners were notified by mail and must come to the office to pick up their prizes. In the case of Unrein, "she'll come in, and we will take her down to meet George Busche, the person responsible for taking her up in the balloon," Johansen said. "It sounds like it will be fun."

Campus

- The Fort Hays State Industrial Arts Club has announced its new officers for the 1987-88 academic year. They include Randy Goodale, St. Francis junior, president; Robby Kaempfe, Oberlin sophomore, vice president; Nancy Kuhn, Grainfield senior, treasurer; Cindy Larson, Leonardville junior, secretary; Ed Weiner, Colby sophomore, and Darron Harms, Jetmore senior, sergeant at arms; Bill Havice, assistant professor of industrial education, and Ronald Haefner, Blaine sophomore, are reporters. Sponsors for the club are Glen Ginther, associate professor of industrial education and Jim Walters, assistant professor of industrial education.
- The FHSU Talking Tiger debate team has placed seventh in national competition at Baton Rouge, La. Eric Krug, Great Bend senior, was the 16th highest ranking individual debater in the tournament sponsored by the Cross Examination Debate Association. Bill Watt, assistant professor of communication, is the team's coach. Other members of the team include Chris Crawford, Great Bend senior, Doug Kaba, Hoxie junior, and Joel Moyer, Leoti sophomore.
- The Zeta Pi Chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi professional business fraternity had its annual Yellow Rose Banquet at the Hays Holiday Inn Holiday, North U.S. Highway 183, Saturday, April 11. Several awards were given during the program by chapter adviser Joan Rumpel. Those awards included the Outstanding Pledge Award presented to Jeff Everhart, Wellington junior, fall semester; and Marcy Andrews, Cheney sophomore, spring semester. The Bob Armstrong Memorial Scholarship was awarded to four chapter members. They are Deb Bettenbrock, Brookville junior; Greg Dennett, Russell senior; Deana Elston, Hays senior; and Mickie Prenger, Macon, Mo., junior. The Scholarship Key was presented to by Scott Wetzel, Tribune senior. This award is given to a graduating senior with the highest grade point average for two years. Elston also was presented the Distinguished Service Award. This award is voted upon by chapter members to honor a member for meritorious service rendered to the chapter. Mark Griffin, Overland Park senior, gave the farewell to those in attendance. Griffin is the outgoing president.
- The 28th Annual Western Kansas Industrial Arts Fair, sponsored by the FHSU Industrial Arts Club, is scheduled for Friday and Saturday, April 24 and 25 in Gross Memorial Coliseum. The fair is held each spring to give junior high and high school students an opportunity to display their work in industrial arts. There are eight divisions into which each project is classified. The divisions are as follows: arts and crafts, drafting, graphic arts, metalwork, multi-pupil, open, power and energy and woodwork. Entries are projects completed in industrial arts classes during the school year. All junior and senior high schools in the western 57 counties of the state have been invited to participate in the fair. The public is invited to view projects from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. on April 24 and from 8 to 11:30 a.m. on April 25.

a better identity and image.

"I would prefer a change to UWK, but not if it's going to alienate alumni and students. Professionally, in my field, FHSU does not convey the proper message," Donald Bloss, professor of education, said.

"The fact that we won the NAIA men's basketball championship two straight years is immaterial. When we go around the country on different trips, and I tell them I am from FHSU, they get a puzzled look on their face because they don't know where it is," Bloss said.

"Then I tell them we are the university that serves western Kansas, and they get a better idea where we are located," he said. "But, I wouldn't push the idea just for the sake of changing the name."

Another instructor said he thinks it will help the image of FHSU outside the friendly confines of Kansas.

"I say go for it. I'm 100 percent in favor of it," Susan Bittel, instructor of communication, said. "I attend a lot of conferences out of state, and people think this is a military school. It hurts our image."

"People think we are a military school out here in western Kansas," she said. "The University of Western Kansas would give us the identity and prestige our graduates would appreciate."

The chairman of the communication department, James Costigan, said the name change can only help recruiting efforts.

"As a person who recruits extensively, it is easier to say I'm from the University of Western Kansas rather than Fort Hays State University, especially to those outside of this area," he said. "People would know where this is."

Steve Sims, director of enrollment and admissions counseling, wholeheartedly agrees.

"I believe it has been expressed that it would tie in with the 85-90 percent of our students who are from western Kansas, this would tie western Kansas in with the rest of the entire university," Sims said. "Western Kansas needs an institution so it can say 'this is our institution.'"

While most faculty members do not have first-hand knowledge of schools going through the name change process, Dan Rupp, professor of economics, has been through the process five times.

"I have some ambivalent feelings toward the name change. I have been associated with five different schools that have changed their names and have never had a problem with the name changes," Rupp said. "In fact, when Thomas More Prep changed its name, there was a lot of furor at the time."

"But, five years later, those same people complaining about the change were saying it was the best thing they could have done," he said.

A name change is favored by some faculty, but not as the University of Western Kansas.

Martin Shapiro, professor of music, suggests Hays State University.

