Hammond helps dedicate AT&T computer terminals

By MADELINE HOLLER
Staff Writer

AT&T became more than just a household name yesterday for the residences of McMindes Hall.

It became a part of the household as three AT&T 44 10 terminals were dedicated at a ceremony Tuesday in McMindes.

Fort Hays State President Edward Hammond cut the banner of computer paper officially marking the first step in making the residence halls computer accessible.

"This is the first mini-lab of a series in this building and throughout our residence hall system," Hammond said.

Hammond demonstrated the various uses of the terminals, such as the Writer's Workbench, the computer assisted instruction for the English department.

Another use includes the Top-Cat program, the university library card catalog on electronic data base.

The terminals can also access various administrative services such as sending messages electronically.

"The beauty of the system is that it can be accessed anywhere on campus. In my home, in my office or even here (McMindes)," he said.

He said that the next steps will be to install mini-labs throughout McMindes hall, as well as the two other residence halls.

"There will be one lab on each of the floors here, but in West there will be a bigger facility on every other floor."

"In Agnew, there will be one large facility," Hammond said.

Hammond said that the variation in the structures of the mini-labs is an experiment to see how the students can best use the terminals.

"We're going to try and see which configuration works best and make some changes from there," he said.

Hammond said that the mini-labs will only be accessible by those who live in the particular residence hall.

"These mini-labs are restricted for residents and residents only."

"They are not open to the general public or other students," he said.

The terminals will also be

Cole tells SGA of library plight

By DAVID BURKE
Managing Editor

Forsyth Library Director Karen Cole told of the "best of times and the worst of times" of the library during last night's Student Government Association meeting.

"We're probably in the best of times and the worst of times," Cole said. "And they may be worse than we thought."

Cole said that the efforts of SGA and other groups were needed.

"I've been somewhat distraught that we don't have the support for this," Cole said. "We need some more student support."

Cole, who took over as library director in February, said that although new computer equipment has been beneficial to the library, funds are still needed for operating expenses.

She presented SGA with a budget for fiscal year 1989. The proposed budget for Forsyth in FY '89 is $452,438. This year's budget is $310,338.

"That's a pretty modest budget for '89," Cole said. "But it's much more than the 4 percent that may be coming down from the university."

The line for books in the FY '89 budget is $100,000, compared to $19,586 for FY '88.

"The average book is $30 to $35, so we can only order 3,000 books," Cole said. "Previously we had bought 5,000 to 8,000 books per year."

Cole said that 3,000-book amount was relatively small.

"There are 30,000 to 40,000 books published per year, so that's only about 10 percent of

Computerization eases enrollment

By LISA STORER
Staff Writer

Computerization has arrived at Fort Hays State.

Students who have already pre-enrolled for the 1988-89 fall semester have witnessed the change.

Pre-enrollment has been made faster and easier with the use of on-line registration and computer terminals for early enrollment.

The five computer terminals, located in the pre-enrollment center on the second floor of the Memorial Union, are hooked up to the mainframe computer system in Martin Allen Hall.

This allows pre-enrollment staff to enter line items into the terminal and receive an immediate response as to whether the class section the student wishes to enroll in is already closed, or is still open.

If the class section has been closed, a listing of the other sections of the desired class and times that the sections are offered appears on the screen.

Upon finishing pre-enrollment, students are handed a computer printout of their class schedule.

Another copy of the student's schedule is included in their package for final enrollment next fall.

According to James Kellerman, registrar and director of admissions, FHSU has been investigating on-line systems for some time.

"We started developing on-line systems about a year and a half ago,"

According to Kellerman, there were very few computer terminals on campus in 1983.

"The registrar's office had one, and we shared two other terminals for about 50 days during the year," Kellerman said.

"We were thinking at that time about on-line transcripts as opposed to on-line registration. Because of limited terminals, we chose on-line transcripts first."

Before, transcripts were run out in hard copy, or the student's file was pulled, and a photocopy was made.

