Instructors enjoy tele-conference show

By Karl Austin
Copy editor

A small group of Fort Hays State instructors watched television together yesterday afternoon -- but not exclusively for entertainment.

The group was participating in a tele-conference broadcast from Oklahoma State University to universities and colleges across the nation.

"The tele-conference was about a way to teach writing called the process approach," Richard Leeson, associate professor of English, said.

"This tele-conference is the result of a federal grant to OSU," Cliff Edwards, chairman of the department of English, said.

Edwards said that the office of continuing education had arranged for FHSU to participate in the tele-conference.

"As a pay-off for allowing it to be shown on this campus, we will have access to the video tapes made of the tele-conference for use in inservices," Edwards said.

Although the English department agreed to attend the tele-conference, it was not the only department that participated.

"We (the English department) sent out a memo to all faculty interested in helping students' writing," Edwards said.

The School of Education, the department of mathematics, and the department of communication also sent representatives to the tele-conference, viewed in Stroup 103.

Leeson said that the program featured both an explanation of the process approach to teaching writing and a time when viewers could call in questions a moderator would answer live.

Only one of the participants at FHSU posed a question to be answered by the moderator.

"I phoned in a question that was answered on the air," Leeson said.

Leeson said the process approach to teaching writing, which is implemented by several FHSU instructors, emphasizes pre-writing and re-writing and does not call for students to write effectively in

Although Leeson said he agreed with the explanation the tele-conference gave for the material, he said he was not completely pleased with the tele-conference as a whole.

"I was disappointed in that it didn't show many methods teachers could use. It focused more on explanation," Leeson said.

"I also thought the moderator was ineffective," he said.

Federal funds to Oklahoma State were tabbed for producing tele-conferences, but not English-oriented ones exclusively.

"A subsequent tele-conference in mathematics is scheduled for a later date," Edwards said.

"When I asked some of the people if they would like to continue this seminar every other year, the response was really positive. They asked me to please continue it every year," Tangeman said.

"We have really done well over the years," Tangeman said. "Plus, I think it's really good PR for the campus."

SGA approves senators, funds

By Carl Patz
Senior staff writer

Ratification of five new senators and approval of three appropriations funds were among the main business at last night's Student Government Association meeting.

The new senators, elected in the fall elections, are as follows: Sharon Roth, Hays senior, social and behavioral science; Duane Strine, Effingham freshman, natural science and math; and Lola Winder, Waldo senior, general studies.

In the business department, Mark Osborne, McDonald junior, was approved to the position.

Connie Werth, Ransom junior, was elected to the education seat.

The appropriation funds, which all passed unanimously, included monies being given to the National Student Speech-Language-Hearing Association, Mathematics Club and Epsilon Pi Tau.

The NSSLHA received $343.53 to attend the association's annual convention in New Orleans.

The bill said that the organization contributes to FHSU by providing speech, hearing and language service at no cost to students as well as providing hearing screenings at the Student Health Fair.

Ten members of the Math Club will be attending the Kansas Association of Teachers of Mathematics conference in Kansas City, and received $273.78 in appropriations.

By attending the conference, FHSU will gain national exposure in their area, the bill said.

Epsilon Pi Tau, who received two first place awards at last year's conferences, were provided with $288 to attend the International Technology Education Association and Rocky Mountain States Conference in Denver.

The organization will see and experience new advances in technology and will represent FHSU by participating in a manufacturing contest and attending mini-sessions on present and new technology, the bill said.

Also passed at last night's meeting were two senate resolutions.

In a unanimous vote, next week has been declared Higher Education Rescue Operation week.

HERO, a plan initiated by the Associated Students of Kansas is being conducted to promote excellence and access for university students in Kansas.

The HERO campaign is being conducted by the six Kansas Board of Regents institutions and will have students lobby for increased excellence and access in higher education in Kansas by contacting state legislators or the governor, the resolution said.

In order to increase public awareness, ASK has organized press conferences, media packages, campus forums, receptions for state legislators and letter writing drives, the resolution said.

ASK campus director Lance DeMond said that Mayor Dan Rupp was proclaiming HERO week in Hays last night and that 102 letters have been received

Black Student Union ideal goal for group

By Kristy Love
Copy editor

A unified atmosphere for blacks, minorities and whites at Fort Hays State is the ideal goal of a group of students working on redefining the Black Student Union.

Tyrone Jackson, East St. Louis, Ill., senior, is the spokesman for the group initiating the new BSU.

"Our major goal is to go the formal route and be as organized as possible. We mainly want to unify the black and minority students on campus, and open their eyes to the administrative and community services we have," he said.

Jackson and Jack Hamilton, Kansas City, Kan., senior, have been working to organize the group this semester.

"We were working on it all last year. We had a few functions but the only people who showed up were the ones really near the heart of the matter."

"Near the end of the year around 70 people were attending," Hamilton said.

He added that most of the minority members had heard about the BSU but didn't become involved because it was not well-known.

"They don't think it's a big deal because they don't really know about it. They want to get involved but don't want to do the ground work to get something going," Hamilton said.

Several faculty and administrative members encouraged the two to get the BSU functioning this year, Hamilton said.

Bill Jellison, vice president of student affairs, was one of those administrators.

"I have felt that the Black Student Union ought to be an organization if there were enough blacks who wanted it. I have helped them each time they have tried to set one up," Jellison said.

"Blacks have felt they need an organization where they can be with people like themselves. As with all organizations on campus, I think we ought to encourage that."

"It is necessary in order to keep a student here through graduation to provide that student with a place where he can be accepted socially," he said.

One of the first orders of business for the initiates was to revise the constitution.

"We could have continued with the previous constitution, but it needed a few changes since it was written three or four years ago," Jackson said.

"We changed it to include more people. Any student can get involved, with a special emphasis on blacks and minorities."

"We want to unify not only blacks, but blacks and minorities with the community and administrative body. In the long run we hope for better and higher enrollment of the black community at FHSU," he said.

Electing officers is something else the BSU will have to do in order to be approved as an organization, Jellison said.

Once the formalities are taken care of, the group will have regular meetings and begin the activities they are planning.

Jackson and Hamilton live in the same house with several other initiates.

"Our meetings are really casual. For now, it's mainly spread by word-of-mouth. If someone comes through our house, we tell them what's coming up."

"We also have a mailing list for the main ones who are involved," Hamilton said.

