CAMPUS

• Faculty, staff and students needing inquiry access to data base files in the Computing Center during Thanksgiving vacation may request it from Keith Faulkner, 628-4487. The deadline is Wednesday at 4:30 p.m.

• This year's Madrigal Dinner has sold out. Memorial Union director Steve Wood said his office sold the last of 288 available tickets Wednesday. To place names on a waiting list for either night of the dinner Dec. 4 or 5, those interested may call Wood at 628-5305.

• "Word processing applications" is the topic to be discussed at a workshop 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, Dec. 5 in McCartney 205.

The workshop is sponsored cooperatively by FHSU and the Small Business Development Center, an agency of the Small Business Administration.

Pat Wolf, staff member in the department of business administration, is the workshop leader.

The workshop is for anyone who wants to apply word processing technology to personal or business applications. It is designed for the person with little or no computer experience. Workshop fee is $25.

For more information or to enroll in the workshop contact the Small Business Development Center at 628-5340.

LOCAL

• The library's Feed and Films series continues Wednesday with "Autumn: Frost Country" and "Sam."

"Autumn: Frost Country" films the rich beauty of autumn in the New England woods. Robert Frost reads two of his poems, "The Road Not Taken" and "Reluctance."

"Sam" was nominated for an Academy Award. In it Sam, a 63-year-old farmer, craftsman, writer, wildlife caretaker and restorer of pre-Revolutionary homes, shares his thoughts about life.

The program begins at 12:05 p.m. in the library basement. Coffee is provided.

• A blue racer snake is on display in the adult department of the Hays Public Library.

Blue racers range over much of Kansas, including Ellis County. They are found in moist or dry habitats, wooded areas or prairies.

Racers are active during the day and eat anything small that moves. They are not poisonous and can become tame.

The blue racer will be on display in the library through the month of December.

• "Electronic Spreadsheet" is the topic to be discussed at a workshop 1 to 4 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 5, in McCartney 205.

The workshop is sponsored cooperatively by the Small Business Development Center, an agency of the Small Business Administration and FHSU.

The workshop fee is $25. For more information or to enroll in the workshop call 628-5340.

More time needed for valid decision-making

Culture committee finds no answer

By Bettina Heinz

Editor in chief

If there was any consensus at yesterday's Student Affairs Committee meeting, it was that there is no consensus on culture.

The second draft of the University Cultural Experience dropped the idea of forcing students to attend cultural events in lieu of a required non-credit course.

Martin Shapiro, committee chairman, presented a revised draft of the culture proposal presented last month.

Shapiro's objective was to come up with a motion to present to the Faculty Senate meeting next Monday.

When the two-hour meeting came to an end, all members decided that they needed more time to decide on a motion.

Yet when members of the committee reported on the feedback they had received from students and faculty, so many new aspects and ideas about such a proposal came up in the discussion that the committee could not decide on a motion.

Three problems with the original proposal stood in the focus of discussion:

• Working, commuting and non-traditional students complained the proposal would be an unbearable requirement.

• As long as faculty members do not attend cultural events, one cannot convince students to go.

• Forcing students to go without any kind of credit or reward will result in large resistance to the idea.

To offer commuting and working students an opportunity to attend, Shapiro suggested taping the events and making copies available to students.

All members agreed that faculty members will have to attend more events and enforce classroom discussion.

Expected objection to the proposal remained a topic throughout the meeting.

Shapiro said that it depends if one "says the glass is half full or half empty" and that "negativism won't help." Leona Pfeifer, assistant professor of German, said that "it's not a question of negativism, but one of realism."

Student Government Association representative Davi Ann Brewer then spoke on behalf of herself as a student.

"I'm really surprised at the stand you are taking," she said to the committee members.

"It's you who are apathetic. I think a cultural events requirement of some sort is a good idea. Once they will attend an event, they might like it."

Brewer, Dodge City senior, said she would support an idea presented by an SGA senator that would make such a requirement mandatory for only two years instead of four.

Other committee members agreed with such an idea.

"If they have gone for two years and still don't like it, you won't change them," Pfeifer said.

There was no consensus regarding whether the two-year requirement should be required the first two years of college or just any time during the four-year period.

Also in discussion was whether such a requirement should be implemented as a non-credit course, as Shapiro suggested, or as a credit course.

As the committee agreed that it was too early to decide on a motion, it decided to bring the topic to the next Faculty Senate meeting in form of a floor discussion.

The question at stake will then be whether the senate judges enforcement of cultural events attendance as worthwhile and whether the committee should further seek to come up with a proposal for such a requirement.

Class credit holds key in Dent's culture idea

By Bettina Heinz

Editor in chief

Student attendance at cultural events is a problem.

But, while most agree on that, they do not agree on what approach to take.

I. B. Dent, director of student activities, rejects the recent proposal of the Student Affairs Committee and suggests a different solution: an additional required one-credit hour course for freshmen.

The Student Affairs Committee proposal suggests requiring attendance at three cultural events per semester. Failure to fulfill the requirement would prevent students from receiving transcripts or enrolling in the following semester.

The proposal is not a valid university approach to an educational issue, Dent said.

"It's like a Band-Aid. Instead of healing a sore spot, they want to put a Band-Aid on it so you can't see it," he said.

"It's not a very intellectual proposal. For years, we have needed to hear about this problem, though," Dent said.

The credit course Dent suggests would take a much broader approach.

"Such a class would be required for freshmen to take their first two semesters in school. The course would meet for one-and-a-half hours per week," he said.

More than just stressing the importance of cultural events, the course would be designed to make students better fit into university life.

"Issues that could be addressed would include study skills, career development, self awareness and dealing with problems," Dent said.

Various department members would come in and talk about one or another aspect of their department that pertains to all students.

A number of cultural events would be required to attend as part of the course, Dent said.

"Possibly people from the music and drama department and myself could come in and talk to students about performances before they take place, and then after they have taken place, we could discuss them with the students," he said.

Dent said other universities have implemented such required freshman courses in their programs, some with the cultural enrichment aspect and some without.

While rejecting the proposal of the Student Affairs Committee, Dent said the proposal has its good aspects in that it stimulates discussion.

"It is a great opportunity for a good discussion. It is creating a lot of interest in the issue. If that was the purpose of the proposal, then I'm glad they did it."

"It's like a Band-Aid. Instead of healing a sore spot, they want to put a Band-Aid on it, so you can't see it. It's not a very intellectual proposal. For years, we have needed to hear about this problem, though."

