Two royalty will be crowned this weekend. The Miss Fort Hays pageant will return after a 10-year absence tomorrow night, and the Fort Hays State Rodeo Queen will be crowned at this weekend's rodeo.

Viewpoint

Tuesday's United States Supreme Court decision said that the death penalty may be used against "non-triggerman" criminals. Opponents say it is unfair to the murderers of white people.

Sports

Fifteen to 20 rodeo teams are coming to Hays this weekend for the 22nd annual Fort Hays State Rodeo. Although the rodeo is the biggest event of the year, it is not necessarily a money-maker.

Educators search for new blood

By RANDY MATHEWS
Staff Writer

Overhead projectors are becoming a prized commodity on the Fort Hays State campus, according to one FHSU professor.

Jack Logan, associate professor of business administration, recently submitted a proposal to the academic affairs committee of the Faculty Senate that requests overhead projectors be provided for every campus classroom.

Logan said the existing overhead projectors at FHSU are distributed unevenly among campus buildings.

"In McCartney Hall, we have an overhead projector in every classroom. But in the last few years, we've had to start teaching some of our classes in Rarick Hall and other buildings that don't have as many projectors available," Logan said.

Logan said the shortage of projectors causes professors to keep close tabs on them.

"Everyone seems to guard them, and think they're going to run away. I've been in this building (McCartney Hall) for 14 years, and we've never had one run away," Logan said.

Logan said some professors rely on the projectors as instructional aids in their classes.

"People in the music building may say, 'We don't have a need for them here.' But if we have to go over there and teach, we have a need for them," he said.

Logan said professors who need projectors for classes in buildings other than McCartney Hall often must transport them from Forsyth Library.

"I checked with the audio-visual center in Forsyth, and they've only got about four or five projectors available campus-wide to be checked out.

"But you can't check them out on a semester basis, because they're worried about them being left in a classroom or moved somewhere else. If you have one in every classroom, you wouldn't have to worry about them disappearing," he said.

Logan's proposal is being referred to James Murphy, vice president for academic affairs, for consideration.

Murphy said the proposal is not new to FHSU. "It's something we've been working toward for a long time," he said.

He said limited funds make the proposal harder to implement. "Reductions in the current budget picture makes it difficult to respond quickly," he said.

Murphy said although he has not yet seen the written proposal, he attended the Faculty Senate meeting at which it was submitted.

"I believe the phrasing was something like, 'We should strive toward having a projector and screen in every classroom.' The intent of the Faculty Senate was such that, by using the terminology, strive toward, it was apparent that they (the Faculty Senate) understood the difficulty. It was an understanding way of making the proposal," Murphy said.

He said some steps have already been taken to make projectors more available to professors.

"The audio-visual department has recently established an annex in Rarick Hall, where most of our faculty are located, so they won't have to go to Forsyth to get them," he said.

Barefoot, bubblegum and baseball ... almost

Julie Douglas, Kismet sophomore, blows a bubble while playing softball in front of the Delta Zeta house in approximately 80 degree temperatures yesterday. This weekend, if the weatherman proves correct, is expected to be another great one for outdoor enthusiasts. A warm, sunshine-filled three days lies ahead as temperatures are expected to range from the mid 70s Friday and Saturday to the lower 80s on Sunday. Lows will be in the upper 40s Friday and Saturday to the lower 50s Sunday night. The extended 30-day forecast is above average temperatures with below average precipitation.

The 11th annual Teacher Career Fair will be held on Monday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Gross Memorial Coliseum, Dan Rice, acting director of career development and placement, said.

The Teacher Career Fair is coordinated by the Career Development and Placement Office.

"We're looking at 180 to 200 school districts attending," Rice said.

Administrators from Kansas and across the nation come to Fort Hays State for the teachers' fair. The fair is set up on the arena floor at Gross Memorial Coliseum, and each district is assigned a table on the floor, Millie Schuster, administrative assistant, said.

As teacher candidates enter the door on Monday morning, they will be handed a vacancy booklet which is broken down into each field of teaching.

The student can then go and look for that particular district that may interest him and go talk to that administrator. Students are also handed a flow chart that tells where the districts are located on the arena floor, Schuster said.

"Students may interview with as many districts as they want to with. There is no limit," Schuster said.

A poster is located in the lobby of the coliseum which lists other vacancies that may not have been entered in the vacancy booklet. Students are encouraged to check this poster, Schuster said.

Teacher vacancies are posted in three areas, according to Schuster. Locations are on individual tables, on the wall in the lobby and in the

SGA hears measures for first time

Two senate measures were read for the first time and moved to emergency business at last night's Student Government Association meeting.

The first measure was a bill appropriating $35 to Delta Tau Alpha, an agriculture honorary, to provide refreshments for a speaker. The bill was defeated.

The second measure was a resolution designating April 27 through May 1 as Disabled Students Awareness Week.

Activities the Disabled Students Organization is sponsoring throughout the week will be used to promote awareness of the problems that disabled students face.

Chris Powers, Associated Students of Kansas chairman, originated the action.

"We just want people to see that the disabled do have special problems, and this way we can recognize that we know they are there," he said.

Also at the meeting was a report by Dorothy Knoll on the National and International Student Exchanges.

Knoll said that seven FHSU students will be attending other schools in the United States during part or all of next year through the exchange.

Four compete for queen

By MARY WEBER
Staff Writer

The 1987-88 Fort Hays State Rodeo Queen will be announced this evening at the rodeo arena.

Four girls are competing for this year's title of rodeo queen, Garry Brower, associate professor of agriculture, said.

Tuesday evening contestants completed the interview and scoring part of the contest.

The four contestants are judged in the three areas of horsemanship, appearance and personal interviews.