Jackson said that the group hopes to have the formal paperwork taken care of by next week so they can get on with planning activities for membership.

"We want to have everything finalized by the end of this week or early next week," he said.

"We've done everything we can in reference to the constitution and administration. Now our constitution is being typed by Jellison's secretary, and made ready for presentation."

"We plan on going to Student Government and presenting our constitution to them. We have to do this so we can get allocations for our activities," Hamilton said.

"This is what we have planned just for the next couple of weeks."

Fall enrollment down

The fall enrollment at Fort Hays State has dropped by 402 students. The headcount went down from 5,538 in 1986 to 5,136 this semester.

FHSU President Edward H. Hammond said university officials had projected a decrease in enrollment but had hoped for a much smaller figure.

"We have dropped a little each year -- around 100 students for the past two or three years. Last year was up a little," Bob Lowen, director of university relations, said.

There are 155 fewer on-campus students, and 247 fewer off-campus students.

The FHSU credit hour production, dropped by a count of 2,572.

"Part of the decrease in credit hours is because students are taking fewer hours. The average hour load has dropped from around 16 hours to 13 or 14 average hours," Lowen said.

The full-time equivalent is also down this fall, by 197. This figure can affect the university's funding.

"It is too early to tell if it is going to change the funding. The funding is based on what courses the drops are in," Walter Manteuffel, director of business affairs, said.

"We will have to review and find out which courses are lower. We won't find out if there will be a change in funding for a year or two."

Hammond said that he attributed the decrease to the significant drop in high school graduates in western Kansas.

Other factors are smaller enrollments in some of the western Kansas community colleges, a chief source of upper level transfer students, and the fact that other institutions have moved boldly into western Kansas with additional scholarship dollars.

Hammond's plan to stop or stabilize enrollment declines centers around computerizing the campus.

Hammond told university relations officials that he hopes to speed up his plan.

"We had hoped to have our plan operational by fall semester, 1988," Hammond said, "but this decline might prompt us to move ahead more quickly. We will at least rethink our timetable."

"As I've said previously, we plan to create a uniqueness at FHSU that no other school in Kansas has and one that will give potential students a clear choice of where they might wish to obtain their university education," he said.

Leader misses photo opportunity

Dear Editor,

I feel that someone on the Leader staff owes our department an apology. I was informed by a Leader staff member that a photographer would be sent Saturday morning, Sept. 19, to cover a function sponsored by the department of earth sciences. Specifically, students from Hays High and Thomas More Prep were attending a short course on seismic refraction involving a "hands-on" field exercise on the FHSU campus. The course was taught by Dr. Kenneth R. Neuhauser and was a voluntary endeavor by all involved. The Hays High Science Club had a photographer there -- where was the Leader?

Pope's message not threatening

Dear Editor,

As a sociologist, I fail to shudder at the dire consequences you foretell in your Sept. 22 editorial. You seem to be attempting to comment on the impact of the Pope's visit to the Hispanic community. In this area, your conclusions do not seem well-founded.

In the first place, to "defend life" by opposing abortion does not mean that the Pope was telling the Hispanic community to have as many children as they can. It is true that his support of immigrants may increase their numbers in this country. But what if it does? I do not "shudder" at the thought of more Hispanics. I enjoy their culture and peoples.

The Hispanic community certainly is not a setback to the accomplishments of the social workers. As a group they are underrepresented on welfare roles. Increasing their numbers will not destroy the welfare system.

In a multicultural society such as ours, there is no single set of values that all people must follow. It is fashionable to be intolerant of those with different values, but a single set of values is not "reality." Education should make us more aware and more understanding of other cultural groups. The Pope's blessing of the Hispanic community does not cause this sociologist to shudder.

Sincerely,

Gerry Cox
professor of sociology

Yearbook photography still problem

Dear Editor,

Ever since I was a freshman in high school, I have held the act of having pictures made and put into the school yearbook as another milestone. Maybe it isn't as special as graduation, but those pictures hold plenty of memories.

With this being my last semester, I especially looked forward to my picture being taken.

But I did not like what I found. Fort Hays State has changed from Sudlow Studios in Danville, Ill., to Yearbook Associates in Millers Falls, Mass. The sitting fee was $2 to receive the proofs. That sounded reasonable.

Then I got the proofs back with "Return within 15 days" printed across each.

Why? Sudlow let us keep ours. So I called Yearbook Associates.

"They are property of Yearbook Associates. But we will gladly let you keep them for $10 a proof."

What? $10 a proof? I wouldn't raise too much of a fuss if it was $2 or $3. But I had nine pictures taken; $90 seems a little steep for nine little pictures.

What if I decided later to have additional pictures made? How can I tell which one I want if I don't have the proofs?

"Oh, we'll gladly send them to you for $2." But then I would have to return them again, right?

There was also a little piece of white paper with a cellophane pocket that said, "A great majority of students order personal portraits. However, if you are among the few that do not and wish the pose of your choice to appear in the yearbook, place an 'x' on the back of your choice. Place your choice and $2 in the plastic pocket..."

I think I'd rather have paid $5 at the sitting like I did last year to cover all this that dish out $2, $10 or who knows how much every time I turn around.

I understand the company may have some rights they want to protect, and with university cutbacks as they have been, maybe a cheaper photographer for the school was needed.

But couldn't they have looked a little wider for a company that would suit financial needs for the school and the students? We're the ones paying for all this. Why are we getting shot at twice?

I may not have all the facts, but what I am seeing isn't very nice. Anyone want to fill me in and explain this?

DATE LINE - SEPTEMBER 23, 1987:

SENATOR JOSEPH BIDEN HAS JUST ANNOUNCED HIS WITHDRAWAL FROM CANDIDACY IN THE 1988 PRESIDENTIAL RACE VIA TELEVISED NEWS CONFERENCE.

DIRECTLY FOLLOWING THE SPEECH THE FLOOR IS OPENED FOR QUESTIONS.

UM... JUST ONE QUESTION. WHO IN BLUE BLAZES IS JOSEPH BIDEN?

Tables turned during confirmation hearings

Have you noticed the water sprinklers? Don't they just make you want to go and get a WE INTERRUPT THIS COLUMN FOR THIS SPECIAL REPORT. WE TAKE YOU TO WASHINGTON, D.C., FOR THE FIRST ROUND OF THE BURKE CONFIRMATION HEARINGS.