—I.B. Dent

"If they really thought it was the right measure to take, then that's pretty bad," Dent said.

The credit course Dent is suggesting would be a more appropriate approach to the problem, he said.

"I think a course like this would be much more meaningful, as it would also address other issues," Dent said.

He said such a course might have been proposed a long time ago, but he would like to see it taken up again.

With a credit course, Dent said he hopes one could create a habit.

"Hopefully, it would start a pattern. Of course, you are going to lose a certain percentage of them. But by being able to discuss events and bring them into conversation, one should be able to lower the level of distance and create awareness why we have cultural events," Dent said.

The main reason why student attendance at cultural events is so low, Dent said, is due to the location of Fort Hays State.

ROTC receives passing mark

By Madeline Heller

Staff writer

The Fort Hays State Reserved Officers Training Corps passed inspection.

Col. Ronald Pruitt, Edmond, Okla., observed one of his 16 newly-acquired units Thursday afternoon.

Major Jack Lewis, director of FHSU military science, explained the reason for the inspection.

"Col. Pruitt was recently assigned to a new position as 1st brigade commander of the 3rd ROTC region," Lewis said.

"About every three years they reassign positions to the officers."

"Now he's trying to get out to become acquainted with his new area," Lewis said.

Captain Thomas Hardy attributed Pruitt's interest in Hays to his preference of smaller universities.

"He's a graduate of Panhandle State University and he really likes smaller schools," Hardy said.

Col. Pruitt inspected two broad areas of the ROTC program.

"He came up specifically to look at the Fort Hays ROTC training program and the courses that accompany them," Lewis said.

"I also gave him a briefing of what the unit plans to do this semester and next," he said.

Pruitt also had a chance to see the corps in action.

"Col. Pruitt noted that the unit was enthusiastic and that their morale was good," Lewis said.

"He especially noted the enthusiasm during the land navigation exercise of map and compass reading," he said.

Around 25 cadets participated in the land navigation exercises, and Lewis said that comments from Pruitt about the exercises were only positive.

Hardy said that Pruitt was impressed with what FHSU has to offer its cadets.

"After he toured the campus, he gave nothing but positive comments about the facilities at Cunningham Hall and the Gross Memorial complex," Hardy said.

Pruitt is responsible for the ROTC programs of 16 universities in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

FHSU has one of the smallest universities with a ROTC unit. Therefore, Lewis said, there is a different environment.

"We have sort of a unique environment that Col. Pruitt came to see, an environment that stems from our smaller size," Lewis said.

Thanksgiving unites countries

It was Thanksgiving, international style. On Saturday, the International Student Union invited students and faculty to a Thanksgiving dinner. Though the traditional pumpkin pie was there, the food served looked definitely un-American. Every ISU member had prepared a traditional dish from his home country. When President Arthur Khaw and Social Chairman Jeredie Sinzinkayo addressed the group, there was a true spirit of thankfulness in the room -- thankfulness for the American hospitality international students receive here. And when the guests left, the meaning of Thanksgiving had exceeded its national borders.

Letters

Culture proposal right approach after all

Dear Editor,

Envisioning a world in which the necessity of examining the internal, along with the external, subtleties of a given work to discover evidence pertinent to deriving an opinion expressed has become non-existent, I shudder; however, I realize that when such examination is indeed necessary, any given work is subject to misinterpretation. In view of this, I suppose gratitude is due Lisa Katchee for her penultimate recognition of the Marxian/Engelsian influence on the form and phrasology of my previous letter. Yet, in the final analysis, she managed to misconstrue the meaning of "Uncultured of All Countries, United!" Ordinarily, since interpretation is subjective, I would not make the immediate purpose of any of my compositions to explain the meaning of anything I had written previously. I must, however, except the situation because it is not my desire to be seen in the light by which I am presently viewed.

I answer to the questions posed in Katchee's letter: I do not count myself among the members of the "proud uncultured" populace on this campus. If the editorial staff of this newspaper had not seen fit to remove from the original manuscript, a fragment in which I state this, Katchee probably would have misconstrued nothing.