Although appearance and interviews are important, horsemanship is the most important area, Brower said.

"You can have a nice looking queen, but if she can't ride, she is in trouble," Brower said.

"The interviews take in a broad area of topics. The questions are pretty generalized such as what-would-you-do-if-type questions," Brower said.

This year's contest is judged by a panel of four judges, all of whom have rodeo background, Lisa Arnoldy, Tipton senior and current rodeo queen, said.

"The girls were excellent. The judges had a hard time choosing," Arnoldy said.

"I think the biggest problem I faced this year was trying to get people to realize that being a rodeo queen is more than just prancing around and sitting on a horse," Arnoldy said.

She said the rodeo queen has to have a lot of knowledge about rodeos and current affairs.

Marcy Andrews, Cheney sophomore; and Tammy Black, Cheney junior.

Arnoldy said that the four girls worked really hard. She said that it is hard to get girls to enter because they have to practice quite a bit with horses and some public speaking.

"Horsemanship is something that is really important," Arnoldy said.

The Rodeo Queen can expect a variety of duties, Arnoldy said.

"My job was to promote rodeo primarily," Arnoldy said. Publicity and helping with the rodeo club are among Arnoldy's other duties.

Arnoldy is now preparing for the national rodeo finals to take place in June at Boemont, Mont.

Brower said that Arnoldy will be going up against at least 50 other university rodeo queens in June.

"The year went pretty good. I would like to just say good luck to the new queen," Arnoldy said.

Pageant restored to Fort Hays

Atlantic City, N.J., is a long way from Hays.

However, one young woman will be one step closer to the home of the Miss America contest after tomorrow, when the Miss Fort Hays pageant is revived.

Jan Jordan, pageant coordinator, said the pageant was restored by the Hays Jaycees after a 10-year absence.

"The Jaycees in town said they were going to revive it for this year."

"Hays is about the only town of its size that doesn't have a pageant," Jordan said. The only pageants west of Hays are in Colby and Norton, she said.

The pageant, at 8 p.m. tomorrow night at the Old Hays High Auditorium, will feature 12 contestants in competition for the crown.

Of the 12 contestants, seven are Fort Hays State students.

The other contestants are Lynnette Biel and Amy Boland, Colby Community College students; Shawn Fellhoelter, Plainville High School student; Roxanne Hartwick, Lindsborg High School student; and Patricia Muesburger, Kansas State University student.

"It's what is called an open pageant," Jordan said. "We didn't just want to have girls who are from Ellis County."

Jordan said she was pleased with the number of contestants and had to turn away five others who wanted to compete, as a limit had been set at 12.

"We would have been happy if we would have had six," Jordan said.

Jordan said Saturday's schedule for the contestants is going to be full.

Interviews with judges will take place all morning, followed by a luncheon at the Bijou. All the contestants will participate in the Hays Days parade at 2 p.m., followed by the rehearsal for the pageant that night.

At the pageant, the highest possible point total is 100 points, Jordan said.

Fifty points will be awarded for talent, 30 for personal interview, 10 for evening gown and 10 for swimsuit.

There will be five judges for the pageant, Jordan said. They include the producer and director of the Miss Colorado pageant, the chairman of the Miss Kansas pageant and a former Miss Kansas.

The winner of the Miss Fort Hays pageant will go on to the Miss Kansas pageant in July in Pratt.

Holocaust topic of symposium talk

A traveling symposium discussing the psychological, historical and philosophical consequences of the holocaust will make its way to Hays this Sunday.

The Holocaust: Facing Our Past, Forging Our Future, has been at eight different college and university campuses around the state, Paul Faber, associate professor of philosophy, said.

"The holocaust was an event of which the magnitude of evil perpetrated by it is beyond our imagination," Faber said.

Faber will be part of the symposium for the FHSU presentation, as well as a Saturday night presentation at St. Mary of the Plains College in Dodge City. He said he has not participated in the previous symposia.

"I will be talking a little bit about the intellectual currents that produced the holocaust," Faber said. "Surprisingly, the philosophers and religious people didn't object to the rising Nazi tide. Why the intellectuals were willing to go along with it is unknown."

Also discussing the holocaust will be Kansas State University faculty members Leon Rappaport, professor of psychology, and George Kren, professor of history.

The three will discuss the consequences of prejudice, discrimination and persecution, as related to the holocaust.

"Because of a historicism, a belief that a historical revelation in each era has its own standards of right and wrong in the age," Faber said.

"The age was pushing the German nation toward superiority and domination," Faber said.

The history and implications of the holocaust will be discussed by Faber, Rappaport and Kren.

"We don't know exactly in general terms why people allowed the holocaust to happen, and why the victims didn't fight against what was happening to them," Faber said.

"It was an evil event," he said. "Debatable the most advanced nation in the world, Germany was the instigator in this genocidal evil.

"To me, it is a warning for us that the advancement we explain doesn't guarantee a reason for moral goodness," Faber said. "You have to be on guard for little bits of that that leads to the bigger ones."

The symposium will be presented from 3 to 5 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m. Sunday in the Sunflower Theatre of the Memorial Union.

It is sponsored by the Kansas Committee for the Humanities and the Kansas Region and Kansas City Region of the National Conference for Christians and Jews.

"Students are interviewed right on the spot. They are encouraged to bring their resumes," Schuster said. "I am anticipating 900 or more students to attend."

"We feel this is one of the largest Teacher Career Fairs in the nation," Rice said.

"This is a chance for students to make some good contacts," Schuster said.

She added that if students are interested in a particular school district, and there is not a current vacancy in that district, students are encouraged to still talk to that district's administrator.

"Contracts don't have to be in until May 10. A lot can happen after that," Schuster said.