"My suggestion is kind of in the middle, and that's to get rid of the 'Fort'. It would be a more streamlined name just as we have Wichita State, Emporia State and Pittsburg State," Shapiro said. "The city is not known as Fort Hays, it is Hays. It's not like we're Fort Wayne (Ind.) or Fort Lauderdale (Fla.)."

Another suggestion would not only change the name but the mascot as well.

Sims said another name for the university could be fitting.

"Rather than the University of Western Kansas, I think it should be called the University of Kansas in Hays," he said.

Other faculty members would agree to a name change if they can see valid reasons for the decision.

But, for Jack Barbour, assistant professor of political science, there are no good reasons at this time.

"If there were a good reason for a change, I would be in favor of it," he said. "But, I haven't seen any good reasons for a name change. It's a waste of time, effort and money."

pillars. It was a real mess," Agnes Schumacher, supervisor of the campus switchboard, said.

According to Schumacher, she and her workers kept up as good as they could by vacuuming up the water.

"We would get one corner vacuumed up, and it would come at us from the other side," Schumacher said.

Schumacher and her crew stayed until midnight on Wednesday trying to get things back in order.

"It was aggravating, but nothing you can't learn to live with," Schumacher said. "I think we have it pretty well licked."

The amount of rain received in a short period of time caused the ground to be saturated and raised the water level in the soil.

A tile field under Wiest, which was installed when the hall was first built, serves the purpose of draining water in times when the water level is high. However, this time the pump failed, causing water to enter into the basement, Steve Culver, assistant director of housing, said.

"There is no structural damage. It was an inconvenience to our staff, and it caused them some extra hard work, but beyond that there was no real harm," Culver said. He said that the problem has been taken care of.

"You just would have had to see it to believe it," Schumacher said.

1988 election too big

The 1988 presidential election is looming on the horizon. With the election comes the presidential hopefuls, of which there are a few too many.

There are approximately 19 people who have shown an interest in running.

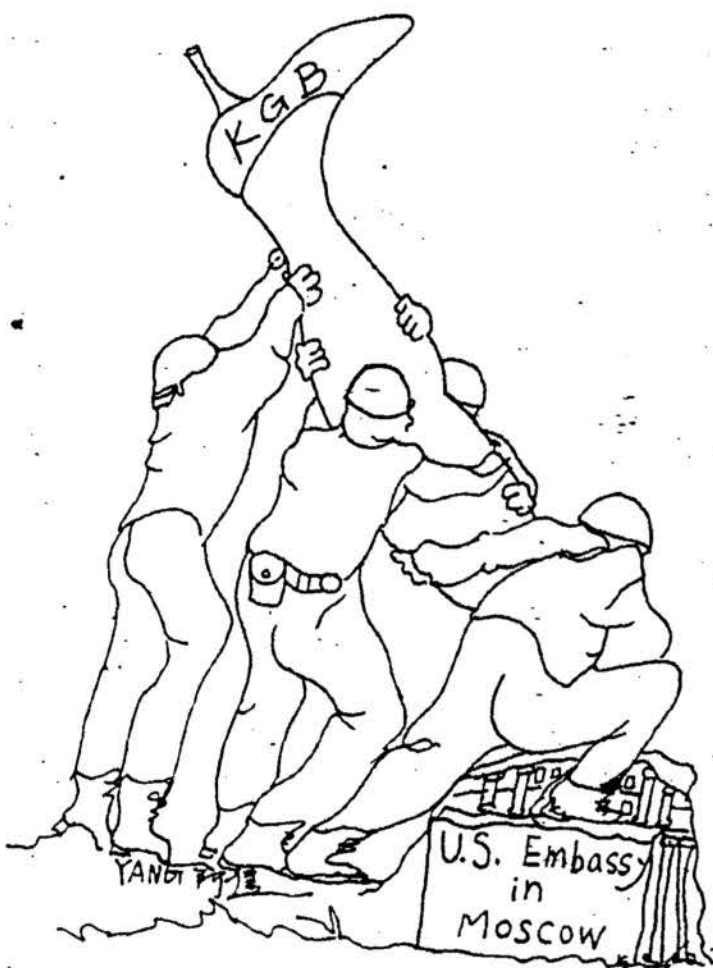

That is about 15 too many.

Next year will be a big election year. Not because of any major campaign issues that have developed so far, but this election will mark the fourth election in history that an incumbent president has not been on the ticket. The last time this happened was in 1968.

The preliminary election race is becoming too big of an issue. Most of these hopefuls were looking at the president's spot as soon as the 1984 election votes were tallied. The number of candidates definitely needs to be weeded out.

How can the American voters be expected to know, let alone keep up with any of these presidential hopefuls?

The number of candidates should be kept under a 100 or so at least.

New name suggested

Dear Editor,

In order to remain current in this great controversy it seems I'd best change my emphasis from geographic identity to the more abstract concept of "image".

Bluntly put, to think you can earn prestige by merely changing your name is to display the mentality of the Hollywood hopefuls working at the car wash. "I think I'll change my name to Rambo La Rue," he says. "And I'll change mine to Honey Angelbuns," she says.

Great. Just great. If we were in the business of selling hamburgers or blue jeans, this would not be so embarrassing.