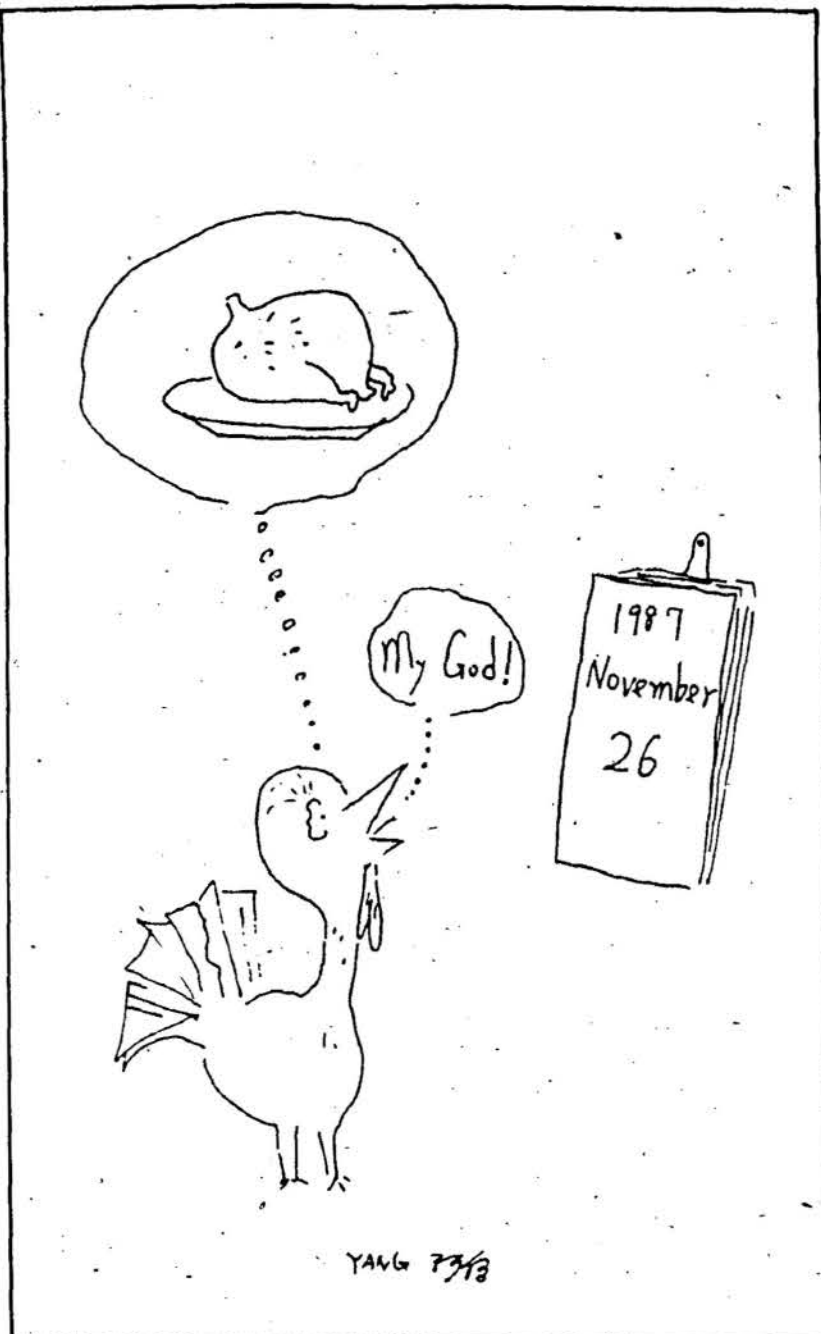

Despite this, I still fail to conceive how she arrived at the conclusion she did when I penned a letter for which one needed to be, in some manner, cultured to begin to even superficially understand. There are other elements of my letter that would have guided her to the intended final destination if she had caught them; however, I have neither the space, nor the desire to go into them all. The above mentioned element, I suspect, is sufficient to begin comprehending the compound of my letter.

Yes, the Communist Manifesto was a required reading text in a World Civilization course I enrolled in at this university; but, I first read and reread it when I was a junior in high school -- unrequired I should add. While I am on the subject, I would like to demonstrate to my readers that I feel no animosity towards Katchee by expressing my thanks to her for reminding me of the term "Philistine." I had forgotten of its extensive use in the Communist Manifesto. For lack of a more appropriate word, I threw "ignoramus" in at the last moment. I chose it in hopes that the readers would realize that I would not refer to myself as one, thus cancelling my membership in the "Proud Uncultured" society. Again, thank you. You keep me from becoming a sloth.

In conclusion, I would like to state that I am in favor of "required culturalism" of the university cultural experience proposal, though not in its original form. Since I composed my initial letter on this subject, it has undergone change -- change, in my opinion, in the right direction and which should increase its following. As an institute of higher learning, a university has a responsibility to expose its students to the cultural events of a society. If it is lax in this responsibility, how can it be termed "an institute of higher learning?" If a student does not take advantage of this exposure, then he really does stand to lose a world.

Thanksgiving time to see old friends, family

Dear Friend,

Ah, just a few more days and we can go back home, be with our families and then chow down on Turkey Day delights.

It will be nice to get a home-cooked meal for a change. Real food like turkey, stuffing, potatoes, gravy, all that good stuff.

Finally, I'm getting a chance to go home. I'm thankful for this break before the end of semester. I can go home, see some old friends and even my dog.

Remember Dino? He's the border collie that would always chase our cars out the driveway. I swear, he has the IQ of an ice cube. But he is still one of my best friends. He would always listen to my troubles, or at least I thought he was listening.

Then there's my little brother, Travis. What a kid. You wouldn't believe how he has grown. Sometimes he thinks he's smarter than I, and then I have to knock him back to reality as we battle for the king of the basement title.

He has taken over my bedroom now, and maybe he will make something out of himself yet. Who knows?

Poor mother. I hope she is mentally prepared for Turkey Day. She gets the fun job of cleaning the house and doing all of the cooking.

Then, there's my dad. He'll be a nervous wreck as he will try to keep the peace between the two families on Turkey Day. It's a dirty job, but somebody has to do it.

Remember Aunt Patti and Uncle Mike? They are the typical yuppie family with a slight twist. They're the ones who had triplets a while back. They are getting along fine now. Talk about planned parenthood. Ha!

I don't know if you have met my cousins from Oklahoma, but I haven't seen them since last Christmas.

There are three of them, two girls and a boy. The oldest girl and I always have these long talks about our social lives. Since mine has taken a turn for the worse this year, I guess she'll be doing all of the talking.

I think you've met all of my grandparents. I always look forward to seeing them; I guess because I can learn so much from the stories they tell. In years past, I never gave it much thought, but as I have grown older, I see how much wisdom they really have.

Do you recall big Don? He's the comedian in our family. I'll never know where he gets his jokes, but they never fail to send me rolling off my chair.

Aunt Dana is doing fine. She is probably the most easy one of my relatives to talk to at one of these functions. I haven't seen her since State Fair time this year. Then, I was so rushed, I never got to talk to her too much. She's moved again, and likes her new place.

I just wish I could help her as much as she's helped me in the past. She would always buy us party supplies for those special occasions when I was too young and too afraid to ask Mom. You would always wonder how I got that stuff.

I can't remember when she ever said "no" if I asked her for something. What a gal.

When it gets right down to the nitty gritty, I guess the one thing we should be thankful for is having our families. Without them where would we be?

No matter how large or small, a family can make it through good times and bad. All they have to do is stick together.

Our friendship is the same way. There have been good times and bad times. I've told you this once before, my confused friend. Just give it a chance. If it's meant to be it will happen.

Don't be such a stranger, because I'm missing you now more than ever.

Hope to see you soon.
Your friend

Year in retrospect full of surprising lessons

We have had a busy year, what with airplanes turning upside-down and the stock market falling. I would like to think it wasn't all for naught. So here are a few lessons I think we've learned this year. Some are from the December issue of Glamour and some are mine.

From Donna Rice, we learned that some people get paid to have no excuses.

From Oprah Winfrey, we learned that people will listen to a woman with a big mouth if she has something important to say.

From Vanna White, we learned that it is better to remain silent and be thought a fool than to speak up and remove all doubt.

From Fawn Hall, we learned that sometimes it takes only a shred of evidence to know what's going on.

From Oliver North, we learned it's not how you play the game, but whether the public likes you that counts.

From Madonna, we learned (again) that there is only one Marilyn.

From Fergie, Duchess of York, we learned that you can pilot a plane, hold a job and marry a prince, but people will still want to read about your weight.

From Elizabeth Dole, who quit her cabinet post, we learned that some women will still ride in the back of the bus if they think it will take them to the White House.

From Mary Beth Whitehead and Elizabeth Stern, we learned neither a borrower nor a lender be.

From Tammy Faye Bakker, we learned that there are some things you can't cover up with makeup.

From Tip O'Neal, we learned that there is a life after being Speaker of the House, beaters and sexual surgery.