Mr. Burke, are you ready to begin this first round of the confirmation hearings?

Uh, yeah, Sen. Biden. But, I thought I was already confirmed in eighth grade after catechism class. Just kidding. Aren't there supposed to be some other people on this little committee?

Well, yes, Sen. Kennedy was supposed to be here today, but he was detained...

Remedial driver's ed?

Not exactly. Also, Paul Simon was to be here today, but was also unavailable.

A follow-up to the "Graceland" album?

No, he's...

Getting back with Art Garfunkel?

No, No. No. It's NOT the same Paul Simon.

This is the one with the glasses, bow tie...

The duweb?

Yes, I'm afraid so.

Well, you're a little busier than they are, aren't you. I mean, all these problems with plagiarism, cheating? And didn't you resign the day before yesterday?

A day that will live in infamy.

Hmm. Sounds familiar.

But that's not the point here. Why do you want to be a Supreme Court Justice?

I never said that I did.

What? Then why do you want this job?

Comedic value.

I beg your pardon?

Burke, Bork. Get it? Play on words.

But why do you really want this job?

Oh, I don't know. The thought of a steady government paycheck for only working three weeks a year sounds intriguing to me.

Ask not what your country can do for you; ask what you can do for your country.

Right. But, can you give me any justification for that statement?

Four score and seven years ago, our founding fathers brought forth on this land a new nation...

No, wait. Nearly everything you've said so far has been taken from what other people say. Do you have an explanation for that?

I am not a crook. I don't know any crooks. I wouldn't even know what a crook looks like.

But that's not even the point. You've stolen material from anyone that even resembled presidential timber. Right?

I resigned my candidacy not because of my affair with Donna Rice, but because I was tired of the rat race of campaigning.

I didn't even know you knew Donna Rice.

Yes, I do admit that I have had lust in my heart.

Oh, in a Jimmy Carter mood now?

I will make no apologies for my brother Billy.

Wait a minute. Why are we turning the tables here? Aren't you supposed to be questioning me?

Oh. A wise guy, huh? Well, take this. Woo-woo-woo. Nyhh. Nyhh. Nyhh.

Curly from the Three Stooges?

Sol-ten-ly. Nyhh. Nyhh. Nyhh.

Have you ever thought of psychiatric help?

Now that's the most ridiculous thing I've ever heard of. Say the secret word and win $500. It's a common word, something you find around the house.

Groucho Marx?

Well, I tell ya, pilgrim? If you say that, you'd better have a smile on your face.

Have you ever thought of doing Vegas? Maybe with Rich Little or something? Pack 'em in at Caesar's Palace. Two shows a night, two drink minimum. Shall I go on?

Go on, play it. You played it for her, you can play it for me. Play it for him, play it for her, play it for everyone. Play it, Sam...

Enough already. I'm beginning to wonder who needs the questioning around here.

What do you have to say to that?

Frankly, my dear, I don't give a damn.

Vacations result in endless photo shows

Summer has officially ended, and with it we can put another vacation season in the memory books. I'm glad it's over. I'm tired of my friends and family telling me about their spectacular vacations.

Jeff went to Alaska, America's last frontier. He told me how thrilling it was to see abundant wildlife when he hiked. Breathtaking scenery surrounded him as he fished and relaxed. According to Jeff, fresh salmon is excellent.

Of course, he took pictures to share this wonderful summer experience -- 612 of them.

I saw some interesting wildlife this summer. I was here for the great toad invasion.

Kim came back from a Caribbean cruise with a terrific tan and stories to tell. She talked for hours about the beautiful islands, the delicious food and the gorgeous guys, and the rack of new clothes she bought.

And she has slides -- 288 of them -- to show just how much fun she had.

I went boating at Webster and caught a teenage walleye. I also got a rash from my sunscreen.

My brother, Dan, and his family traveled through the South checking out the points of interest and visiting friends and relatives along the way. On their way back from Albuquerque, N.M., they came home to Kansas for a visit.

They wanted to share their vacation pictures with me so they stayed long enough to develop some of their film -- only 132 pictures.

I decided I needed to get out of town one evening. With a full tank of gas ($22.68) and all the money I had left ($31.43), I headed west. I got all the way to Yocemento before Califish (my faithful green 1975 Ford) sputtered a protest to the strenuous workout. I didn't see anyone I knew.

Even my husband had a short vacation. His parents are building a cabin in Idaho. Somehow he forced himself to go out there and lend a hand. I guess they found time to do some work while he was there.

He brought back photos of the scenic trails they found to hike, the trout fishing at the nearby lake, and the moose that comes to feed by the stream each morning. Out of 72 pictures, he did get a few to prove there is some construction going on up there.

It might sound like I'm jealous. Untrue. Because, you see, I had a vacation, too. Yesiree, I went to SUMMER SCHOOL!

And I have 8 X 10 inch glossies -- lots of them -- to show how exceptional my vacation was.

I have great shots, like the self-portrait outside Picken Hall the first day of classes. "Hi Mom. Hi Dad. Wish you were here!"

And the incredible wildlife photos, like the one of the squirrel. I swear he looks vicious and he waited for me outside Rarick Hall every morning. Look at the picture of the toads on Highway 40 after a hard rain and you're ready for Anatomy and Physiology I.

Whew, I better have another cream soda on the rocks before I go on.

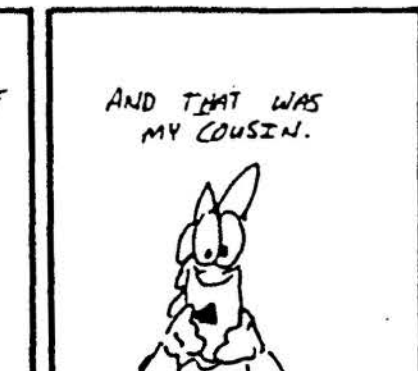

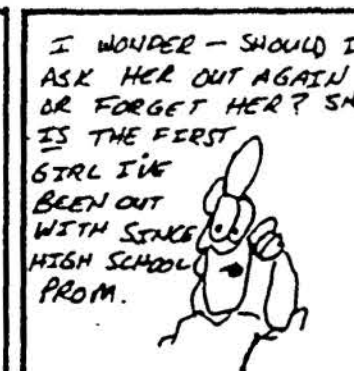

Now, let's see. Here's a terrific shot of the library, and...