Nevertheless, whatever business we see ourselves to be in, we should slog ahead with great fortitude to attain the highest possible distinction, the very best image, the MOST prestigious name. (If we're going to be trite and pretentious, let's not be half-T & P). I therefore, and humbly, submit my "image" suggestion: The Almighty Genius Deity Big-Bang and Lots-A-Money University. Could anyone fail to be impressed by this?

My advance apologies to any religious, scientific or economic sensitivities tweaked by the foregoing. Rarely is satire called to such depths to make the obvious obvious.

Rhetorical question: "Would the University of South-Central England" call to mind a better "image" than "Oxford"?

And finally, after a mild headache, the last alternative: let's pick a number. I suggest nine.

Elderly sometimes deserve appreciation

Elderly people in the United States seem to get a bad rap, and I am as guilty as anyone when it comes to contributing to it.

I am not sure how I got this way either. I like to think of myself as a caring, understanding person. But lately I have done my share of badmouthing.

My roommate has a problem with her adviser. He is an elderly person on the verge of retirement. (He should have retired years ago.)

He has just about lost it. That is not a nice way of putting it but probably accurate. I have heard nothing but complaints from everyone who has had him as a teacher or an adviser.

My roommate will be a junior next semester and was supposed to enroll weeks ago. She finally got to yesterday.

For weeks she had been making appointments to see him. Every time he was either just not there or had canceled it without her knowledge. Needless to say, she was very frustrated.

She has taken all of her generals, and her major has a set schedule of what she will take for two of the four semesters she has left. So she had a limited choice of what classes she could take next semester. When she couldn't get into three of the classes she needed, she was more than just frustrated.

Experiences such as my roommate's give elderly people a bad image. It is an image most of them do not deserve.

Until I was in high school, I did not really know any elderly people besides my grandparents. And I didn't know them that well because I was lucky if I got to see them three or four times a year.

There had been no elderly people in my neighborhood. My friends' parents were hardly even in their 40s, let alone their 60s. I had not been exposed to that section of the population.

When I moved to a small community in Kansas, for the first time in my life I experienced elderly people on a daily basis. My grandparents are even in the same state so I have really gotten much closer to them.

But now I kind of feel like I got robbed of something. My great-grandma Inez died my senior year in high school just when I was getting to know her.

During my childhood, she had always kind of scared me. I never knew what a special person she was, and I am really disappointed I missed so much of what could have been special times between us.

She used to tell the most incredible stories about her past. Recalling when her family moved to Kansas, she said she used to run behind the covered wagon picking and eating wild strawberries.

It seemed by the time I was old enough to appreciate and really respect her she was getting too old to share these things with me.

My grandpa died over semester break, and I discovered then that even though I thought I had learned something from my experience with my great-grandma, I hadn't.

There was so much I learned after my grandpa died that I didn't know while he was alive. I never even asked about many of these things. Now, it is too late.

I worked for an elderly lady when I was in high school, running errands and doing some of the more strenuous house work. It is an experience I encourage everyone to undertake because it teaches you so much.

Elderly people are very special; they can share so many things. I forget that sometimes. I go along like most everyone else thinking they can be such a bother. But they deserve a chance just like everyone else, maybe more.

Cussing, drinking habits cured by bet

Enough bad habits to last two lifetimes, that's what I've got. But I've figured a way to get rid of some of the less "lady-like" bad habits.

A simple bet is all that it takes. Let me explain.

To begin, many different people have many different bad habits. Some of these could be minor bad habits like beginning or ending every sentence with like or ya' know. Ya' know what I mean. Or some bad habits could really be disgusting like picking your nose in class. That is a really gross bad habit.

But then there are the really not-very-nice bad habits. For me this includes cussing. I am the world's worst cusser.

If you don't think I cuss bad, just come down to the Leader offices on a production night and listen in. I've decided now is the time to end some of these bad habits that I've picked up since I have been in college.

So a friend and I have got a bet going to help us both end our cussing habits.

The bet is for every cuss word said, the person has one less beer to drink that week.

Now before you say, "That's no bet," see if you can do it.

If I keep going at the rate I have been, I won't be drinking for the rest of my life.

The rules are quite simple, but we keep revising them.

First we set a limit on the number of drinks we could possibly have in one week. Doug got 21, three beers a day, and I got 15. I got fewer possible drinks because I don't have as many opportunities to drink in the same week as he does.

The next rule is simple. For every cuss word that is said, one drink is knocked off the total number of drinks for that week.

Those were all the rules we had at 6 p.m. Monday when we made this bet.

By 10 p.m. I knew I was in trouble. I was already in the five range and still had six whole days to go through.

I left the offices at 12:30 a.m. I knew I should have gone and had a drink. I only had one more drink available to me. I had cussed 14 times in six hours. The sad part is I really was trying not to cuss.

Instead of going for that drink, I went home and went to bed. The next cuss word came when I woke up in the morning and realized I had overslept. That did me for the week. I was out of the game. I could see a totally dry summer in front of my eyes.

But wait, I was "saved" by a new rule.

I could go into the negative and take drinks off of next week. OK, I thought, this will be easy.

Ha!

As of yesterday I was at -15. I'm not kidding when I say I'll never drink again.