Now, by entering the student's name and other information, a copy of the student's transcript can be printed out in minutes.

"In developing the on-line systems, we visited Kansas State, Central State in Warrensburg, Mo., Wichita State, University of Kansas, Pittsburg State, and Missouri State in Joplin," said Kellerman.

"We looked at both on-line enrollment and transcripts. Most had both, except KU. They just had on-line registration."

The programming for the on-line system was created by the computer staff in Martin Allen.

"We are very appreciative of their excellent work," said Kellerman. "They are very cooperative in working with our office."

Several advantages are credited to the new system.

First, students leave the enrollment center with a copy of their class schedule.

Second, the new system eliminates hours of work preparing hundreds of course cards and transporting them to and from the pre-enrollment center.

Third, with the new on-line registration, departments are able to access the number enrolled in each course through their own terminal at any time.

Finally, the new system has proven much faster for pre-enrollment. This depends upon how much work the mainframe in Martin Allen is handling at that time. Also, if the computer goes down during the enrollment process, everything would come to a halt.

Nadine Thomasson, an enrollment worker, said that the enrollment staff has heard positive comments about the new system.

"The students love it. They say it's so much faster than pulling cards. People haven't had to wait long. It takes only two to three minutes and they're out," Thomasson said.

Although no major problems have occurred yet, Kellerman said some could be expected.

"I feel there will be some problems in the systems, but we'll work them out. As of right now, we haven't observed any, but as more students enroll, there might be a few."

Letters

Fox employees angered by theater critique

To the Editor,

In response to recent articles and reviews concerning "Broadcast News" by editors Kevin Krier, David Burke and David Newsom, we're really pleased to see that before you print a story, you get all the facts and know what you're talking about. (Well, two editors out of three isn't bad.)

One reviewed the movie and gave a good and honest critique about the show. Good going Burke, we also enjoyed the show and agree with what you said.

Another editor actually called the manager of the Fox Theater and got some facts as to why movies stay and go. Hats off to Krier for doing his homework before printing his article. Although he may prefer watching a movie in his own home, we still would much rather see it on the big screen and in Dolby Stereo for the same price that he could rent it. (Especially on Tuesday night.)

After working at the Fox Theatre for x-amount of years, we feel we know more about the movie industry than the average person. We're not sure what type of journalistic requirement is necessary to write an article but if an editor -- oh, let's just use David Newsom as an example -- criticizes a business or industry, he should have some idea as to what he's talking about.

Let's also take the article David Newsom wrote, "Hays citizens treated poorly by Fox cinema," as an example. Just because one person, an editor, didn't get to see a movie, he can now speak for the entire community? Sorry, we must have been asleep when Newsom was crowned king.

According to Newsom's "law of physics" it states, "when you have a majority of students and faculty members going away for vacation, naturally your audiences are going to be a little bit smaller."

Oh, really?

Is that why in 1987 during spring break "Platoon" only had 1,814 people for its second week? And how about spring break 1986? "Critters" had a total of 601. But let's take this spring break, 1988. "Good Morning Vietnam," in its sixth week, had 650 while "Broadcast News" had 520. And even "Switching Channels," the movie that David Burke rated a D+, jumped up from its first week of 493 to 657, while "everybody was away - on vacation." (These figures were given to us by both the managers of the Fox Theatre and The Mall Cinema)

We could go on about summer breaks, Christmas breaks and so on, but we feel we made our point. We note that Newsom did read Burke's article, which stated, "although college students make up some of the potential audience, they weren't the primary source of customers."

We play movies for all types, kids, adults, high school and college. Spring break or Newsom's laws of physics doesn't mean a whole lot in the theater business.

Obviously, Newsom was bored, or perhaps he was rushed for a story by deadline. Whatever the case, he surely couldn't have written his article by pure journalistic experience. (Frankly, we don't see any connection between God creating the universe and the Fox Theatre playing a movie for a week.)