From Jessica McClure, we learned that age is not necessary for dignity and courage.

From Ellen Stohl, a paraplegic who posed partially nude for Playboy, we learned that disabled women have the same right to sexual exploitation as everybody else.

From Jim "she tempted me" Bakker, we learned that God will forgive even the lowest scum in the pond.

From Jerry Falwell, we learned he definitely is not God.

From Princess Di, we learned that even royal husbands can be royal pains.

From Gary Hart, we learned that whether you win or lose depends on if you get caught.

From Jessica Hahn, we learned just because you commit adultery, take bribes and pose in Playboy, that doesn't make you a bimbo.

From numerous politicians, we learned it's all right to have smoked marijuana, as long as it's you, and not the press, that tells everyone.

From Wall Street, we learned to cut our losses, and cut and...

From Patty Duke, Gelsey Kirkland and Carrie Fisher, we learned that the worst lives make the best sellers.

From Ronald Reagan, we learned that lame ducks are still lame, even if he isn't one.

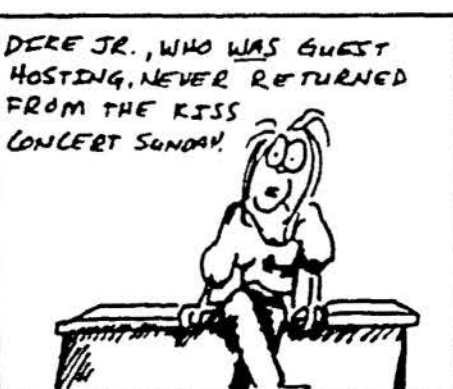

So when you go home for the holidays, and the ones paying for your education ask you what you learned this semester...

In suburban communities, on the other hand, it's not uncommon to talk about such events.

"Kids hear their parents talk about attendance of theater performances, ballets and so on. It's fairly common household talk in the east," he said.

Other reasons conducive to a lack of attendance of cultural events all lead back to the basic problem, Dent said.

"There is, of course, a stigma attached, that attendance of cultural programs is for wimps, not something a Western man does," Dent said.

"Young people don't realize the importance of culture once they get out of college," he said.

More than just rounding out a college education, culture and art are a very real aspect of business life, according to Dent.

"There is not one major corporation that does not contribute to a major art company. The top men in the top 500 corporations know what they pay dollars into," Dent said.

As example, Dent mentioned Coca Cola Inc. sponsoring the Atlanta Ballet.

"You bet Coca Cola is going to be at the ballet. And if I were a young employee at Coca-Cola, I'd be a season ticket holder, and I'd be seen at the ballet by the major people in Coca-Cola, with my wife and my dad," Dent said.

One cannot stress enough the importance of the arts for business, he said.

"Just knowing business classes is not enough," Dent said.

The faculty should attend cultural events as well, Dent said.

"If they vote for this proposal, if they say that everybody needs to attend cultural events for the education's sake, then they should be there, too," he said.

The students Dent works with on the various Memorial Union Activities Board committees are mostly opposed to the proposal because it would force students to attend events.

Dent said, "But, they realize the frustration on their side too, as they are basically volunteers and only get a small amount of support."

As far as his idea of a credit course is concerned, in the coming weeks Dent plans to contact other universities that offer a similar course.

In addition to that, he said he'd like to send a letter to university President Edward Hammond and Martin Shapiro, professor of music, and proponent of the Student Affairs Committee proposal.

"The approach of the proposal is totally wrong, but we need to address the issue, and personally, I feel that a credit course is the direction we should go."

"It wouldn't solve the problem, but it will help. Faculty discussion in the classroom and faculty attendance would be of great help," Dent said.

"Western Kansas is not an area where attending cultural events, live programs, is a generally accepted pattern of life," Dent said.

"It's not a topic of conversation among western Kansans if they attended the Soffa Chamber Orchestra last night or not," he said.

Padilla pleads innocence at court hearing

Kennith Padilla, Ulysses freshman, pleaded not guilty to aggravated battery charges at his arraignment last Monday at the Ellis County Court House.

Padilla was charged with aggravated battery after a short confrontation that led to the stabbing of Dan Knipp, Dodge City freshman, on Oct. 3 on the fifth floor of West Hall.

A shaving cream prank had been played on Padilla when he and Knipp exchanged words.

There was a scuffle and Knipp was stabbed in the back.

Knipp was taken to St. Anthony Hospital, where he was admitted. He was examined and sent to surgery to repair the severely cut muscles in his back, allegedly induced by Padilla.

Knipp was released that evening and is in good condition.

The preliminary hearing for the stabbing took place on Oct. 22. There, the arraignment date was set.

The preliminary proceedings determined whether there was enough evidence to conduct a court trial. Monday's arraignment stated the verdict.

Sufficient evidence was found and the date for the court trial will be Jan. 25.

Several testimonies will be heard again at that time and a guilty or innocent verdict will be delivered.

If convicted, Padilla could serve up to 20 years in jail.

"I wish I could have told my story to the paper. Instead I look like a bad guy. Now it's too late," Padilla said.

Mice invade Wiest Hall

The rumor is that Wiest Hall has been invaded by rats, but the truth is they are only mice.

The problem surfaces every year when the weather turns cold, and it seems to be confined to the living quarters, as none have been spotted in the kitchen or elsewhere. Tim Peterson, resident manager of Wiest Hall, said.

"We've had only one complaint that I know of," he said, "and that was from a resident."

When a complaint is made it is immediately transferred to the housing office, and Universal Pest Control is called to take care of it.

The reason that problems of this nature go on for so long is that the residents rarely report the problem so that it can be solved, Jim Long, housing director, said.

"Most of the residents, instead of telling us the problem, go home and tell their mom and dad, and then the parents call Dr. (Bill) Jellison (vice president for student affairs), which is not a quick way to get things done."

All of the other residential houses on campus say that they have not seen or had any reports of mice.

A reason that Wiest Hall seems to be the only hall with the problem may be that there are a few people who don't keep clean rooms, Peterson said.

Some residents agreed with Peterson, saying that it is an all-male hall, and "most of the guys are kind of slob."

Some residents have tried to remedy the situation themselves with rat poison, and others chose less drastic means.

"I caught one with a racketball racket, scooped it into a bag, and let it go outside," Doug Stevens, Kansas City freshman, said.

Other residents say they like having the mice around, that they treat them like pets, feed them, and try to teach them tricks.

"They like gouda cheese and bologna a lot, but they didn't go for the hot dogs at all," John Scott, Tonganoxie sophomore, said.