So we reworked the rules a little bit. Instead of 21 and 15 drinks per week, we each get 25. If one of us goes into the negative, those drinks, up to 10, can be credited to the other person. Those drinks are free drinks, too. We start over again at the beginning of each week.

Because I had cussed past -10, Doug now has 10 free drinks, and any cussing he does won't take away from those drinks.

Luckily for me Doug has given me seven free drinks because he is also in the negative.

Somebody asked me last night what the winner got. There will be no winner between the two of us. We'll both be winners. We'll both cuss less, which I am already starting to do in a big way, we'll both drink less until we learn not to cuss again, and we'll save money. That is important to any college student.

This is a fairly simple bet, and it's easy to do. Why not join us and end some of your bad habits -- if you have any.

Homework blues hit as spring arrives

It looks like spring is finally here for good.

I never have liked winter very much. Snow and ice are pretty on Christmas cards, or pictures of the Great White North, but I don't like to have to deal with them on a day-to-day basis.

There's just something about being cold and wet that I don't like. It might have something to do with the fact that for 18 years, I still had to get out in bad weather and help with whatever needed to be done on my dad's farm.

But spring is a different story. There's something about this season, when the air gets warm and everything starts anew, that I can't imagine anyone disliking.

After the two late blizzards that struck this area, it seemed like spring would never arrive. But now it has, I hope it will stay.

The only bad thing about spring is that it makes it even harder than usual for me, and many other students, to concentrate on school work. After all, who wants to go to class or study for a test when it's so beautiful outside?

There are so many other things to do, like go for a walk, lay in the sun, play baseball, or just drive around and watch the world come out of hibernation.

And teachers just don't seem to understand this. They still assign things just as though it was 40 below and none of us had a thing else to do.

But that's what they get paid for -- to provide educational opportunity for those of us who pay tuition.

Maybe students should try harder to understand that teachers aren't trying to be the bad guys in the situation. Most of my teachers seem to be human, and I'm sure they probably have spring fever as bad, if not worse, than I do.

I doubt that instructors appreciate all the complaining students do about having to spend time in class or on homework, when that is what we pay for. That's something a lot of students need to try to realize.

Teachers are a lot like the mailman. No matter what the weather, they still have a job to do. That means our educations are still their main concern, no matter how sunny or cloudy the sky.

When we had those snow days, the university president had to get permission from the governor to officially call classes off. I think that says something about how important those professors and instructors really are.

Teachers can't cut class, just because they don't feel like going. When they chose their career, they accepted the responsibility of giving us the chance to enrich our lives with knowledge, whether we want to or not.

And how much thanks do they get?

Not a lot. In fact, it's pretty sad how much we take the opportunity they provide for granted.

But we do pay for our educations, one way or another. As students, we have a responsibility, also -- to really learn all those things required for our degrees and future careers.

When I cut class, it is my duty to make sure I find out what I missed. That's part of my job as a student.

I don't remember signing any contracts at pre-enrollment saying that I would be there every day, bright eyed and ready for that intellectual experience.

That's something teachers take for granted.

I think instructors have to accept the fact that students, even the most interested, studious and serious ones, will occasionally give in to spring fever and miss a lecture or two.

That doesn't mean they are any less intent on continuing their education.

It just means students are human, too.

Harriers will receive test at Sterling

By MIKE MARZOLF
Asst. Sports Editor

The bigger they come, the harder they fall.

After last week's easy wins for both the men and women track teams of Fort Hays State, they will now face bigger and better competition.

The Tigers travel to Sterling this weekend for the Sterling Relays. There they will face 13 or 14 teams, including two-time defending district champion Southwestern.

"Southwestern is awful tough," head coach Joe Fisher said. "They get all the sprint kids and throwers out of the football program, so they have an advantage in that respect."

Don Carter, who has missed both meets this season, will be back in action on a limited basis at Sterling.

Carter, in his final season of competition, will participate in the high jump and triple jump events.

"I think it is wise if we ease him back into competition," Fisher said. "He hasn't high jumped this year, so we will try that and the triple jump. We will leave him out of the long jump because that is the event he hurt himself in."

Fisher earlier had intended to send his All-American to the University of Kansas Relays this weekend, but doesn't think he is ready for the strong competition.

The strong competition at Sterling will include a full Bethany team. FHSU saw some of the members of the Swede team last week in McPherson, but many of its top athletes were at another event.

The Tigers will see how some of their strengths stack up against other top performers in the area.

"Barton (County) has some tough middle distance guys," coach Fisher said. "Southwestern has a real fine hurdler, they are tough in throws and distances, also. We are going to be in some real good competition."

"The biggest thing we look for is individual performances, as well as team. Last week the competition wasn't that stiff, so it really wasn't a test. They will be tested this week."

--Joe Fisher

This meet should really help the Tigers evaluate how they have been coming along.

"Our conditioning is starting to get better," Fisher said. "The biggest thing we look for is individual performances, as well as team. Last week the competition wasn't that stiff, so it really wasn't a test. They will be tested this week."

Fisher would like to see more athletes qualify for the National meet this week.

"We are not doubling and tripling up on a lot of events this week," Fisher said of the chances for some kids possibly qualifying this week. "They have an opportunity to go out, and go for it and have a chance to qualify."