Again, we would like to say we enjoy reading your editorials. However, we feel that they should be more informative, with actual facts, rather than one person's childish gripe. (Especially if they're going to attack a business.)

MDA 'Beach Bowl' director says project was a success

To the Editor,

Students at Fort Hays State University have again demonstrated that you can have fun and help a very worthwhile cause too, by participating in the recent "Beach Bowl" bowling activity to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Campus organizations, clubs and groups formed teams to challenge each other in overall scores and fundraising totals.

Nearly $2,000 was pledged or donated through their efforts and MDA's thanks go to these students, faculty, event coordinators and sponsoring individuals.

Holiday policy questioned

To the Editor,

After stifling several impulses to write a "Letter to the Editor" commenting on all the hoopla raised over the rowdy behavior of students at a couple of the basketball games, I can resist no longer.

I ask you, what the hell do you expect from students attending a university that dismisses classes for Oktoberfest and takes no time off for Easter?

Boogy Bunny scars Easter memories

Easter is just around the corner, and the Boogy Bunny is watching you.

The Boogy Bunny is just the opposite of the Easter Bunny. The Boogy Bunny visits little boys and girls who have been bad throughout the year. He is a descendant from the Boogy Man, whom we all know lurks after the misbehaved children of the world.

Instead of delivering eggs, chocolate candy and other goodies in a brightly colored Easter basket, the Boogy Bunny delivers rocks, nails, and chunks of coal in an old coffee can.

My parents always used the Boogy Bunny to their advantage. It was similar to the threats of Santa Claus not coming for Christmas if you didn't behave properly.

In the few months preceding Easter, I was threatened by my parents: "Sammi, if you don't behave, the Boogy Bunny is going to come and leave you rocks instead of candy."

Believe it or not, when I was four years old, the Boogy Bunny came to my house.

My parents were both school teachers and were busy with school activities. Obviously, my mother must have been particularly preoccupied, because she forgot all about the Easter Bunny and the treats he was supposed to deliver.

That night, as my sister and I went to bed early in anticipation of the visit from the Easter Bunny, it dawned on my mother that she had overlooked Easter and her duties as the Easter Bunny.

The next morning when I found the treats in the kitchen, I was very disappointed. As I peered over the counter, I just couldn't believe it. The treats were limited to a few homemade frosting bunnies on a cookie sheet.

What a rip-off, I thought. What was this, some kind of joke? Those bunnies made out of frosting were a poor substitute for an Easter basket filled with green grass and mouth-watering treats.

And then I saw it! Lying next to those insignificant treats was a note.

"Sammi, you have not been a very good girl this year, so I have left you something on the back porch."

It was signed, "The Boogy Bunny."

I was not about to go see what he had left. But with persuasion from my father, I reluctantly went to the back porch to see what was in store for me.

There I found an old rusty Folger's can filled with dirty rocks, nails, coal and a few old shingles.

I was completely crushed. I didn't understand how such an innocent, faultless, perfect child, such as myself, could ever deserve such treatment!

I was convinced that the Boogy Bunny had mistaken me for some ornery, misbehaved child.

I couldn't believe that the Boogy Bunny really had come. I was heartbroken and devastated. My mother tried to console me, but it was to no avail.

Years later, I found out that it was my father's idea for the Boogy Bunny to come. It was an Easter that will always be remembered humorously by the rest of my family.

As for me, I was scarred forever.

So, this is just a warning for all of you who are not behaving. Watch out! The Boogy Bunny is watching you.

April Fools' Day anecdotes are perfect tales for 1988

Yes, today is one of my favorite days.

No, I don't mean Good Friday - although the prospects of Easter, not to mention those sugar-coated, marshmallow bunnies, is extremely tempting -- I mean April Fools' Day.

It's true, most of us have outgrown more of the standard pranks. You know, where you find out your shoelace is untied or there's a spot on your shirt. Those went out the window in fifth grade.

Some of us in the office the other night fell for a story about the resignation of a university official, but we won't talk about that one.