"We're also going to go to MUAB to see if we can get help with our talent show. We are in the process of setting up that for late December, and Mark Meckel of Sunset Studios is helping us," he said.

"We've tried to get a lot of other things together. I.B. Dent suggested to us that we have a homecoming queen candidate.

"I think he was only half serious, but we took him up on it, and we have entered Yvonne Hinojosa (San Antonio, Texas, junior) in the contest," Hamilton said.

This Saturday the BSU will be sponsoring a mixer at 9 p.m. in the Memorial Union Black and Gold Room.

"The purpose of it is to see the new people on campus," Hamilton said.

"The black population has gone up from 68 last year to 89 this year. We want these new people to see our fliers and come to our functions," he said.

"And the mixer is not just for minorities. Anyone who wants to have fun and meet some nice people is invited to come to it," he said.

Hamilton defined minority in a sense that includes people other than blacks or international students.

"A minority really consists of anyone who feels they can't join a certain group, for whatever reason," he said.

"We're hoping that we don't get negative influences from other organizations or whatever, because we want to work with the other groups so everyone can profit," Hamilton said.

"When we walk up to someone and ask them to come to one of our functions, we want them to take us at face value and come see for themselves what it's like," he said.

Jackson said that although they would like to have a large turnout at the mixer, the number of people involved is not top priority.

"Attendance at our functions is not the main purpose. The main thing we are stressing is our unification purpose," Jackson said.

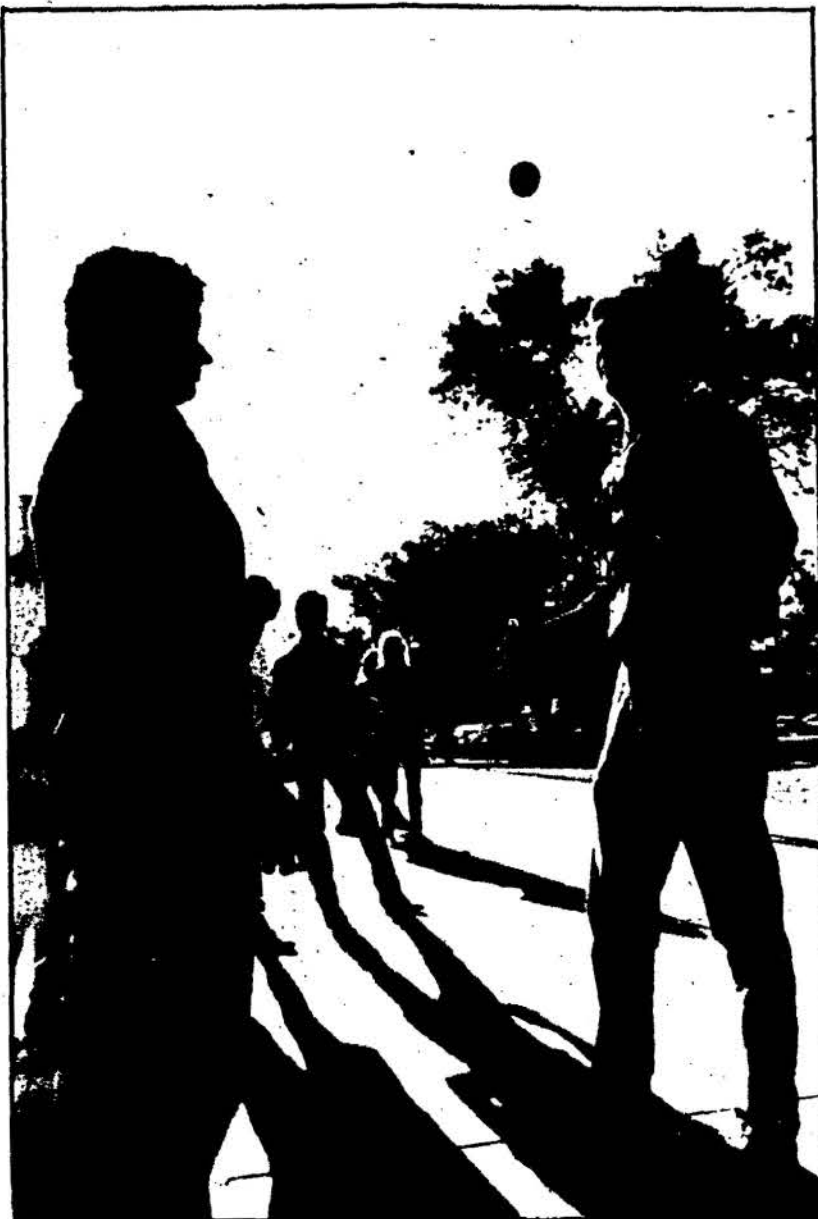

"The issues that need to be dealt with will allow blacks and minorities and whites all to exist at FHSU in a unified atmosphere, just an overall acceptance with the community."

"The reason we have to talk about doing things to profit is because as we go through formal processes we have expenses and things to pay for, and that's where the profit comes in," he said.

"But I can't stress enough what the purpose is. That's really what we hope to reach."

Drs. Kendall L. Krug and Dan F. Schmidt are pleased to announce that they have been selected as two of 250 clinical investigators nation wide to evaluate the new HYDROCURVE ELITE soft contact lens. Previous wearers and non wearers of soft contact lens are invited to take part in this study. Participants in this program will receive a reduced fee for fitting and follow up.

Art majors learn to juggle as part of Jilg's curriculum

Learning to juggle might be the last thing an incoming Fort Hays State art major would expect, but not in Michael Jilg's classes. Juggling is actually part of his curriculum.

Jilg, professor of art, teaches drawing, advanced painting and is advisor to all freshman art majors.

He received his bachelor of arts and master's degree in art from FHSU, specializing in painting and print making. He came to FHSU in 1980 after painting independently.

Jilg studies in Europe during the summers, doing many etchings. He is currently working on a collection of works entitled "Still Falling," about Adam and Eve and the fall of man.

Two phases of Jilg's curriculum are intellectual and physical aspects of art.

The intellectual part includes lectures and tests, while the physical part is made up of class exercises and juggling.

He teaches students to juggle because juggling "helps the students' eye-hand coordination," Jilg said. "They observe things more and become more creative."

Jilg first lets the students use two balls to get them used to the ball toss and the arc it makes. After they have mastered this, another ball is added.