"I would like to see some more of our hurdlers qualify, and (Ruben) Esparza is just going to run the 800 and a relay," Fisher said. "So he has an opportunity to qualify being fresh this weekend."

Deb Moore, who went to the KU Relays Wednesday and yesterday to participate in the heptathlon, will join the team on Saturday for the meet. At last report she was in eighth place of 16 girls and was the top point-getter for NAIA participants.

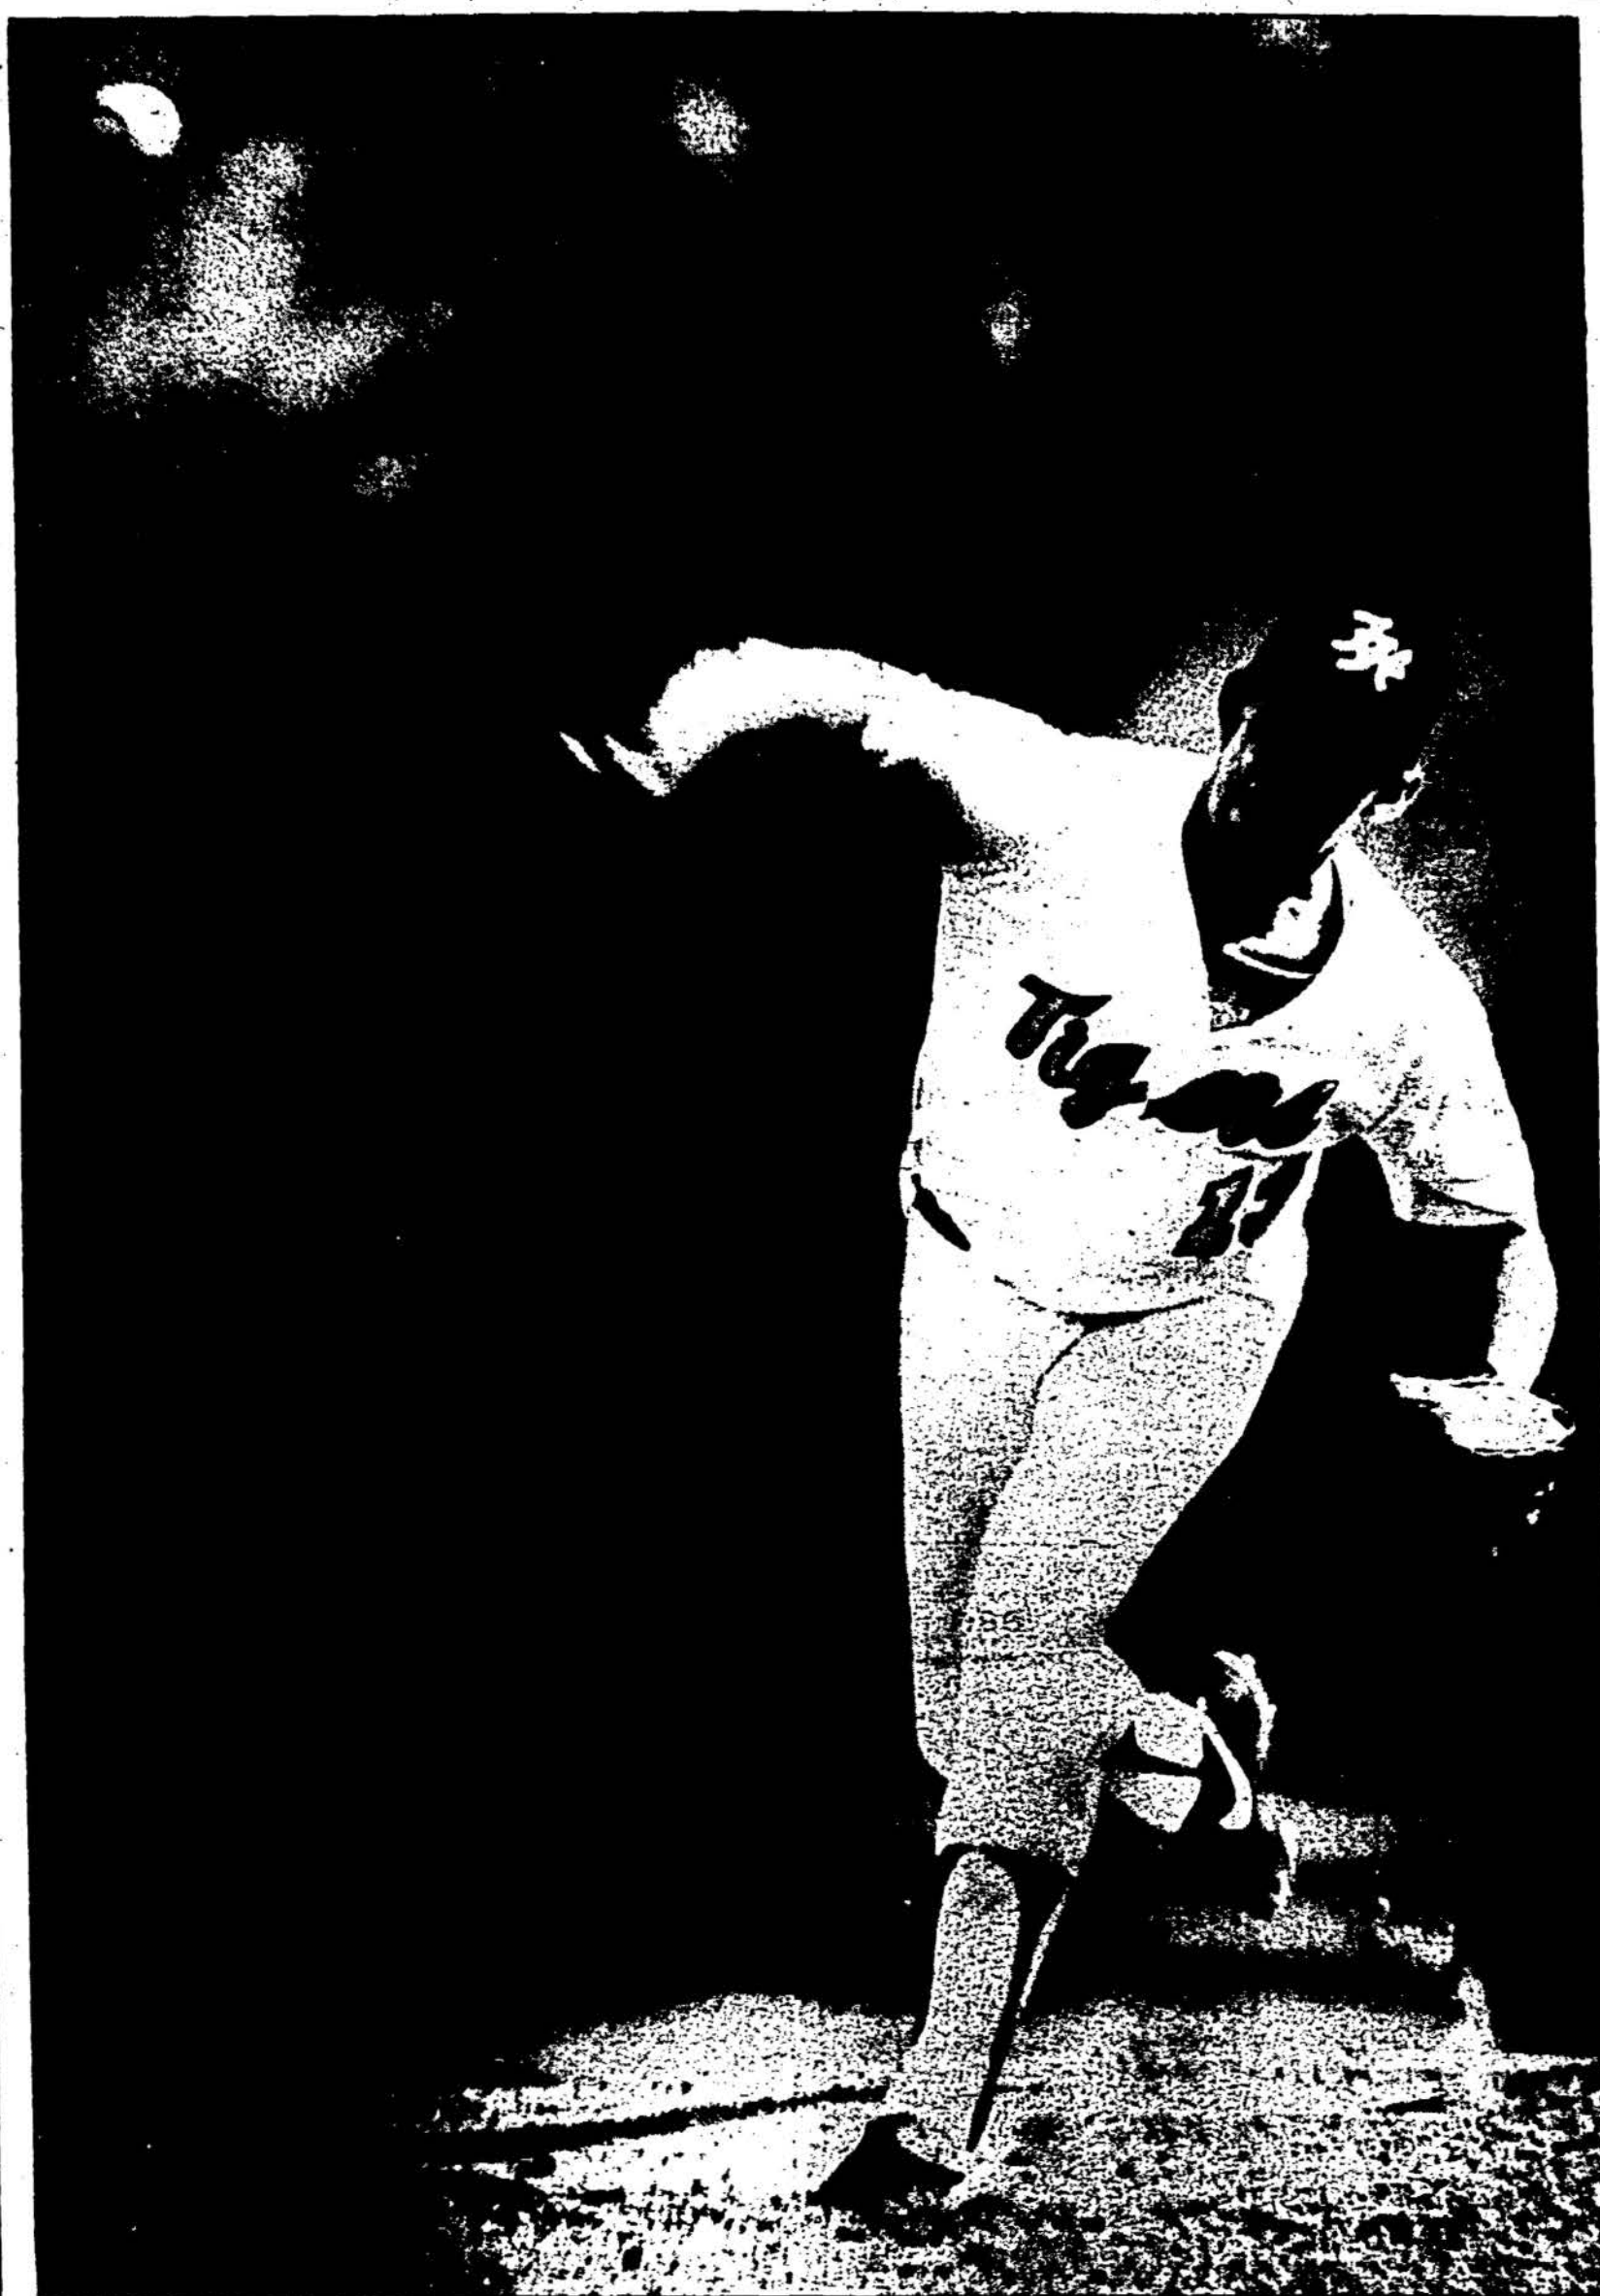

With all its girls, Bethany will look to be tougher competition for the Lady Tigers this time around.

"If Bethany has all their girls there, they could be tough," Fisher said.

"Southwestern has some good distance girls and a real good program down there," Fisher said of other strong competition.

"I think our girls have an opportunity to take and do good down there," Fisher said of his teams' chances. "We don't really know about the junior colleges."

Tigers taking advantage of homestand

By ERIC JONTRA
Sports Editor

Heading into Wednesday afternoon's double-header with Washburn University at Larks' Park, the Fort Hays State Tigers had played 10 of their 12 games in the month of April on the road.

And it showed in their record.

Before the twinbill with the Ichabods, FHSU had only managed to post an average 6-6 mark since April 1.