Yet, there are still some phrases that can be put to use effectively for April 1, 1988.

So here goes: A few phrases you can carefully slip into the conversation today. Just say you read it in the paper. Your honesty will be protected, and you can watch the fun begin.

• "Wow, too bad about George Bush dropping out of the race. He said he was just riding on Reagan's coattails, and if he couldn't get the nomination on his own merit, he didn't want it."

• "Gee, Danny Manning quitting the Jayhawks just before the Final Four. Didn't you hear him say on the news the other night that he didn't think KU deserved to go for the championship?"

• "Can you believe it? The Assembly of God letting Jimmy Swaggart back in the ministry? They said they haven't gotten this much publicity in years."

• "Did you hear the latest step in President Hammond's plans? After there's a computer in every residence hall room, then there will be a butler, maid and chef in every room."

• "Look at all these celebrity romances! Don Johnson is dating Barbra Streisand. Brigitte Nielsen is engaged to the New York Jets' Mark Gastineau. Sylvester Stallone is together with socialite Cornelia Guest and Rob Lowe is going out with Fawn Hall."

Wait a minute. That one's true.

Sad, but true.

• "Too bad -- Grand Canyon

State was academically ineligible and had to forfeit their NAIA games. That means Fort Hays State is automatically given the national championship."

• "Oh, that Bob Dole. He just said he was dropping out of the presidential race as a joke. Whatta card."

• "Congratulations! I just read that there's been another step in the university reorganization -- and you are going to become a new vice president!"

• "Wow! Police Academy 5: Assignment Miami Beach! nominated for all those Oscars!"

• "It's going to be tough choosing a presidential candidate. They all seem like such presidential timber."

• "Well, you did it, didn't you. It says right here in the paper that they caught you cheating on that test (for your income taxes for a non-student)."

• "Gawd! Burke wrote a column that didn't even mention condoms. David Letterman or 1960s TV reruns." Again, sad but true.

DOUG CARDER

Reagan's foreign policy fires blanks at opposition

It's time for the United States to stop playing world cop.

I guess President Ronald Reagan didn't learn his lesson in Beirut in 1983, when 241 U.S. Marines were killed.

I guess he didn't learn his lesson in the Persian Gulf in 1987, when 37 members of the U.S.S. Stark were killed.

In both cases, American forces were deployed without permission to fight -- unless their own lives were threatened.

If our forces aren't allowed to fight back, what good are they? Supporters of Reagan's policies will argue that the goal in Beirut was to keep peace.

It's a rather complicated situation. However, one fact is clear -- a civil war is no place for a peace keeping force that doesn't have the ability to fight back.

In the Persian Gulf, our mission was to make sure that the flow of oil to the free world was protected from Iranian attack.

Fifty percent of the free world's oil is transported out of the Persian Gulf. Only five percent of that oil goes to the United States.

Why don't western Europe countries or Japan stick their necks on the line to protect their oil?

The problem with the Persian Gulf is the strait that all of the tankers must pass through to exit the gulf is only 50 miles wide.

Never mind that it is too small for a U.S. aircraft carrier to operate effectively -- making an air strike ineffective.

Meanwhile, the Iranians have several missile stations set up on their side of the strait, within easy striking distance of any point in the gulf.

U.S. intelligence sources say that those missile sites are armed with silk worm missiles from China and American hawk anti-aircraft missiles.

Possibly the same weapons that Oliver North and his cronies traded to Iran for hostages (through Israel)."

Some patriot.

On the chance that U.S. troops are involved in a battle with Iran in the Persian Gulf, they can now look forward to being shot at by their own missiles.

However, what is ironic about the Persian Gulf is that the U.S.S. Stark was not attacked by Iran, but by Iraq -- one of the countries we were supposed to be protecting.

Iraq said it was an accident.

Tell that to the families of the 37 dead seamen.

Now, we find ourselves involved in another conflict -- this time in Honduras.