Schuster said the Teacher Career Fair is open to the public, and the fair is beneficial especially to the students since they don't have to travel to get interviews.

"It is cost effective for both the school districts and students by having that great of a number on one day at one place," Schuster said.

Death penalty popular

Once again, the death penalty is coming into vogue. Tuesday, the United States Supreme Court ruled in a 5-4 decision that the death penalty may be used against "non-triggerman" criminals.

Wednesday, the high court ruled in another death penalty case. This time in a 5-4 decision the court upheld Georgia's death penalty system.

The opponents of that system say it is a discriminatory to minorities. Under the Georgia penalty someone who murders a white person is more likely to go to death row than for the murder of a minority.

In this week's first decision, people who play a major role in a crime in which a murder occurs can be sentenced to death. But the person has to have displayed "reckless indifference" for human life.

According to the World Almanac 1987, 37 states have a death penalty. Fourteen do not. The death penalty was reinstated by the Supreme Court in 1976.

The District of Columbia had the most exections, with eight, in 1985.

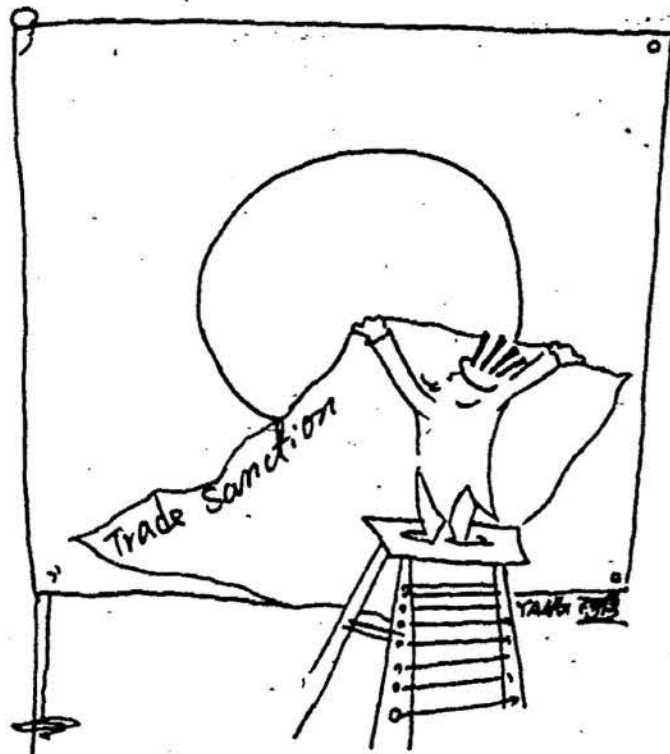

Kansas is one of the 14 states that does not have the death penalty. The Senate killed the death penalty bill the first of April. But was this a wise decision?

A death penalty is needed for this state and others. Florida has 215 inmates on death row. Texas has 250. There are 1,405 inmates who are sitting on death row, according to January 1985 figures.

The death penalty would only be fair to those who purposely take another life.

Should these people be allowed to take a life and not be punished in any way besides being sent to prison, which they will probably be released from in five years?

But one parting thought. What about those inmates who may be wrongly accused of crimes they did not commit?

Fire alarms could be damaging to health

It happened again.

There was another late-night false fire alarm at McMinder Hall.

So far this school year, there have been five alarms in the hall. Only one of them was legitimate.

I was home for the weekend the first time there was a fire alarm.

The second time there was an alarm, I had just gotten home and was still in the lobby talking to the night watchman when all the residents came downstairs. We all just stood around in the lobby and waited to go up to our rooms.

But the third time will go down in history.

You see, things like prank fire alarms don't happen at 2 in the afternoon. They take place at inopportune times like 2 a.m. when I, and the rest of the residents, are trying to get some sleep. And we are sick of it.

Here's how the first alarm I experienced went. It was earlier this semester, when it was cold and miserable outside. I had come home early for the first night in about two weeks, because I had been working late on the yearbook.

I was all prepared to go to bed and sleep a good eight hours, and had just laid down when -- you guessed it -- the alarm started to ring.

I cannot remember the last time I was that mad. And when I'm mad, I'm rude. No, make that obnoxious. And everyone in McMinder Hall knew about it.

The first thing that upset me was that like most of the residents, I was 99 percent sure that it was a prank. Actually, someone had called in a bomb threat, and the night watchman had pulled the alarm to evacuate the building.

I was upset because I was tired, it was the middle of the night, and my sleep was being interrupted.

This time, there was no such thing as waiting it out in the lobby. All residents had to be completely out of the building. So while we stood outside in freezing temperatures, blatantly tempting pneumonia and other illnesses, the resident assistants waited inside for the hall search to be completed.

I know that it is part of their job to help out in these emergencies, but I think I'm speaking on behalf of most of the residents locked out that night when I say that it was unfair and downright stupid for us to stand in the cold while they did nothing inside.

Because of the nature of the emergency, the police were in charge of the search. Therefore, the wait was about twice as long as usual.

Which means we were twice as irritated as usual.

The situation was similar on Tuesday. Once again, I was just lying down to sleep when the alarm went off. I was thankful that the weather was a little warmer, but I still would have liked the extra sleep.

Even though I was upset, I managed to behave a little better than I did last time. As a matter of fact, most of the residents were less verbal about their complaints.

But now I'm expressing my views. Whoever keeps pulling these alarm pranks is inconsiderate and foolish. Whatever cheap thrill they get from it, I do not understand.

This person who enjoys waking up 300 women, looking like death warmed over, is obviously very sick and demented.

And it's down right idiotic to risk having that many girls mad at you.

Someone said that anyone who gets caught with a prank like that should be forced to stand against the wall and let every resident who they awakened give him her best shot.

I'm all for it.