But the Tigers, behind several strong pitching performances and some timely hitting, managed a split with the Ichabods on Wednesday and then swept a double-header with the Kansas Wesleyan Coyotes yesterday at Larks' Park.

The three victories over the two-day period improved the Tigers' season record to 15-11-1, but more importantly, seemed to solidify the belief that few things can be more beneficial to a struggling team than a chance to play a few games at home.

"This homestand has been good so far," Vern Hendricks, head coach, said. "We're pleased that we could sweep these two games today (against Kansas Wesleyan), but we're still not playing as well as we early in the season."

"But, we are starting to come around. Scott Volz and Wes Holmes threw the ball really well for us today, and I think all of our pitchers are starting to get some confidence."

Against Washburn, the Tigers were drubbed in the opener 16-5, but returned to defeat the Ichabods 6-2 in the nightcap.

In the first game, Washburn led only 3-2 after three innings of play, but outscored FHSU 10-2 over the next three innings to cruise to the easy win. Terry Jones, a senior righthander, absorbed the loss for the Tigers, and saw his record dip to 1-1.

The Ichabods had 16 hits in the opener, but ran into a red-hot FHSU pitcher in the second game. Ron Wilson, a junior left-hander, See "Homestand," page 6

Point guard leaves team unexpectedly

By MIKE MARZOLF
Asst. Sports Editor

The Fort Hays State basketball team has suffered the likely loss of yet another player.

Anthony Williams, a 6-2, 180-pound point guard, has apparently ended his career—as an FHSU basketball player.

Williams has left school and returned to Kansas City, Mo., where head coach Bill Morse has not been able to contact him.

"We haven't gotten a hold of Anthony himself," coach Morse said. "We have talked to his mother, and we also have been in contact with either his sister or girlfriend."

"We obviously would like to talk to him," Morse added. "We will try to contact him again. He is very difficult to reach at his home."

Williams' mother said that she was very disappointed that he was not in school.

The chances of the Highland Community College transfer coming back and playing don't look good at this time.

"I don't think he can come back and salvage his grades this year," the FHSU mentor said. "I am not really optimistic about him playing basketball for us at this point."

Williams has had a much traveled collegiate basketball career. He began play at Highland, then, after his first year there, he transferred to Oklahoma City Junior College.

He didn't stay long in Oklahoma City, however, and decided to transfer back to Highland and play his sophomore year there.