Just a few days after the U.S. Congress rejected further military aid to the Contras, the Sandinista forces of Nicaragua crossed the Honduras border in an armed offensive designed to wipe out key Contra supply dumps.

Is this just a coincidence or incredibly stupid planning by

Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega?

In either case, Reagan's proposal, that the Contras could not survive without United States support, gained more credibility.

The U.S. responded to Honduras' plea for help with an "emergency deployment" of 3,150 troops to Honduras for military exercises in an effort to flex our muscles.

Remember, these were noncombat troops that were supposed to take part in exercises 125 miles from the front line.

Upon arrival, however, the troops were told ~~that~~ the exercises would be moved to within 60 miles of the battle zone.

Eventually, U.S. forces helped ferry Honduras troops by helicopter to the front line.

Reagan got off lucky this time.

If one of our helicopters would have been shot down, while ferrying troops into the battle zone, more troops could have been added to the death toll.

Again, in a supposedly noncombat situation.

Let's stop sending troops into hostile situations with unloaded guns.

It seems like every time the United States tries to play cop in a potentially explosive zone of the world, our soldiers die -- Congress screams "Another Vietnam" -- and we pack up and move on to the next conflict.

ASK meeting to set goals

By DAVID BURKE
Managing Editor

Twenty-five student representatives of the six Regents universities will come to Fort Hays State this weekend for an Associated Students of Kansas policy board meeting.

According to ASK campus representative Lance DeMond, the policy board sets priorities for lobbying in the state senate now and during the upcoming school year.

"We're going to discuss the present legislation that's in the house and senate right now," DeMond said. "And get our game plan set for next year."

The two major points of discussion are going to be voter registration and the Margin of Excellence proposal.

"The big one is going to be the voter registration drive on campus," DeMond said. "This is a big election year for representatives and senators, plus the presidential elections and other elections."

"We need more voter registration on campus to give us any kind of lobbying respect," DeMond said.

DeMond said that if more students show they are concerned enough to vote, then state representatives and senators will take more of an interest in student issues.

"There's more pressure there to vote on the issues we're concerned with," DeMond said. "The representatives can listen to the students more, and pay us a little more respect."

DeMond said that a voter registration drive may take place during enrollment in the fall.

The other major concern of the ASK policy board is continued pushing for the approval of the Margin of Excellence plan.

In its first reading, a request of $37.50 was made by the Astronomy Club to visit the Omnisphere and Lake Afton Observatory in Wichita.

SGA President Kevin Amack announced that Erik Schmeller, Hays sophomore, and Denise Brummer, Beloit junior, were appointed to the search committee for a vice president for student affairs.

In addition, Mary Schill, Newton sophomore, will be on the search committee for a dean of the new school of health and life sciences.

Jane Costigan, Hays senior and member of the student

Director Jeannine Byers, 2529 16th, Great Bend, KS. 67530, or call (316) 793-8078.

Deadline for entry is April 16th, 1988.

Byers said the opportunity will benefit those who participate by building self confidence and meeting other individuals who compete.

Junior and senior queen candidates will be judged on personal grooming, personal interview and presentation, horsemanship pattern, queen presentation rides and horse grooming.

Costigan suggested hand-delivering the letters to Hammond's office.

David Herl, Collyer senior and chairman of the student affairs committee, submitted drafts of a survey to be presented to students.

The issues concerned include cultural enhancement, the Margin of Excellence, Forsyth Library, student apathy and campus facilities and equipment.

restricted only for those who are presently taking a Writer's Workbench course, according to Mike Ediger, McMinder Hall director.

"Only those with the access codes who are in a Writer's Workbench course will be able to access these terminals," Ediger said.

He said that they were still unsure of how the computers will be supervised and serviced and when the room would be open.

"Ideally, we'd like to leave the rooms open for the residents to use around the clock, with any service such as installing paper being done by our desk staff," he said.

"But before we just open the computers for general use, we need to get our staff oriented with the terminals."