More to indecency issue in FCC decision

Last week, the Federal Communications Commission decided that what used to be "decent" has now become "indecent."

Three stations in California and Philadelphia were involved in last week's cases. Pacifica Foundation's KPFF-FM, Los Angeles, was hit the hardest as it was referred to the Justice Department for possible criminal prosecution on "obscenity" grounds.

Airing of "indecent" programming is subject to time of day restrictions, but broadcast of "obscene" material is never permitted.

According to the Today newsletter of the National Association of Broadcasters, in the past the FCC has limited its definition of "indecent" to repetitious broadcast of one or more of "seven dirty words" from the recorded George Carlin monologue.

The monologue, broadcast at a time when kids are likely to be listening, was found to be "indecent" programming in Supreme Court's 1978 Pacifica decision.

Last week, though, the FCC decided to further crack down and restrict its interpretation of "indecent" to "seven dirty words" and instead apply the generic definition of "indecent" approved by the Court.

Generic "indecent" then is "language or material that depicts or describes, in terms patently offensive as measured by contemporary community standards for the broadcast medium, sexual or excretory activities or organs."

Well, if that doesn't really simplify the matter. To me, the former "indecent" definition seemed a lot more useful as one of the few simple legal definitions in mass media regulations.

Also, the FCC no longer regards time after 10 p.m. as "safe" for indecent programming. Now licensees must determine for themselves whether kids are reasonably likely to be in the audience.

Ted Snider, NAB joint board chairman, said in Today, "We are concerned as an industry about indecency on our airwaves. We recognize our responsibility to our listeners and viewers, but we also have First Amendment concerns."

Jack Heather, radio-television department director, said he agreed with the regulations.

"All freedoms carry a certain responsibility. But that freedom doesn't in any situation give people the freedom to express themselves in an unacceptable manner," Heather said.

Heather said it makes a difference that the airways are considered public property and said, "I don't think you need that kind of influence in society. We have enough to put up with."

As much as I value the broadcasting industry's voluntary effort to live up to its responsibility, I really don't think this is the time to do it.

Let's face it, one can observe a certain newborn puritanism in the States. That shows not only in broadcasting or the press. The fact that the rest of the world is rather "indecent" compared to American standards doesn't seem to raise the question if that puritanism is really that desirable.

After all, "indecent" is a part of everyday life. We are not perfect, and society is not perfect. Well, let's just go ahead and ban all nudity, "obscenity," "indecent" and maybe rock 'n' roll and alcohol on top, and, abracadabra, here we have it -- the brave new society.

A look under the cover though might lead to the conclusion that not everything is as shiny and white. Do decisions like the ones the FCC made last week truly lead to a better society, or do they create a deceptive and hypocritical image of the world we live in?

It's a toughie. Moderation seems appropriate -- on both sides. As long as voluntary industry regulations are concerned, harm might not be in sight. But these days, one has to be protective of potential harm to the First Amendment.

For now, I hope all of us can still enjoy a decent dose of "indecent" from time to time.

Spam as No. 1 makes up trivia for index

Quick, is "of the people, by the people, for the people," part of the Constitution or not?

Don't feel bad. If you answered yes, you are part of 82 percent of Americans who also think it is part of our great Constitution.

Actually it is part of President Lincoln's Gettysburg Address.

This little interesting tidbit of information comes from Harper's Index in Harper's magazine. The information compiled in the index is the latest figures available as of March 1987. So we're talking pretty recent stuff here.

Journalists are always interested in truth, and one little statistic that caught my eye concerned truth.

When asked if Americans think their car repairman tells the truth, 17 percent said they think they do.

What does this say about our president? Only 8 percent think he tells the truth.

Oh well, who wants truth when we can talk money.

Did you know that in Britain, the Labour Party pays, I repeat, pays, students 16 and older to stay in school. They get an approximate weekly salary of $44.69.

I could handle going to school and getting paid to stay there.

Not even good ole American kids get that much money for working at Wendy's. A Wendy's worker, who stays on the job for 90 days, earns a $50 bonus.

Actually though, I'd rather live in Washington, D.C., and ride the subway. Seventy-three percent of the subway riders there earn $25,000 or more annually.

Did you know people in the United States are starting to get poorer again?

In 1929, 36 percent of the wealth in the United States was held by 1 percent of the population. By 1972 this had dropped to 28 percent, but by 1983 it had risen to 34 percent.

Remember hearing about all the money countries like Mexico owe other countries they borrowed from. Mexico and Brazil owe foreign creditors just more than $204 billion.

But that is nothing. The United States owes countries they have borrowed from more than $209 billion.

Here is a scary fact. You know how teen-age pregnancy is a hot topic. Well, 17 percent of teen-age moms have a second child within one year of the first child.

But I guess this statistic isn't surprising when you look at how many single father families there are out there. One percent of American daddies raise their children nowadays.

Hospital care is a concern to most everyone since most of us will probably be flat on our backs in a hospital one day.

If you have AIDS, you receive fairly regular hospital care. Nurses will spend nine hours per day caring for an AIDS patient.

If you are just a regular patient, watch out. You will receive only four and one-half hours of care each day.