There are two types of juggling: the circle juggle and the cross-over juggle. Both are taught.

Jilg's students practice every class period.

"Art classes are two hours long, so when we take a break, we juggle," Jilg said. "All students should be able to juggle by Thanksgiving."

"It's all part of their attitude and they enjoy getting involved and meeting the people they'll be spending the next four years with."

DeMond also announced the appointment of James Hopkins, Utica senior, as ASK board member.

Hopkins will serve as an assistant to DeMond and attend various ASK meetings. DeMond said.

The other resolution passed last night was originated by the LPAC committee on the open admissions policy.

The resolution said, "the students of FHSU support the open admissions policy for all Kansas state higher education institutions and firmly oppose any pending selective admissions policy."

First readings of committee appointments and a resolution were also discussed at the meeting.

Nominations for Allocations Committee members were taken and will be approved next week.

SGA president Kevin Amack said this is probably the biggest thing of the year and is the "most important committee."

Amack said that the committee will deal with the allocation of almost $400,000 to various campus organizations.

Members of the Senate nominated were Brian Hammeke, Rozel senior; Lawrence Baxa, Cuba senior; Mark Hammeke, Ellinwood senior; Eric Krug, Great Bend senior; and Eric Anderson, Abilene junior.

Also nominated were Tammy Black, Cheney senior; Jeff Schulz, Hill City junior; J.D. Befort, Hays senior; and Jack Schmitt, Scott City senior.

Seven of the members will be selected to the committee next week.

A resolution called for Senate confirmation of Robert Bork to the Supreme Court. It passed by a majority vote.

These, as well as Student Faculty Committee appointments, will be approved at next week's SGA meeting.

BACCHUS plans activities

The National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week has been designated as Oct. 19-25.

On the Fort Hays State campus, the Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students will be carrying out organized activities.

BACCHUS will also be working with the Smoky Hill Foundation for Chemical Dependency Inc. on the events for NCAAW.

"It is still in the 'planning stage,'" Steve Hall, BACCHUS chapter president, said.

The week is designed to "raise the conscience of students of the problems of dealing with the consumption of alcohol." Jim Nugent, BACCHUS adviser, said.

The week is sponsored by the Inter-Association Task Force on Alcohol and Other Substance Abuse Issues.

Universities participating in NCAAW will be eligible to win awards sponsored by the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators at the NASPA conference in St. Louis.

"We want to make people aware there are choices, and to be aware that you don't have to drink," Hall said.

Third annual frontier days at Bethesda Place

Bethesda more than home for disabled

By Tonia Richardson

Staff writer

More than 100 parents, teachers and handicapped individuals square danced, threw pennies into glass vases and on pop-can tops, played tug-of-war and did the chicken dance.

These activities were part of the third annual Frontier Days at Bethesda Place.

In cooperation with Bethesda Place, The Association of Retarded Citizens, The Early Childhood Developmental Center and students from Fort Hays State helped sponsor the events.

Later on that day, roast hog, stuffing, beans and soda were served.

"Still feels like summer," Randy Edwards, one of the Frontier Days participants and resident at Bethesda Place, said.

According to co-director of Bethesda Place, Shelley Stafford, the reason behind Frontier Days is simple.

"It's just a good time for everyone to get together for fun, fellowship and follies," Stafford said.

Besides providing a base for the Frontier Days, Bethesda Place is the home of Tom and Shelley Stafford, their 4-year old daughter Amanda, and six mentally disabled individuals.

It is also a 15-acre tree farm with an underground home, vegetable garden, wood workshop and playground.

Bethesda Place is home to six mentally handicapped men, aged 16-50.

Nine years ago, Edwards was to be sent from the Hays organization where he was living to Larned State Hospital. However, Randy's teachers, the Staffords, thought he had much potential and that sending him to the hospital could be a mistake.

"When we took Randy in to live with us, he had been on medication and behavior modification," Stafford said.

The Staffords soon concentrated their efforts on helping Randy adjust to the new life they had born together for him. With time and patience, the Staffords' recovery method for Edwards was a long road.

"Randy says a prayer now when he gets upset instead of listening to some tape," Stafford said.

Besides helping the Staffords with the Frontier Days activities, the tree nursery, garden and wood workshop, Edwards also maintains his custodial job at the Highway Patrol Office.

"I'm getting ready for the crafts fair in November in Kansas City," Edwards said.

"It's going to be at the Metcalf South Mall three to four days,"

According to Stafford, everyone works together at Bethesda Place.

The farm and every idea involved with the place is a source of income. The vegetables and fruits are sold to neighbors and wood fixtures are sold as Christmas ornaments and knick-knack shelf figures. Evergreens are sold at Christmas time, and other odd jobs help provide the steady income.

The Staffords both have received college degrees. Tom has a bachelor's degree in vocational education for the handicapped and Shelley has a master's degree in special education.

Together, they are managing Bethesda Place and providing for everyone who lives there without any aid from the government.

According to Tom, when most community centers are providing care at $20,000 to $25,000 per person, Bethesda Place is managing on $12,000 per person.

"Our funding comes from parents, private donations, foundations, churches, and organizations," Stafford said.

The saying "Look to the Lord for answers" is the foundation on which Bethesda stands. And it's through this Christian belief that the Staffords have been able to spend the past nine years devoted to Bethesda Place.

According to the Staffords, they have developed a solid foundation, based on encouragement and Christian faith, communication and constant love.

They have proven that these handicapped people don't have to be restricted to medication, one-room living and programmed environment.

According to the Staffords, the name Bethesda Place has come to the household through faith.

"The name Bethesda refers to the healing pool taken from the Bible," Stafford said.

Record Turnout

EC/EC best registration in 13 years

By Tonia Richardson

Staff writer

Area teachers and childhood professionals spent a full day on the Fort Hays State campus attending the Early Childhood/Elementary Conference last Saturday.

The EC/EC was a success according to Eleanor Tangeman, chairman of the conference committee.

She said this year's registration was the best it had been in the past 13 years.

"This year there were approximately 400 people registered for the conference," Tangeman said.

"Each year it seems we get a few more people from farther areas away."

During the conference, teachers, experts and preschool and daycare officials spent the day attending lectures, studying various displays and demonstrations and getting together with colleagues and friends.

Some of the topics featured were music, art, reading, literature, story-telling, listening skills and communication with children.