"One has only half a tail, and we affectionately call him Stubby."

"He's a non-alcohol mouse. We tried to feed him Everclear but he wouldn't touch it," Chuck Bezona, Syracuse freshman said.

These residents say that the mice are really not a problem, and they would rather something was done about the cockroaches.

Wiest Hall is sprayed for cockroaches regularly, but it is up to each individual resident whether to have his room sprayed or not.

"Most of us choose not to because then we have to clean our room before they come, and it smells really bad after they leave," Chad Myers, Beloit sophomore, said.

FHSU defeats Kearney State College

Tigers pick up 1st CSIC win

By Mike Marzoff

Sports editor

For 35 minutes, Fort Hays State and Kearney State College played nearly even basketball last night.

For about five minutes, FHSU showed the form that won them back-to-back national titles a couple of years ago.

It only took that certain run to give the Tigers their third win of the season, 108-83.

"I thought there was going to be a spurt by one team," Tiger Head Coach Bill Morse said. "Neither team was playing real good basketball at that point."

"We got some blocked shots and some easy fast break points. I felt they (Kearney State) were a little tired during the stretch and didn't play real good defense. I think our depth really paid off at that point."

The run: with 11:34 remaining in the game, FHSU was in front of the Antelopes 66-58. With six minutes remaining, the Tigers had built a 94-64 cushion, outscoring the Lopers 30-8.

Kearney State Head Coach Jerry Hueser felt his team was in the contest with the exception of the run.

"For all but five minutes I was pleased with the efforts of our team," Hueser said. "During the five minutes we were not even in the game."

Fort Hays State showed great jumping ability and great quickness. Take away those five minutes and it was almost even.

In the first half, FHSU couldn't pull away from the Lopers.

The Tigers took leads of nine and seven on a few occasions, only to see the Lopers cut the deficit to one each time.

Kearney State even took the lead with just over one minute remaining in the half, 41-40.

FHSU then regrouped to score the next five points and take a 45-41 lead into the locker room.

To start the second half, the Tigers scored the first seven points, giving them a 52-41 advantage, but Kearney State rallied and cut the deficit to only four, with 15 minutes remaining, 56-52.

The two teams traded baskets from that point until the Tigers' run.

The Tigers placed all five starters in double figures and two men off the bench also scored in double figures for the Tigers, including Brett Buller's 19 points, which was high for FHSU.

"Buller's game was probably the key to our win," Morse said. "With Thomas (Hardnett) in foul trouble, we needed someone to help. That was a super game."

"Brett is one of our best players in practice. Against Kearney State, Brett was a better player than Thomas because of their five-guard offense. He can get out in the corner and do a better job on defense."

Buller was not the only force off the bench for the Tigers on the night.

(Antoine) Williamson and Buller played super off the bench," Hueser said. "When you can get 30 points and 12 rebounds it will pick you up."

"Antoine played a very important role," Morse said. "He played the best of the guards."

the bench, however, was not the only reason for the FHSU victory.

Mark Harris missed only three shots on the night en route to a 16-point performance. Harris also dished out three assists in his 21 while playing only half of the game.

Two of those three assists came on back-to-back plays in the final stages of the run, resulting in slam dunks that brought the crowd to its feet.

Ronnie Thompkins and Cedric Williams, the recipients of the Harris passes, scored 15 and 17 respectively.

Thompkins also hauled in 18 rebounds, 10 offensively, on the night for FHSU, leading the team.

Thompkins also led the Tigers with five blocked shots.

Thomas Hardnett played much of the evening in foul trouble but still managed 12 points and eight rebounds.

"I really think we played better than we have been," Morse said. "We showed great effort and great talent, but the control and execution was very, very poor."

"Kearney's execution was also poor. They made as many errors as we did."

Bruce Zabel led the Lopers in scoring with 16 and, along with Sam Somerhalder, led Kearney State with six rebounds.

The Tigers now have more than a week off before their next contest. Next Wednesday they will play Phillips University.

"We will keep working on the same things during practice, playing under control," Morse said. "We are going to take it on the chin if we don't get under control."

"Kearney forced the action. They score a bunch and give up a bunch. In the championship years, six, eight, 10 games into the season we got our first break going, but under control. We still must learn to do that."

Sitts improves upon personal best time at national meet in Wisconsin

By Tim Parks

Staff writer

Chrissy Sitts went against 18-degree temperatures and 333 women trying to outrun her, but she finished in 84th place at the NAIA National Cross Country Championships Saturday.

Sitts ran the 5,000 meter course in a time of 19:20 to finish in the top third of the 288 runners who finished the race.

The Valley Center sophomore improved 68 places over her 152nd place finish as a freshman.

"Last year Chrissy finished with a time of 20:13. She improved about one minute and 70 places," Cross Country Coach Jim Krob said.

Sitts said she was happy with her finish, but said she could have done better.

"I was happy with my finish, but I look back and see some things that I could have done to finish better," Sitts said.

Both Krob and Sitts agreed the national course at Kenosha, Wis., was tough.

"It was a very, very tough course, and it was cold," Krob said.

"I ran on the same course last year at nationals. I knew what to expect. It's a really tough course," Sitts said.

Krob said the drive to Kenosha took about 16 hours each way.

"The wind was blowing when we got there. The wind chill was minus 3 the first day we worked out. The wind calmed down and didn't blow the day of the race," Krob said.

Sitts had a different view of the trip.

"I hated the drive. I worked on homework and (cross country teammate) Shellie Stahly went with me. We were on the road most of the time," Sitts said.

Sitts said that Krob would have liked to see her finish better, but said that he was pleased with her performance.

"Coach Krob felt I did all right. He said he would have liked to see me finish All-American, but he was happy with my finish," Sitts said.

The top 25 runners received All-America honors at the meet.

"That's an impressive record. Chrissy had a great year. She ran well when she needed to qualify for nationals. She needs to develop more confidence and she will be an even better runner next year."

-Jim Krob

Sitts said going to nationals was one of her goals at the beginning of the season, but would have liked to see the rest of the team attend.

"I was disappointed the team didn't go," Sitts said.

Krob said Sitts had a 94 percent winning percentage, before the national meet.

"That's an impressive record. Chrissy had a great year. She ran well when she needed to qualify for nationals. She needs to develop more confidence and she will be an even better runner next year," Krob said.

Two District-10 runners received All-America honors at the meet.

Cindy Blakeley of Emporia State University placed ninth in the women's division and Alan Peyton of Pittsburg State University finished 22nd in the men's 8,000-meter race.