Williams then signed to play basketball at FHSU. But, he didn't come in the fall. It was after Morse contacted him that he decided to come and play the second semester for the Tigers.

Williams does, however, still have a chance to play for the Tigers next season, or possibly the following season.

"I would like to see him graduate from college, because he is the kind of person that could do something with his degree."

--Bill Morse

"When you think about the rules and academics and everything, technically he could get himself eligible by going to summer school," Morse said. "But it would be foolish for him to come ineligible in the fall, sit out a semester and play the second semester."

"The other possibility for Anthony would be to come back in the fall, lay out a year and play the following year. Frankly, he is such a good kid that I would take him either way. I just like the kid."

As to the reason Williams left school, Morse is uncertain.

"We don't know of any extenuating circumstances," Morse said. "I don't know of any reason why he would do that other than the obvious. That he didn't have that strong of commitment to go to school."

"I would like to see him graduate from college, because he is the kind of person that could do something with his degree."

While at FHSU, Williams played 21 games for the Tigers and started 17 of those contests.

He averaged 6.7 points and 2.4 assists per game while in the FHSU uniform. His best scoring performance came in the second contest against Kearney State when he scored 22 points in the Tigers' 115-106 victory.

The chances of Williams possibly going to another school, maybe a school in the Kansas City area, and playing ball or just finishing his degree doesn't seem likely to Morse.

"That's the problem," Morse said. "I'm guessing from what I know of Anthony, that his problem is not that he didn't want Fort Hays or that he didn't want basketball. His problem is does he want to go to school."

was as perfect as can be for the first four innings of the second game.

Heading into the top of the fifth inning, Wilson had kept the Washburn squad hitless, striking out six batters in the process. However, the FHSU offense was having almost as much trouble as the Ichabods were, and led only 2-0 after four innings.

In the top of the fifth, Wilson lost the bid for a no-hitter when Washburn catcher Sean Jackson drove in teammate Chris Zych for the Ichabods' first run of the game. Zych had reached on an error.

Before the inning was over, Washburn had managed to knot the score at 2-2 as Wilson walked two consecutive batters to force another run in.

The score stayed deadlocked at 2-2 until the bottom of the seventh when FHSU loaded the bases. Henricks then gambled and let junior center fielder Stan Sweeney swing away in what seemed to be a sure-fire squeeze play situation.

Instead, Sweeney went after the first pitch from losing pitcher Scott Cook and lined a pitch over the left field fence for the game winning hit.

The grand slam was the first home run of the season for Sweeney, who bats in the No. 9 spot in the Tigers' lineup.

According to Henricks, FHSU could have just as easily walked away from the double-header with the Ichabods with a sweep had it not been for one inning where the Tigers let down defensively.

"Really, against Washburn, we only had one bad inning," Henricks said. "But that one bad inning got things going the bad way for us, and we couldn't come back."

"We know that we have to start playing better defensively right now if we want to have a chance at winning the rest of our games this week."

The Tigers will have four more games at Larks' Park in the next two days, and according to Henricks, all four are very important for his team.

FHSU will play host to Kearney State College, Neb., in a 2:30 p.m. double-header today. The squad will then square off with Emporia State University, one of the nation's top-ranked teams, in a 1:30 p.m. double-header tomorrow.

Although Henricks would like to see the Tigers win all four games, he is especially interested in the Emporia State double-header.

The Tigers split a double-header with the Hornets in Emporia earlier this season, and according to Henricks, a sweep by FHSU tomorrow will be needed if the Tigers hope to be the host team in the upcoming District 10 playoffs.

"I don't think there's any question at all that we have to play very, very well in the next two days," Henricks said. "We need to sweep Emporia in order to qualify for the tournament and be the host team."

"It definitely is nice to be playing these big games at home. If we can put some good games together in front of our home crowd, it would definitely be a plus."

Rob Busby, a junior right-hander, is expected to start the first game today against Kearney State, but Henricks is currently undecided as to who will start the second game of the twinbill for FHSU.

Henricks also said that he is currently unsure as to what pitchers he would use for the Emporia State twinbill.

Barton County, I'm sure, has a good team."

With the good weather the track squad has finally experienced the last two weeks, Fisher looks for improvement this weekend.

"We have had a good week of work this week, a lot of good workouts," Fisher said. "The kids will show a lot of improvement, I think."

"We had an opportunity to work on conditioning and technique most of the week. The weather hasn't affected us that much this week."

With the bad weather, many of the Tigers could have given up. But, Fisher said he is happy with the effort his squad has put forth.

"The majority of kids have had some real fine workouts," Fisher said. "There are a few who are not putting in much effort, and that will show. But, most kids have made their minds up and know that they can't wait until the end of the season to get in shape."

FHSU will leave for the noon meet at 8:45 a.m. Saturday.

The running preliminaries start at 1 p.m., and the finals will get underway at 3 p.m.

There is no idea more wantonly erroneous than that which requires a liberal expenditure of money to have a comfortable and artistic home. The very essence of elegance lies in simplicity.
Katharine, a young wife furnishing her first home, must liberate herself from the idea that her home should be like that of Mrs. Ashmore. But can she?