The lectures were presented by 20 different professionals; some were teachers and some were experts in their fields," Tangeman said.

In addition to attending the several different lecture periods, professionals inspected the displays on teacher-ready learning materials.

School Specialty Supply from Salina, Rainbow of Skills from Great Bend and Learning Factory from Clearwater, were three businesses out of the eight or nine demonstrating their teaching products.

Along with these demonstrations and displays, teachers and daycare professionals were able to attend the conference and receive college credit or in-service hours for certification.

"When I asked some of the people if they would like to continue this seminar every other year, the response was really positive. They asked me to please continue it every year."

—Eleanor Tangeman

"It's been really great that the state has approved us to use this conference as an in-service," Tangeman said.

Later in the morning, children from Roosevelt School and those at the conference were treated to a 45-minute puppet show.

Nationally known puppeteer Paul Mesner performed the "Dinosaur Show," combining educational lessons and entertainment into one skit. After the show, he demonstrated how to make puppets in the classroom.

"He's really popular with the kids," Tangeman said. "We are definitely going to have him back next year if it's possible."

Thanks to the Mid America Arts Alliance, the conference committee received a grant that allowed them to ask Mesner to attend.

"There are a lot of people involved in this conference who are responsible for its success," Tangeman said.

The department of continuing education is responsible for making the conference known statewide.

According to Tangeman, it is through this department that the conference had gained approval to use the six-hour conference for college credit and in-service hours.

So far, FHSU is the only university in Kansas that sponsors this type of program.

"When I asked some of the people if they would like to continue this seminar every other year, the response was really positive. They asked me to please continue it every year," Tangeman said.

"We have really done well over the years," Tangeman said. "Plus, I think it's really good PR for the campus."

Rush back with new album, tour

One of rock's best trios has released another landmark album. Rush is back.

Slowly but surely, critics are giving these Canadians some due respect. Magazines such as Metal and Circus have been recognizing these guys as the best at their instruments for years.

Neil Peart has been known as the world's greatest drummer for the last eight years and Geddy Lee's bass playing and keyboards have also been critically acclaimed.

The release of their 12th studio album and 14th overall, "Hold Your Fire," is hot.

I've listened to these guys since I was in my single digits and they keep getting better. I've always had a fear that one day they would just split up, but Lee, Peart and Alex Lifeson (all electric guitars) keep rocking the world.

Preparing to embark on their 10th world tour, numerous radio stations nationwide are giving several tracks ample airplay.

"Force Ten" is the opening track and is bound for a spot in the Rush hall of fame. Its lyrics, rhythm and tempo changes are an ingenious blend and makes this a classic.

Almee Mann, lead singer for T1 Tuesday, is featured on "Time Stand Still." This is a rather new brand of tune for Rush. It ranks a 10, though, along with every other tune.

Rush has always been known for their theme albums such as "Hemispheres," "Farewell To Kings," "Caress of Steel" and, of course, "2112." Lately they have gone to five-minute ballads that are both album excusers and concert smashes.

Rush is known for putting on some of the better concerts ever, and according to Peart, this year will be no different.

This tour will have added special effects and a lengthier show including some more of the newer tracks like "Lock and Key," "Mission," "Turn the Page," "Prime Mover" and "Open Secrets," as well as old classics.

If you've never listened to a Rush album, you've been in the dark way too long. Give "Hold Your Fire" a listen, and you'll be glad you did.

Kozol named as new FHSU assistant basketball coach

By Mike Marzoli

Sports editor

It is now officially time to introduce the newest member of the Fort Hays State Tiger basketball program.

Ed Kozol came to FHSU as the new assistant basketball coach under Head Coach Bill Morse.

"We are really glad to have him with us," Morse said. "While he will be involved in all aspects of the coaching department, his primary job will be recruiting."

He will replace Brad Soderberg, who resigned Aug. 28 to accept a similar position with Loras College of Dubuque, Iowa.

Kozol has a long line of basketball credentials, the latest being an evaluator for a magazine.

"Ed comes to us after working for a recruiting service, so we feel he will have an awful lot of contacts for us," Morse said.

"We feel he will do a good job of recruiting at the NCAA Division II and NAIA level."

He was director of the Deep South for Juco Hoop Scoop, a basketball publication.

Kozol, a native of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., has seen the Tigers play before, many times while assistant coach at Marymount College.

He served as assistant for Dan Pratt from 1981-1985. Kozol was the chairman of the health, physical education, recreation and intramural department.

He graduated in 1972 from Springfield College in Massachusetts.

There, Kozol played football, baseball, basketball and rugby. Other coaching stints for Kozol include positions at Northern Montana College and Eastern Kentucky University.