Two CSIC runners also received All-America honors. Paula West and Donna Spickelmier of Kearney State College finished 20th and 22nd, respectively.

Of the 34 teams in the meet, three CSIC teams placed in the upper division.

Emporia State women's team finished 11th, Pittsburg State ran in 16th position and the Kearney State women came in 17th.

Leah Pells of Simon Fraser set a course record with a time of 16:59. Her time was 33 seconds faster than the runner-up in the women's race.

Rick Robirds of Adams State College also set a course record in the men's division with a time of 23:47 in the 8,000 meter race.

Adams State went on the win the men's divisions with all six team members finishing in the top 16.

Grapplers open season in open tournament

By Heather Anderson

Eric Napier led the Fort Hays State wrestling team with a sixth-place finish at the University of Nebraska-Omaha tournament Saturday.

Napier was the only Tiger who placed in the tournament, but Head Coach Wayne Petterson was not disappointed with his team's efforts.

"I thought they did pretty well overall, as a team," Petterson said.

"It might sound as if we had a down weekend, but it's the best we've done at this tournament in the past four years."

Petterson continued, saying that most of the other teams had already competed in tournaments, and the efforts the team showed were good because it was the first meet.

Petterson not only had praise for Napier, but cited Billy Johnson and West Harding for their efforts.

Johnson finished the tournament with a 4-2 record but failed to place in the 118-pound class.

"He (Johnson) was a little disappointed with the results, but overall he did well," Petterson said.

"He was probably in the toughest weight class there."

"We pretty much found out our weaknesses this weekend," Wayne Petterson

Harding went 3-2 on the day at 134 pounds, being the only Tiger wrestler other than Napier that had a winning record.

Napier finished the tournament 5-3 at 167.

Greg Pfannenstiel, at 126 pounds, finished the day at 1-2.

At 158, Mark Nansel ended the tournament with a 1-2 record, as did Mike Nansel at 177.

Gaven Ludlow was also a 1-2 record wrestler, competing at the 220-pound class.

Other wrestlers who attended the tournament were Vince Cortez at 142, Mike Ellegood at 150 and Craig Goodman, Greg Dixon and Tom Milsap at 158.

"We pretty much found out our weaknesses this weekend," Petterson said.

"We used this as a sort of constructive criticism for ourselves," Petterson said. "That's what this meet was for."

The Tiger grapplers will work on being more aggressive on their feet in order to prepare for upcoming competition.

Although the wrestlers went on Thanksgiving break today, they will conduct a public practice Saturday evening.

The practice will begin at 7 p.m. in Gross Memorial Coliseum.

Dec. 5, the coliseum will be the site of the Fort Hays Open Tournament.

Fischer leading scorer as Lady Tigers defeat Kearney State College for 1st conference win

By Eric Hodson
Assistant sports editor

Good teams bounce back after suffering a loss. The Fort Hays State Lady Tigers did exactly that last night as they defeated the Kearney State College Lady Antelopes 69-58.

In the first half, the Lady Tigers came out in a pressure defense, forcing 24 Loper turnovers.

The Lady Tigers, utilizing their transition game, took a 46-29 lead into the locker room at the half.

"We hustled and played excellent defense," Head Coach John Klein said after the game.

From the field, the Lady Tigers shot 21-43 for 49 percent. The Lopers were 12-28 for 43 percent in the first half.

Annette Wiles, 6-3 senior forward, led the Lady Tigers in the first half, scoring 14 points.

"It was good for Annette and it gave us confidence. We need that with our young kids," Klein said.

Under the boards, the Lady

Tigers pulled down 23 rebounds, four more than Kearney.

Chris Blaser, 6-0 sophomore center, and Penny Fischer, 5-9 senior forward, each pulled down four rebounds for the Lady Tigers in the opening half.

In the opening minutes of the second half, the Lady Tigers committed five straight turnovers, allowing Kearney back in the game momentarily.

The momentum then swayed back in the direction of the Lady Tigers with several blocked Loper shots.

Klein said he was concerned with Kearney's playing experience before the game.

"Most of their kids have had junior varsity experience and have come up through their program. Most of our kids that played tonight are right out of high school," Klein said.

Kearney came out in the second half shooting only 26 percent from the field, but outscored FHSU 29-23.

Fischer led all scorers on the night with 21 points while pulling down seven rebounds for FHSU.

Wiles finished the game with 16 points, seven caroms and three blocked shots for the Lady Tigers.

FHSU connected on 28-66 attempts from the field for 42 percent and was 9-19 from the stripe for 45 percent during the game.

Kearney shot a blistering 71 percent from the stripe, but could only manage 32 percent from the field.

Klein said that his team is going to have to take each game one at a time this season.

"Experience is something you can't teach. Tonight we were more settled down because our older kids did a good job at the start," Klein said.

With the win, the Lady Tigers even their season record to 1-1 overall and 1-0 in the CSIC.

For the Lopers, it was their first loss and game of the season.

FHSU will travel to Dodge City tonight to play St. Mary of the Plains College at 7:30 p.m.

"Klein said the game will be another tough one.

"It starts with our starting line-up," Klein said.

In order for his team to come out on top, Klein said the starters need to come out and take charge of the contest early on.

"That will give our younger players more confidence," Klein said.

Intramurals winding down for fall semester competition

Semester intramural winners announced in numerous athletic events

By Ted Harbin
Staff writer

Competition in intramurals began in September with activities such as co-ed softball and sports trivia and will end in December with co-ed volleyball.

"Our program is geared to meet the needs of the students who participate," Bud Moeckel, director of intramurals, said.

Many students were associated with intramurals and many different people came away as university champions.

In sports trivia, Barry Spitznatter, Gardner senior, took home the plaque, while Judi McEachern, Wellington sophomore, and Aaron Conine, Dighton freshman, won women's and men's archery.

In other women's activities, Gretchen Adkins, Atchison senior, won the singles horseshoe tournament, and Jessica Karr, Hays senior, won the singles golf.

Karen Schulte, Victoria senior, won the tennis singles. Tammy Roth, Holcomb senior, and McEachern took the horseshoe doubles plaque.

In the cross country event, McMinder Hall won easily with five women placing in the top six.

Debra Reed, Stockton sophomore; Laurie Peckham,

Wichita sophomore; and Susanna Elniff, Lewis senior, all tied for first place in the billiards competition.

In the triathlon, Mary Dolenz, Lyons junior, won the short course, and Chris Patterson, Wakefield junior, took the long course.