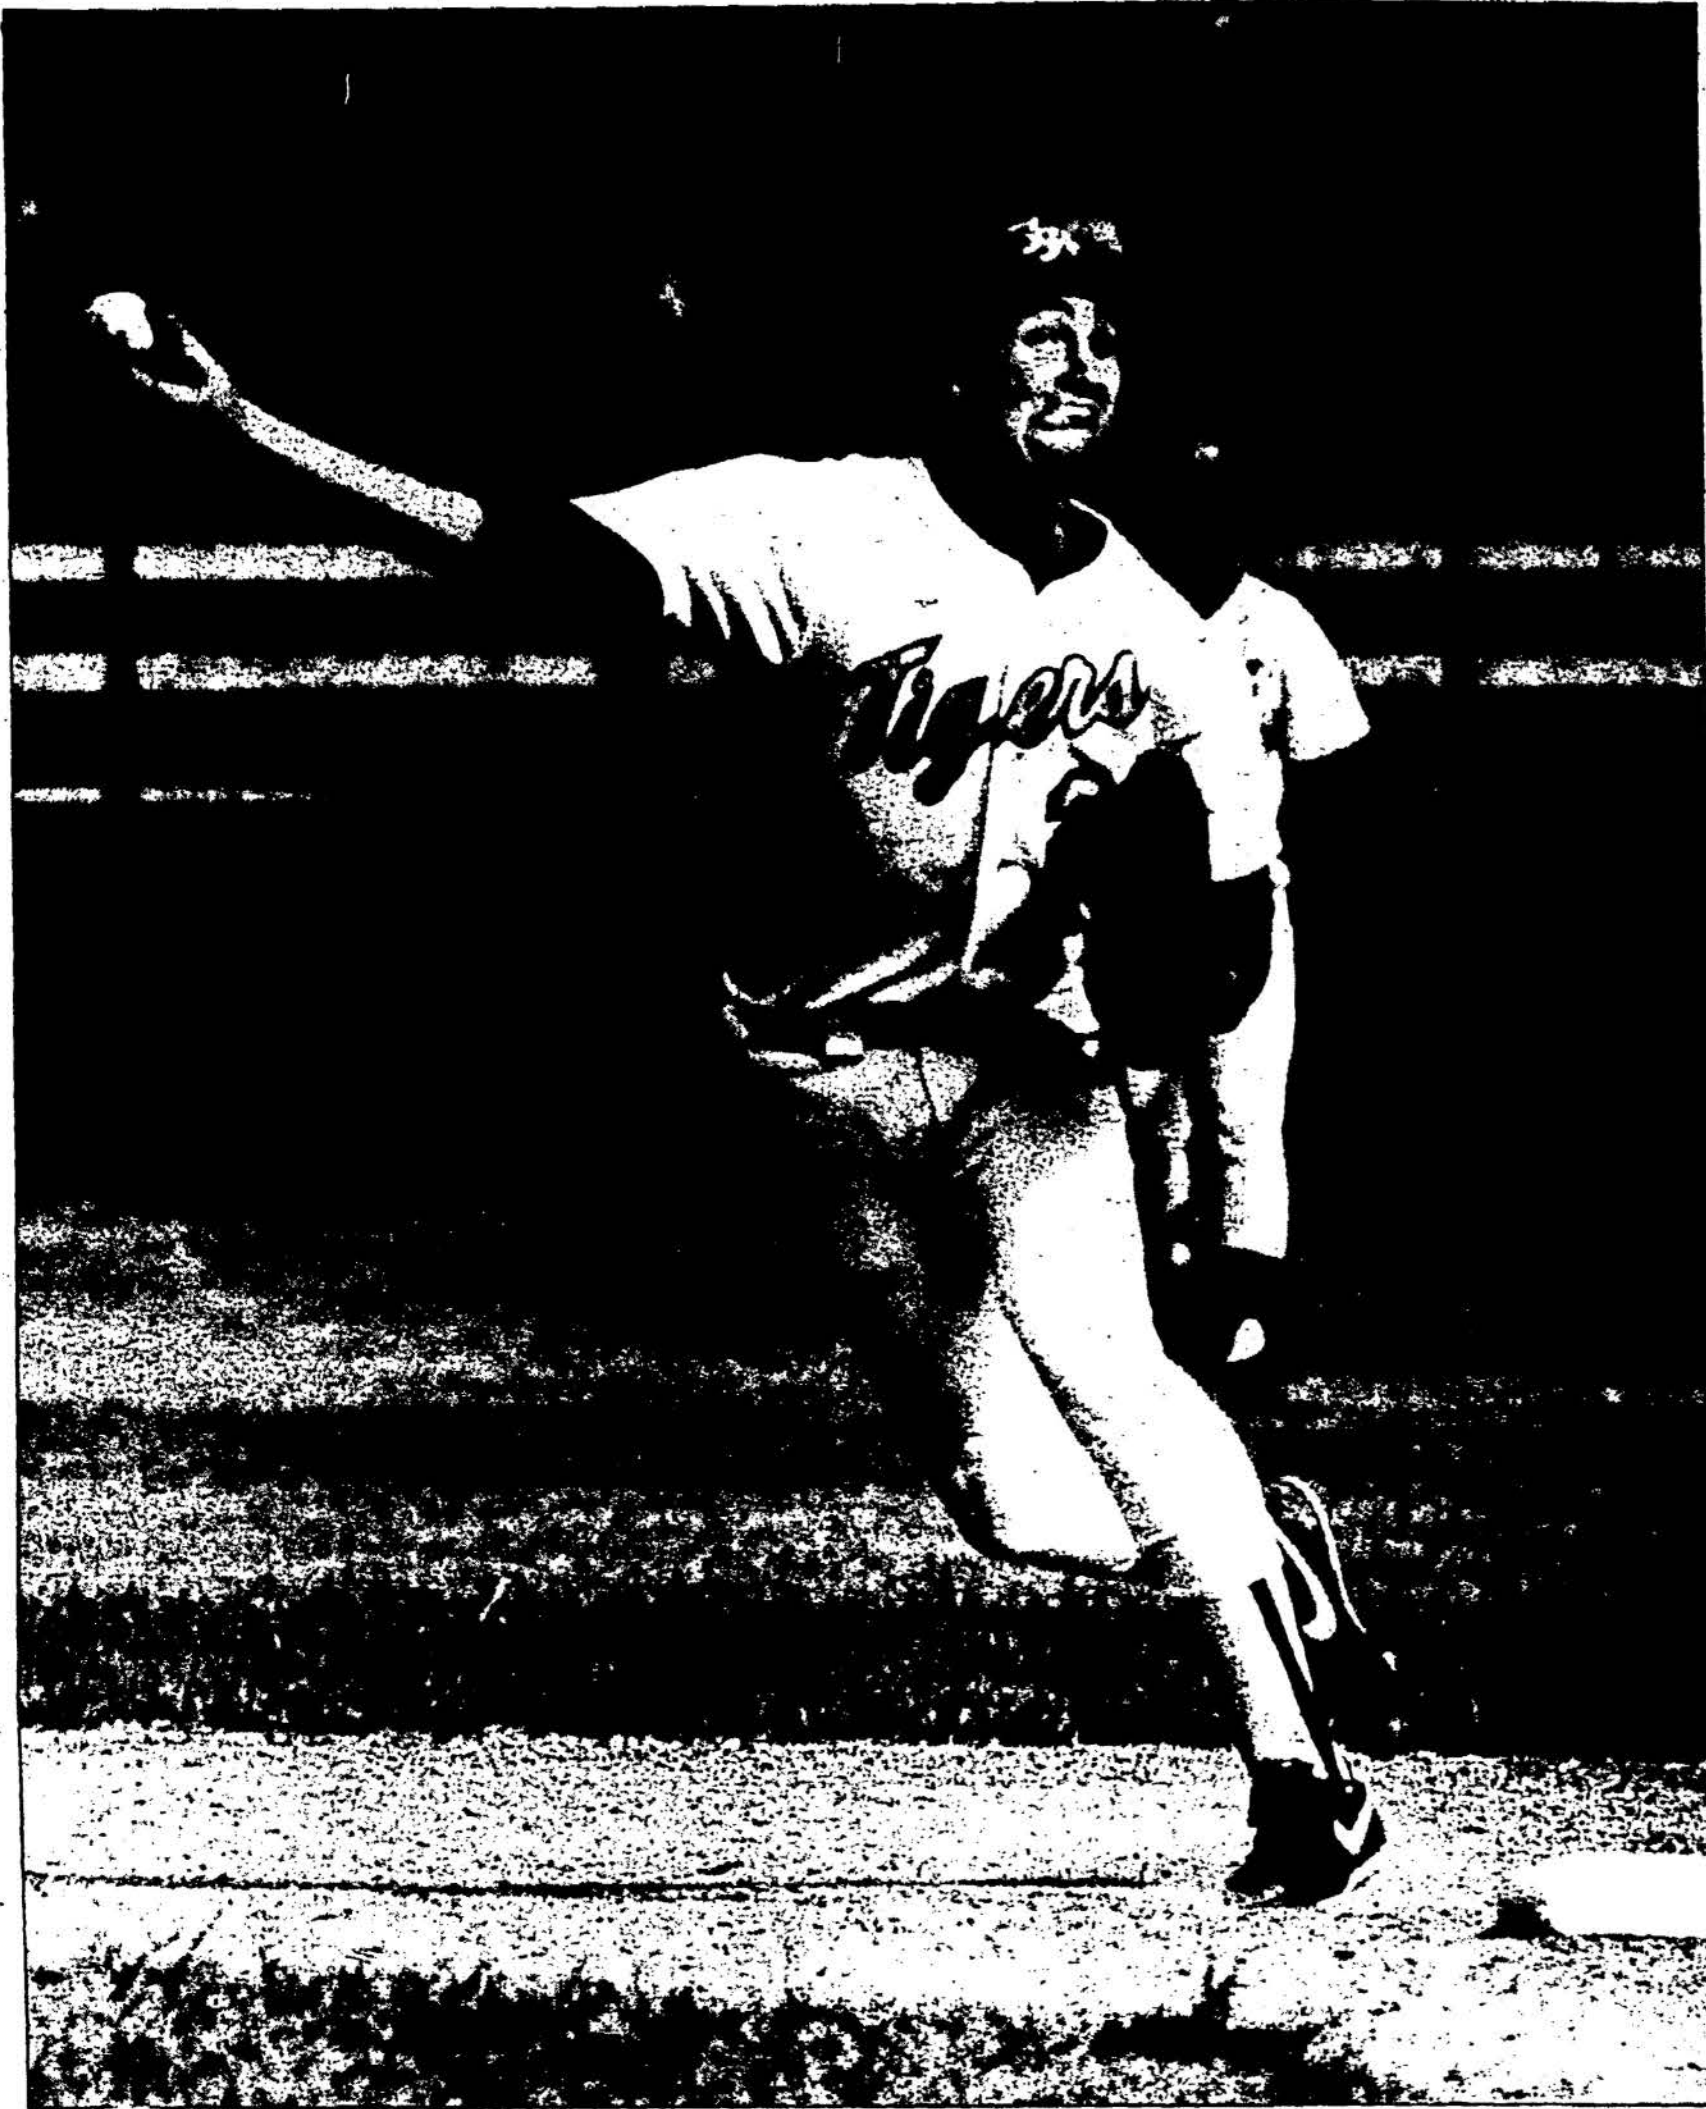

Most college students I know have at least a passing interest in alcohol. If you have your own still set up in your apartment, you'd better watch out. The federal government put eight moonshiners out of business last year.

But one of my favorite stats reminds me of a *M*A*S*H* show. Remember how Hawkeye and Trapper fixed a Spam lamb for an Easter dinner?

Spam, that luncheon meat giant, controls three-fourths of the luncheon meat market.