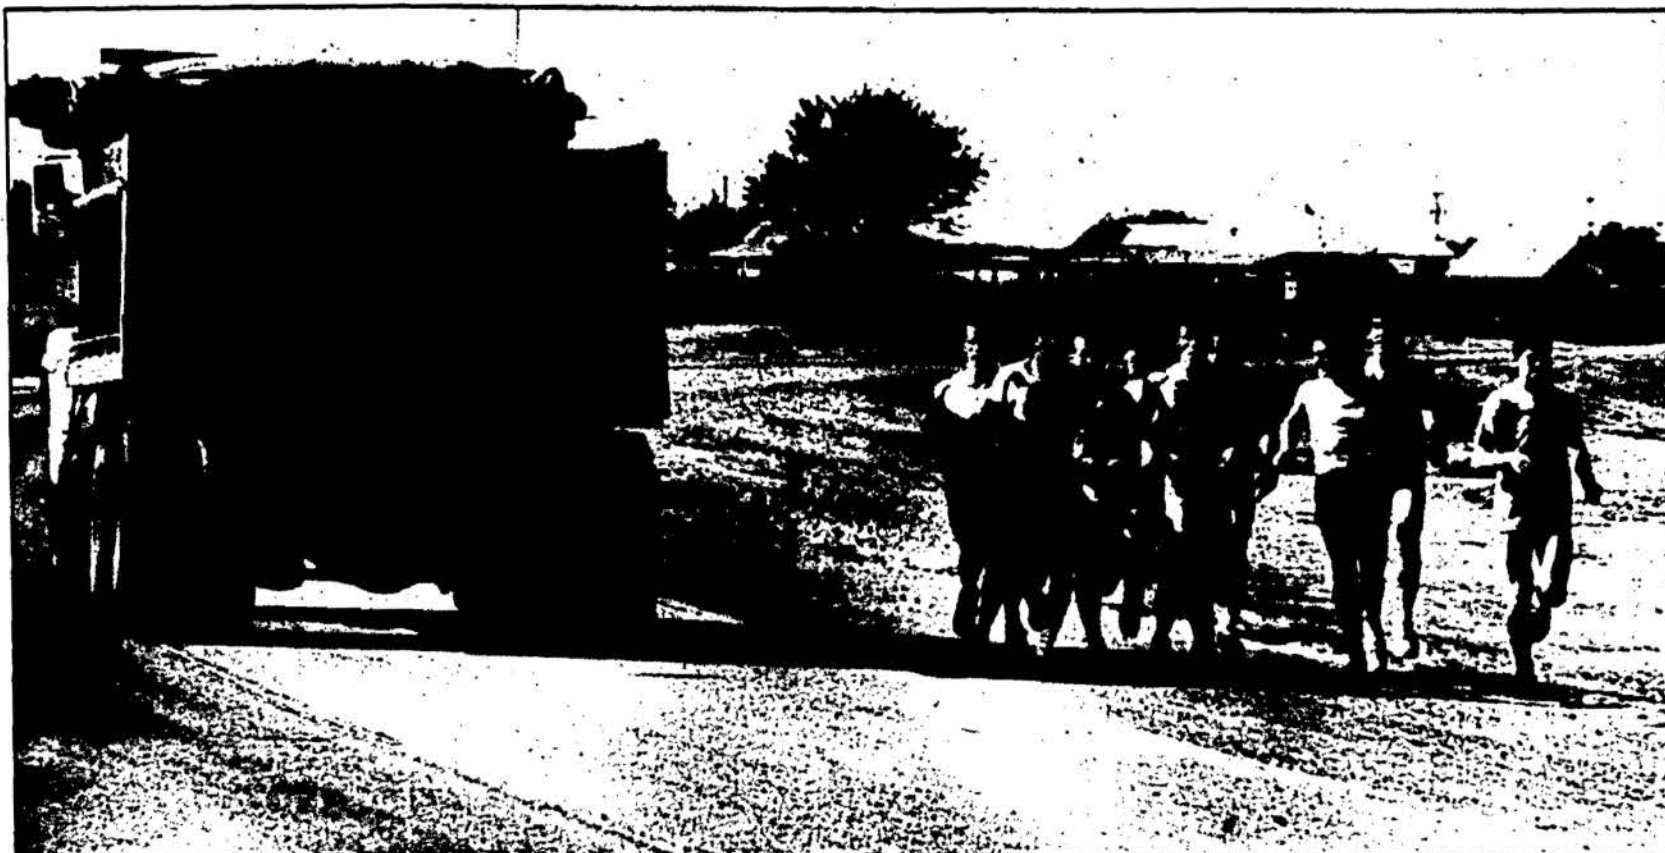

His high school posts include Harve, Mont.; Cardinal Gibbons, Fort Lauderdale; St. Coleman's, Pompano Beach, Fla.; and Oakmont Regional, Ashburnham, Mass.

"He has had experience at Division I, Division II, NAIA, as well as with the junior colleges," Morse said.

"He has a lot of experience to bring us and we think he can lend a lot of those things to our programs."

Other accomplishments for Kozol include playing semi-professional football in New England and being nominated for Georgia Junior College Coach of the Year in 1985.

Kozol completed his master's degree at Eastern Kentucky University in 1977, where he also earned an education specialist degree in 1978.

Cross Country teams hope to be healthy

Harriers to face stiff competition at Emporia

By Tim Parks

Staff writer

Health and happiness.

For the past two weeks, the Fort Hays State cross country has competed not only against other teams, but injuries and illnesses as well.

This weekend FHSU will hope to be more healthy when they travel to Emporia to compete in the Invitational meet.

The harriers will be facing stiff competition this weekend.

FHSU will be one of ten schools competing.

The schools participating in the event are FHSU, Emporia

State, Kansas Wesleyan College, Sterling College, Baker University, Ottawa University, McPherson College, Highland Junior College, Pratt Junior College and Pittsburg State University's women's squad.

"Some of the schools may not have full teams, but they will be there," Coach Jim Krob said.

At 10 a.m., the women will run in a 5000 meter race, followed by the men's five mile run.

Krob said he expects the Emporia State men to be the strongest team at the meet.

"I think our men are going to try to run with Emporia. I don't think any of the other schools are that strong. I don't know if we can stay with them or not.

We'll find out," he said.

Krob said the men's squad is hurting some because of recent sickness.

"Mike Filley is sick and has missed practice for a couple of days. Mike Hobbs is hurt and Rick Walker is just getting over his sickness," he said.

Krob said he expects Emporia State to walk away with the women's team title, but says he thinks the FHSU women will be able to compete for second place against Pittsburg State.

"Last weekend, Emporia won the KU (University of Kansas) Invitational. They beat a bunch of Big Eight and Southwest Conference schools. They are very, very strong," Krob said.

"We're going to try to run with Pittsburg State. Whether we can or not, I don't know. They beat us last weekend so we'll try to get them this weekend."

Krob said there are two girls sick and one hurt.

"These are normal things with cross country. There is always someone sick or hurt."

Later in the season, the Tiger harriers will return to Emporia for the CSIC meet.

The squad will depart from Hays at 4 a.m. Saturday.

"We take some awfully early trips to get where we're going," Krob said. "It'll be a good meet and will be interesting to see what happens."

Tigers to open CSIC action against Kearney State

By Ted Harbin

Staff writer

After two losses on the road, the Tigers say that they are ready for a home game.

Fort Hays State lost two games in Oklahoma to nationally ranked teams.

"I really think that those games helped us out. We played pretty good, but they were very strong," Eric Busenbark, senior slotback, said.

"We used to play teams like St. Mary's of the Plains (College), and we used to be 3-0 coming into conference and struggle in our conference," Head Coach John Vincent said.

"You can always count on a winning season if you play three weaker teams, and that's good from an egotistical standpoint."

"As far as developing a winning program, my personal belief is that you're not really helping yourself," Vincent said.

Kearney State College will be the next opponent for the Tigers tomorrow night at Lewis Field. The Antelopes bring an 0-2 record into this week's action.