There were two categories in the women's fun run. Linda Meagher, Hays senior, won the two mile, and Karla Stecklein, Hays sophomore, won the five mile.

Janel Deges, Damar sophomore, was the champion of the table tennis singles, while Karr and Cathy Chong, Sarawak, Malaysia, sophomore, won the double competition.

Kim Marchand, Salina freshman, won the racketball singles, and the Sigma Sigma Sigmas took the touch football championship. IM-REC won the swimming and diving.

For the men, Chad Nowak, Sharon Springs senior, was the university champion in the horseshoe singles. In the horseshoe doubles, Doug Back, Jetmore senior, and Barney Macari, Canton senior, won the tournament.

Jeff Schulz, Hill City sophomore, won the golf singles. In the golf doubles, Brian Riesch, Hays junior, and Ron Sturgeon, Hays senior, won the best ball, while Jeff Stoumbaugh, LaCrosse senior, and Ron Storz, Beaver City, Neb., senior, won the total.

Darrell Mills, Larned senior, won the tennis singles, and Arnold Reinert, Tipton senior, won the Superstar tournament.

In swimming and diving, the Whipper Snappers won in a close decision. The Tau Kappa Epsilon team won cross country.

In scooter football, the Icemen walked away with the plaque. Scott Deines, Burlington, Colo., freshman, won the billiards for the baseball team.

In the triathlon, Rod Briggs, Moscow senior, won the short course.

course. Robert Griebel, Hays sophomore, won the two mile fun run.

In touch football, That One Team won the A-1 division. Agnew Heat won A-2. Grave-Diggers won A-3 and Sigma Chi 1 took A-4. B and B were the champions in the recreation division A-1.

Lu Cheng-hsiung, Kaohsiung, Taiwan, graduate student, proved his table tennis prowess as he won both the singles and doubles with his partner Dan Scott, St. John graduate student. RENOB won the wheelchair contest.

In the trap shoot, Mike Schwein, Maxwell junior, won the overall competition after winning the doubles match. He won with a mild victory over John Harrison, Bethesda, Md., freshman, who won the singles match.

Co-ed activities have been a big part of intramurals throughout the semester.

In golf, Curt Pahls, Tipton senior, and Michelle Becker, Cawker City junior, took home the plaque, while Darrell and Deb Mills won the tennis.

IM-REC won both the softball and the touch football tournaments.

Chong and Tate Ellegood, Garden City senior, won the table tennis doubles and the Icemen won water polo.

Sports Briefs

- Entries for co-ed volleyball are still being accepted. Entries are due today by 4:30 p.m. in the Intramural Office.
- Sunday evening basketball will resume Nov. 29 following Thanksgiving break.
- Doubles racquetball play begins at 4:30 p.m. on Nov. 30 at the racquetball courts. Entries are due at that time.
- The women's basketball team takes on the St. Mary of the Plains Cavaliers tonight at 7:30 in Dodge City.
- The Athletic Board lacked a quorum for yesterday's scheduled meeting, and it was cancelled.

Harris named tournament MVP

Tigers capture Pepsi Tip-Off

By Mike Marzoff

Sports editor

It was a case of wishful thinking.

Heading into this weekend's Pepsi Tip-Off Tournament, Head Coach Bill Morse said he wondered how well his Fort Hays State basketball team would perform.

They had not faced any competition but themselves, unlike past years.

But the Tigers had little trouble in capturing the championship trophy.

After running away with an opening round victory over Concordia Lutheran College, (Texas) 121-68, FHSU then posted an 80-65 win over Southwestern University (Texas).

Southwestern earned the right to play in the title game by surprising Oklahoma City University, 60-58.

In the title game, FHSU fell behind 2-0 just seconds into the contest, but that was the final time FHSU would be on the little end of the score.

After that, tournament MVP Mark Harris connected on two three-point field goals and added two more from two-point range over the next six minutes to give the Tigers a 12-10 lead.

The Tigers kept the lead around six points for most of the first half and were up 35-27 when Thomas Hardnett hit a layup and was fouled.

With 1:16 left in the half, Hardnett completed the three-point play and Shaun Manning added two free throws due to a technical foul called on Southwestern Head Coach Paul Peck.

Along with a Cedric Williams layup a few seconds later, FHSU had built a 42-27 lead. After that, Southwestern could not get any closer than 12 points.

Harris led the Tigers in scoring in the championship contest with 20 points, followed by Ronnie Thompkins with 18.

Williams also scored in double figures with 13. Thompkins grabbed nine rebounds to lead FHSU.

In the opening round game, Ronnie Thompkins led six Tigers in double figures, with 27 points. Thompkins also collected 10 rebounds.

For the game, FHSU shot 60 percent in the 53-point victory, in which all 12 Tigers saw at least eight minutes of action.

Also, 11 members of the team scored in the contest.

Other Tigers in double figures were Thomas Hardnett, 15; Mark Harris, 12; Antione Williamson, 12; Reggie Kirk, 12; and Robert Harper, 10.

In the third-place game, Oklahoma City trounced Concordia Lutheran, 120-87.

Ronnie Thompkins scored 45 points in the tournament to lead the Tigers. His 19 rebounds were also a team high.

Those numbers placed Thompkins on the All-Tournament team, along with Harris.

Harris hit on 11 of 15 shots for the tournament, scoring 32 points and handing out a team-high 10 assists.

Other members of the All-Tournament team:

Steve Henderson, Southwestern, scored 44 points and grabbed 17 rebounds in the tournament.

Steve Morris, Oklahoma City, scored a single game high of 35 in the consolation game and ended the tournament with 45.

Greg Miles, Oklahoma City, scored 37 points for the tournament. Miles also led the tournament with 26 rebounds.

Phil Malina, Concordia Lutheran, scored 42 points in the tournament and ended with 22 rebounds.

Tracy picked to 1st team All-CSIC squad

The 1987 All-Central States Intercollegiate Conference football team was announced last Friday, with 11 members of the Fort Hays State Tigers making the squad.

Of the 11 Tigers picked, only one made first or second team.

Sophomore slot back Tyrone Tracy was named first team All-CSIC receiver.

The 5-11 Indianapolis native was the only sophomore selected to the first team.

Tracy finished second in the conference in receiving, averaging 5.1 receptions a contest.

In addition, Tracy finished second in the conference, averaging 10.8 points a game.

Tracy also finished second in the conference in punt returns and third in kickoff returns.

Ten Tigers were tabbed as honorable mention.