Since Easter is already past, is anyone interested in a Spam barbecue?

FHSU plays to second tie of year

Tigers' record stands at 19-14-2

By MIKE MARZOLF
Asst. Sports Editor

For three games and six and one-half innings the past two days, Fort Hays State baseball was playing in good form.

Then, something happened. All of the sudden the roof fell in on the Tigers.

After winning two games against Mid-America Nazarene in Hays on Tuesday, FHSU looked well on its way to a four games winning streak the following day.

On the road in Wichita, FHSU captured the first game and was cruising to a win in the second game, leading 11-2 with only three outs to go.

That is when the Kansas Newman Jets scored nine runs in the bottom of the seventh inning to tie the contest up and send it into extra innings.

Neither team was able to score for three extra innings, and the game was called due to darkness. Leaving the Tigers with a tie.

Ray Plantier and Larry Lang both hit their sixth home runs of the season.

In the first contest FHSU jumped out to a 9-0 lead after three innings and coasted to an easy 11-5 win over the Jets.

Lyle Befort gained the victory for the Tigers, raising his record to 3-4 on the season.

On Tuesday, FHSU woke up its bats, which had been silenced by Emporia State on Sunday.

In the first contest, the Tigers held a lead of 3-1 going into their half of the sixth inning. Then the offense opened up for four runs, sealing the victory for Scott Volz, now 4-2.

Volz threw a six hitter, making it the second good outing for Volz, who threw a two hitter against Kansas Wesleyan his previous outing.

Stan Miller hit his third home run as did Kelly Mulqueen.

In the nightcap the Tigers showed their hitting capability, scoring 12 runs in the bottom of the first inning. FHSU went on to score nine more times in the shortened five inning contest, giving it the 21-1 win.

Mark Holmes improved his record to 2-0 with three innings of work.

Rich Lenhart slammed his 13th home run of the season, a three-run shot. Tony Duca hit his fifth home run, and James Jermon belted his first home run of the year, a grand slam in the bottom of the fourth inning.

With their 3-0-1 record on the week, the Tigers now stand at 19-14-2.

Hawks team to watch as NBA playoffs begin

By MIKE MARZOLF
Asst. Sports Editor

The end of basketball season is now here. Again.

Commentary

First, basketball season ends for high schools, then small colleges, then major colleges, and finally, the big boys end their season.

It is the National Basketball Association playoffs.

The time of the year, and possibly only time, when the players go out and play 100 percent, every game.

This year the Boston Celtics will try to duplicate their feat of last year, when they became World Champions for the 17th time.

To repeat, however, Boston will face a formidable task.

No team has repeated since the Celtics did it in 1968 and then again in 1969.

To add to those odds, Boston has not had the season they have grown accustomed to in recent years. They finished the year with the best record in the Eastern Conference, but didn't clinch that spot until the final day of the year. Boston often gains that mark with about two weeks left in the season.

This year the odds-on-favorite are on the team out west. The Los Angeles Lakers have been running wild all season long, and don't intend to slow down in the playoffs.

This year's probable MVP, Earvin 'Magic' Johnson, leads the Laker attack. Magic, along with (just turned 40) Kareem Abdul-Jabbar will try to give the Lakers their fourth title in this decade.

To get to the finals, the Lakers must win the Western Conference playoffs.

To do that, they must first beat the Denver Nuggets. No task there. No other team should press the Lakers, who since the 16-team playoff format was installed have not lost a first round game.

The only team that poses a threat to the nearly unbeatable Lakers are the Dallas Mavericks. Not this year though. The Mavs are still one year away.

Pencil the Lakers in the finals, no contest.

How the East will be won is not as simple as the West.

While Boston has the home-court advantage for as long as they stay in the conference playoffs, they are not a sure pick.

The Celtics went 38-1 on the parquet floor in the Boston Garden, then went under .500 on the road.

Boston will face some of the best talent in basketball. In the first round they must face the Chicago Bulls. Or should I say, Michael Jordan and the Chicago Bulls.

Should they win that, next up could be Philadelphia. The Sixers will be playing in the playoffs for the last time with the Doc.

With Julius Erving playing in his last season, anything can happen. Look for Philadelphia to defeat Milwaukee in the first round and then upset the Celtics, ending their bid for a repeat title, in round two.

The opponent for Philadelphia in the Eastern Conference finals? How about the high flying Atlanta Hawks.

Dominique Wilkins and company. At the end of the season, Atlanta was riding a 12-game winning streak before losing in Boston on the final day of the season.

The Doctor in his last game. It has to happen eventually. How about his season ending in his home building, losing to the Hawks. Julius scores 25 points in his final game. Dominique has 30. The crowd gives Erving one last standing 'O' as the game winds to an end, but Atlanta takes the crown.

The Championship Series should be a great battle between the two best teams playing today.

NBA Championship Series. Atlanta 4, Los Angeles 3.

FHSU to play host to 22nd annual rodeo

By ERIC JONTRA
Sports Editor

It's not often when the thrills and spills of exciting rodeo action reach the city of Hays, so when a rodeo does make it to town, avid fans usually try to take full advantage of the opportunity.

And this weekend should be no exception as the Fort Hays State Rodeo Club and the FHSU Block and Bridle Club will play host to the 22nd annual FHSU Rodeo.

According to Lisa Arnoldy, treasurer of the FHSU Rodeo Club, the rodeo expects to draw somewhere in the neighborhood of 15-20 teams from universities and community colleges in the state of Kansas as well as Oklahoma.

"We'll have teams from all over Oklahoma and Kansas at this rodeo," Arnoldy said. "A lot of the teams in this rodeo have had rodeos of their own. We went to all of theirs, and now they'll be coming to this one."

The event, which is an official sanctioned rodeo of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association, will consist of 10 events.