Safety Jeff Norblade will be a key for the Lopers to be successful against FHSU. The 215-pound senior was an honorable mention All-American in 1986.

"Kearney is a big, big game for two different reasons. Number one, they use the Hays game as a barometer for the season.

"If they beat us, they usually have a real good season. If we beat them, they don't," Vincent said.

"From the other standpoint, if you win the first conference

Football fan upset with players as NFL begins strike

I love fall. The weather is about as perfect as it will ever be, school starts, I see old friends and the numerous bugs from summer gradually go away.

However, the main reason I love fall is football. I love to watch football, I love to talk about football and I especially love to play football, although I realize my athletic ability is lacking considerably.

I always thought I loved all aspects of the sport.

I found out I was wrong. I am tired of hearing about the stupid player's union strike.

I realize there are many problems in the business side of football I don't know anything about, but I thought surely they got them all worked out in the last strike.

The point of dispute that I hear the most about is the salary issue. The union wants to raise a rookie's minimum starting salary from $50,000 to $90,000 a year.

I can understand trying to protect the player who doesn't get a Boz-sized salary, but it still seems like an unusually large amount of money to make for a first-year worker of any job.

It's rather sad that these people refuse to play because they aren't getting enough money to buy that new Corvette they've had their eye on and still take the wife and kids to the Bahamas.

Meanwhile, the average American football fan scraped enough money together from his $5.50-an-hour job to get season tickets that are now worthless because the players are on strike.

I can understand some of the other issues being worth a dispute, such as guaranteed contracts after one year of play and being able to sign with another club.

The players want to be able to sign with any team that offers them a contract when their old one runs out.

As it is now, the current team could match the new team's offer, and the player would be forced to stay. This seems like a reasonable point to argue.

However, the management seems to be willing to compromise on most issues. It is the players that are causing the strike.

The players know they can capture the public's attention by striking and pressure the management into giving in completely to their demands.

Meanwhile, we all get to watch NFL rejects or Canadians play. When that happens, the whole purpose of watching pro-football has been lost. How fun is it to watch a game you're impartial to? Who cares who wins or loses if you have no favorite players on the field?

Maybe the management should fire all of the players who are unwilling to compromise. It would be kind of like Valerie Harper going on strike because she didn't have the same size salary as Bill Cosby. She refused to compromise, so they fired her and got Sandy Duncan instead.

However, the show is not the same; football won't be, either.

The football industry has a large advantage. It is a form of entertainment, yet knows that there will still be fans waiting for it when it returns.

This advantage is being abused by the players. Both sides of the issue need to work together to come to an agreement soon.

If the players aren't careful, the management may find that signing scab teams will make enough money to continue the season without the big shots.

In any case, if the two sides don't work together to find a solution, everyone will lose out. The players and management need to start working together as a team. They don't even act as if they're in the same industry.

For now, I will simply concentrate on college football. I don't know why, but I like it better anyway.

Lady Tigers beat Bethany;
FHSU Invitational next

By Scott Delnes

Staff writer

After a successful weekend of volleyball action, Head Volleyball Coach Jody Wise and her Lady Tigers played a single match with Bethel College.

"We started very slowly, and lost the first match. This was a best three out of five match, so it really didn't hurt us as badly as it would have if we had only been playing two out of three," Wise said.

After losing the first game of the match 12-15, they regrouped and came back to play very well, Wise said.

"After we lost that first match, we came back very strong. We cannot afford to start so slowly in every match. When you get into tournaments and lose that first game, it can make for some very long matches," Wise said.

"When we play together as a unit like we did in the last three games of the match, we are a very good volleyball team," Wise said.

Finishing off the action in the last three games of the match, the Lady Tigers won 15-4, 15-9, and 15-13.

Next action for the Lady Tigers will be at their own Fort Hays State Invitational, starting today.

Wise and company will start things off against a Colorado team, Adams State College, at 9 a.m. today.

Next in line for the Tigers will be Cowley County Community College, at 1 p.m.

In its third game of the day, FHSU will square off against Sterling College of Colorado.

"I really don't know much about any of these teams, but I do know that Sterling has a pretty solid program," Wise said.

In what Wise said could be one of the toughest matches, the Tigers will take on Friends University. When the pre-season polls came out, Friends University was ranked No. 19 in the nation.

Rounding out the day's action, the Tigers will play Southwestern College at 9 p.m.

Continuing with the pool play Saturday morning, FHSU will be playing Washburn University and St. Mary of the Plains College. These are the only two teams in the tournament that have dealt the Tigers a loss this season.

"This is an important tournament for us because of the number of District 10 teams. When the district tournament rolls around, if we have a good district record, it will help us," Wise said.

Bethany College will be next for the Tigers Saturday afternoon. Closing out the tournament will be the third team from Colorado, Mesa College. Mesa was ranked No. 20 in the pre-season polls.

"If we play good ball, I think we have a very good chance of winning the tournament. We just need to move well on the court, and cut down on our mental errors," Wise said.

LOPERS.

game, you're one up on other people. That's what you want to do -- place as high in the conference as possible."

Kearney State is known for its defense. Their team may not be the caliber of Cameron University, but they have been known to be a sound defensive unit.

Offensively, the Lopers will rely on the experience of their senior quarterback, Mark Voss.

"At this particular point, he (Voss) hasn't looked as good on film as he did last year," Vincent said.

Kearney State's running attack hasn't been very effective this year. Running backs Trevor Pavich and Scott Chochon have combined for only 161 yards in two games.

"They've been playing some pretty good people.

"They don't have what I'd call the typical Kearney State tailback. Offensively, they don't look as sharp as they have in the past," Vincent said.

For the Tigers, Vincent said that they are going to have to make Kearney State respect their running game more.

"Against" Cameron, they stopped our run so easily. Their front line was just all over the place," he said.

Kearney State's defensive line is quite a bit smaller than that of Cameron's. The Lopers' front line averages 233 pounds, about 30 pounds lighter than the Aggies' line.

Claire Boroff, head coach of the Antelopes, is just two wins away from winning his 100th game at Kearney State. He has recorded a 98-44-3 mark as mentor of the Lopers.

"I think that by playing Northwestern, by playing Cameron, we get some recognition by playing tough. You gain benefits because they (FHSU) should be confident."

"We've played with the best there is. We got beat, sure, but we played well against those teams," Vincent said.