Craig Modellmog, the conference's leading passer and second leading rusher was among them.

Also named honorable mention All-CSIC was Eric Busenbark.

Busenbark finished right behind Tracy in receiving in the conference.

Other offensive members of the Tigers named were Darryl Brzon, offensive lineman; Darryl Pittman, offensive lineman; Rob Ukleya, offensive lineman; and Tim Winter, running back.

Defensive members pick as honorable mention were Frank Brown, defensive lineman; Edmund Faagal, linebacker; Dusty Trail, defensive back; and Greg Yost, defensive lineman.

Pittsburg State University led selections, with 11 Gorillas picked to the first team and four more named second team.

In addition, Pittsburg State head coach, Dennis Franchione was named as Coach-of-the-Year for the third consecutive year.

Lady Tigers lose in season opener to Friends

By Eric Hodson

Assistant sports editor

Head Coach John Klein knew his team was in for a tough battle as it traveled to Wichita Saturday to play Friends University.

Friends came out on top, defeating the Lady Tigers 79-62 in the non-conference NAIA contest.

"It was our first game and it was on the road. It was tough going into something like that," Klein said.

Pre-game jitters and inexperienced young players hindered the Lady Tigers early on in the contest.

"We were a little nervous, and that was to be expected, especially with so many of our younger players coming off the bench to play," Klein said.

The Lady Falcons jumped out to a 40-26 halftime lead and never looked back.

After the halftime break, the Lady Tigers played close to even, as Friends outscored them 39-36 in the second half.

"I was pleased with the way we played hard. The potential is there," Klein said.

The Lady Falcons were 34.72 from the field for 47 percent. The Lady Tigers were 24-62 for 38 percent from the field.

Friends shot better from the charity stripe, putting in 11-14 for 79 percent. The Lady Tigers were 14-21 for 67 percent.

Leading scorers in the game for the Lady Tigers were Julie Kizzar and Chris Biser, each with 14 points. Tara Nelson was the only other Lady Tiger in double figures with 10 points and four rebounds.

Penny Fischer led the Lady Tigers in rebounding, pulling down nine inside the paint and adding eight points.

As the year progresses, Klein said that his team should only get better with each game his players see action in.

"We are looking at these kids as getting nothing but better as the season goes on. We just ran into a tough team," Klein said.

Other sports that need to decide a winner before the Christmas break are men's racquetball, co-ed volleyball, men's indoor soccer, men's volleyball, women's volleyball, Sunday night basketball, racquetball doubles and co-ed racquetball.

For the officiating, Moeckel uses students in his Techniques of Officiating class.

"That's a tough job to rule against your peers. Win or lose, the teams think that the end result was a crucial call," Moeckel said.

Congratulations to Bill Schuvie, winner of the final FHSU-U-CALL-IT of the 1987 season.

The Leader would also like to thank the Redcoats for its sponsorship of FHSU-U-CALL-IT.

Hunting fan appreciates opening day

This column is for all you outdoorsmen.

With the departure of Halloween and arrival of cold weather comes pheasant season.

Nov. 14 marked the opening of the season.

For some less-than-avid hunters, this was a time to blow the dust off of your old Remington or Winchester shotgun and to look for that half-full box of shells left over from last year.

Then there is the hunter who has been getting ready for the season two months in advance.

This is the type of guy who is decked out in all of the latest hunting gear, has a $500 shotgun and makes sure that he has at least 50 different milo and corn stubble fields lined up to hunt in.

Well, I know exactly what category I fit in -- I don't even own my own gun.

As far as the latest hunting gear goes, I usually wear an old pair of Levi 501s, a warm sweatshirt and my lucky Denver Broncos hat.

My dad is the one who lines up the hunting spots for our group of salvage outdoorsmen.

So the season finally arrives, and my dad's old high school buddy makes the trip from the big city of Denver to the pheasant capital of the world: Burlington, Colo.

Along with Lester (I'll call him that for the story's sake) comes his son and son-in-law.

Now our little posse is complete. All I am lacking now is a firearm. That's where my big brother steps into the picture. He is so glad to see me home from college, he lets me borrow his gun.

I thought, this can't be the same brother that used to chew my butt when I wore one of his shirts or a pair of shoes. Nevertheless, I wasn't about to argue with his new-found graciousness.

Dad informed all of us that we would be moving out around 6 a.m. Around 7:30 we finally sat down at the breakfast table and all pretty much agreed that no pheasant was worth getting up so early for.

After getting the little things out of the way (licenses, shells and refreshments), we proceeded to go scare some birds. I say scare because that is all we usually do.

As luck would have it, the first two pheasants flew right up in front of me. After I aimed and fired twice, they were still flying.

Dead-eye Lester didn't let them go. He drew his old single-shot and brought one back down to earth, so to speak.

Our first bird of the day. As far as most of us were concerned, our weekend was worthwhile; we had proof of our excursion.

As the day went on, we managed a few more birds, two dead cans and a couple of wounded turmps.

You see, when we stop seeing pheasants we start shooting anything we can find lying around on the ground.

The fields we walked through were tough to navigate, but the hardest thing about hunting with this group was trying to concentrate with Lester continually cutting up.

This is the type of guy that always has a joke to tell, a quick one-liner or a facial expression that will draw a smile or laugh from everyone around, no matter how bad the hunting is.

Being the avid hunters we are, we decided to call it quits about 3 p.m. and head back for town.

After cleaning our massive number of three pheasants, we could almost call it a day.

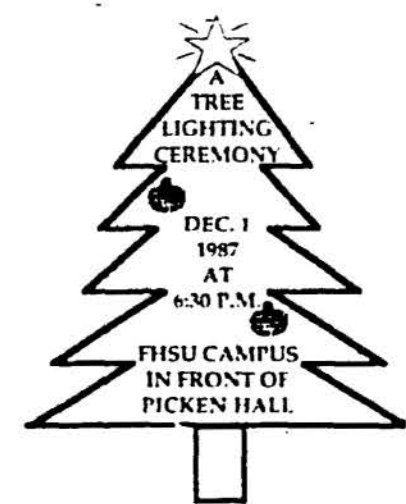

The best part of the entire day is the supper.

This is when we go out for prime-rib or steak at the same place every year and talk about all the shots we missed and birds we should have bagged.

We weren't too terribly concerned about how many pheasants we brought home, but, more importantly, that we all had a good time.

This was a time for all of us to get away from the pressures of college, hospital work, and everyday life.

For all involved it was a successful weekend. So to Bill, Lester, Rob, Leroy and Roger: see you next year.