There will be six events in the men's division: Team roping, calf roping, bull-dogging, saddle-bronc riding, bareback bronc-riding and bull-riding.

In the women's division, there will be four events: barrel racing, goat tying, break-away calf roping and team roping.

To compete in the rodeo, competitors must be full-time college students in addition to being card-holders of the NIRA.

The participants in the rodeo will compete in long a go-round on Friday at 7 p.m. and at the same time again on Saturday night, with the Top 10 competitors in each event advancing to the short go-round action on Sunday at 1 p.m.

There will be winners in both the long go-rounds and short go-round, with overall winners being figured by averaging the two scores together.

According to Arnoldy, teams competing in the rodeo will include Kansas State University, Northwest Oklahoma State University of Alva, Oklahoma State University of Stillwater, Panhandle State University of Goodwell, Colby Community College, Garden City Community College and Dodge City Community College.

Although the rodeo is the biggest event the rodeo organizations at FHSU take on each year, the three-day event rarely is a money-maker.

And Arnoldy said that this year's rodeo will certainly be no exception.

"Really, they never have been able to make much money on this rodeo," Arnoldy said. "The costs of putting something like this on are really high, and they usually just concentrate on breaking even."

"For the livestock alone it costs us over $4,500. Then, you add to that the cost of judges for the rodeo, the announcer, the organist, rodeo clown and other little expenses, and it ends up costing about $5,500. Usually they don't even come close to breaking even, but this year I think we'll make it."

One aspect that Arnoldy hopes will help is nice weather. A near-perfect weekend is forecast, which should help encourage rodeo-goers to attend the event.

But even high gate sales won't make that much money, so the major source of income at the rodeo comes from advertisements.

"The ads in the programs we sell at the rodeo are what make us the money," Arnoldy said. "Plus, we also sell ads for the chute gates. We also have the concession stand, but that hardly ever makes enough money to speak of."

In addition to the rodeo action, the FHSU rodeo queen will be crowned Saturday night. According to Arnoldy, who is the reigning queen, the candidates include: Marcy Andrews, Cheney sophomore; Tammy Black, Cheney junior; Sherri Brantley, Great Bend junior; and Tonya Coglazier, Burlington, Colo., freshman.

Advanced adult tickets for the event can be purchased for $2 at the Student Service Center in the Memorial Union, or at the gate for $3. For students, the advanced ticket price is $1, or at the gate for $2.

FHSU to play host to 22nd annual rodeo

By ERIC JONTRA
Sports Editor

It's not often when the thrills and spills of exciting rodeo action reach the city of Hays, so when a rodeo does make it to town, avid fans usually try to take full advantage of the opportunity.

And this weekend should be no exception as the Fort Hays State Rodeo Club and the FHSU Block and Bridle Club will play host to the 22nd annual FHSU Rodeo.

According to Lisa Arnoldy, treasurer of the FHSU Rodeo Club, the rodeo expects to draw somewhere in the neighborhood of 15-20 teams from universities and community colleges in the state of Kansas as well as Oklahoma.

"We'll have teams from all over Oklahoma and Kansas at this rodeo," Arnoldy said. "A lot of the teams in this rodeo have had rodeos of their own. We went to all of theirs, and now they'll be coming to this one."

The event, which is an official sanctioned rodeo of the National Intercollegiate Rodeo Association, will consist of 10 events.

There will be six events in the men's division: Team roping, calf roping, bull-dogging, saddle-bronc riding, bareback bronc-riding and bull-riding.

In the women's division, there will be four events: barrel racing, goat tying, break-away calf roping and team roping.

To compete in the rodeo,

competitors must be full-time college students in addition to being card-holders of the NIRA.

The participants in the rodeo will compete in long a go-round on Friday at 7 p.m. and at the same time again on Saturday night, with the Top 10 competitors in each event advancing to the short go-round action on Sunday at 1 p.m.

There will be winners in both the long go-rounds and short go-round, with overall winners being figured by averaging the two scores together.

According to Arnoldy, teams competing in the rodeo will include Kansas State University, Northwest Oklahoma State University of Alva, Oklahoma State University of Stillwater, Panhandle State University of Goodwell, Colby Community College, Garden City Community College and Dodge City Community College.

Although the rodeo is the biggest event the rodeo organizations at FHSU take on each year, the three-day event rarely is a money-maker.

And Arnoldy said that this year's rodeo will certainly be no exception.

"Really, they never have been able to make much money on this rodeo," Arnoldy said. "The costs of putting something like this on are really high, and they usually just concentrate on breaking even."

"For the livestock alone it costs us over $4,500. Then, you add to that the cost of judges for the rodeo, the announcer, the organist, rodeo clown and other little expenses, and it ends up costing about $5,500. Usually they don't even come close to breaking even, but this year I think we'll make it."

One aspect that Arnoldy hopes will help is nice weather. A near-perfect weekend is forecast, which should help encourage rodeo-goers to attend the event.

But even high gate sales won't make that much money, so the major source of income at the rodeo comes from advertisements.

"The ads in the programs we sell at the rodeo are what make us the money," Arnoldy said. "Plus, we also sell ads for the chute gates. We also have the concession stand, but that hardly ever makes enough money to speak of."

In addition to the rodeo action, the FHSU rodeo queen will be crowned Saturday night. According to Arnoldy, who is the reigning queen, the candidates include: Marcy Andrews, Cheney sophomore; Tammy Black, Cheney junior; Sherri Brantley, Great Bend junior; and Tonya Coglazier, Burlington, Colo., freshman.

Advanced adult tickets for the event can be purchased for $2 at the Student Service Center in the Memorial Union, or at the gate for $3. For students, the advanced ticket price is $1, or at the gate for $2.