"Up to now, they've been getting the finer details worked out without actually running the computers," Ediger said.

"We'll just try it out and see how it works and make the rules as we go along. Then we will see what is going to work out most efficiently," he said.

Ediger said that the residence halls will benefit from the mini-labs also.

"The terminals will be a drawing card for new residents and they are a possible incentive for present residents to stay," he said.

The mini-labs may also provide an opportunity for increased summer residency.

"We are entering into a contract with the U.S. Soil Conservation Service to train all of their staff since they will be computerizing their offices," Hammond said.

"We'll be bringing their staff into our campus to live in the residence halls and to be trained this summer."

"A number of other facilities and federal and state agencies have shown interest in training their staffs as well," he said.

Hammond added that summer computer camps are another possible use for the terminals.

"A year from now we are looking into the possibility of summer computer camps for entire families," he said.

"Children, as well as their parents, can come here, live in the residence halls and develop their computer skills," he said.

Algebra students must pass new exam

By LISA STORER
Staff Writer

The math department here at Fort Hays State has made some changes.

Students wishing to enroll in College Algebra, Math 110 must have permission to take the class.

There are three ways to obtain permission for enrollment.

First, students may show evidence that they have passed a placement test.

The test must not have been taken earlier than the previous regular semester.

Second, if a student is currently enrolled in Basic Algebra and has a passing grade at midterm, they may pre-enroll in a college algebra course.

The student must take verification with them when they pre-enroll.

The student must also pass basic algebra with a C or better or pass the placement exam to finalize their enrollment in college algebra.

Third, students who have received a grade of C or above in basic algebra or who have an ACT score of 30 percent or above national percentile in addition to completing one and one-half semesters of high school algebra may get a waiver from the math office.

The test is computerized and will be administered in the computer lab, Rarick 324. Students may take the exam on a walk-in basis any Tuesday until April 12. The lab is open from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. on those days.

Each exam takes approximately 40 minutes.

According to Ellen Veed, chairman of the math department, students need to take the placement test before they pre-enroll.

"We had been giving the placement test on the first day of classes, and then it took another day to give it back. We had lost almost a week of classes. This way students know what class, basic or college algebra, to pre-enroll in."

Yost, Eason found guilty of disorderly conduct

FHSU students convicted

By KARIN HARTMAN
Staff Writer

Two Fort Hays State students were convicted on charges of disorderly conduct, stemming from an altercation that occurred outside the Home Inc., Jan. 14.

Greg Yost, Hays freshman, was convicted of charges brought against him by the City of Hays, Tuesday.

Yost and Edgar Eason, Tuscaloosa, Ala. junior, had a disagreement in the bar.

When the employees of the Home believed there was the possibility for violence, Yost and Eason were physically Bar attendant Edward Fa'agal said the two started to fight outside the bar after they had been removed.

"When Yost and Eason started to throw punches, I went outside to separate the two," Fa'agal said.

Fa'agal also said both of the accused had the chance to leave the bar and go home. Instead, the two stayed and proceeded to fight.

After they were separated, Eason and one of Yost's friends began another altercation. By this time, the police arrived and arrested Yost, while Eason escaped.

Eason was arrested one week later and charged with disorderly conduct.

Attempts to contact Eason were unsuccessful, while Yost did not specifically comment on the matter.

Yost represented himself at the trial. Yost said he was merely defending some friends from Eason's rude comments, and that's how the disagreement began.

Tom Toepfer, prosecuting attorney, convinced Judge Gene Anderson that Yost was guilty of both charges by pointing out Fa'agal's testimony.

"I think that I should point out that Yost did have the chance to leave and not fight, and that this altercation was not a plight of self defense on his part," said Toepfer.

"I think it's obvious from the officer's testimony that Yost is guilty of resisting arrest because of all the officer's assistance that was needed to handcuff him and put him into the car," Toepfer said.

Judge Anderson found Yost and Eason guilty and fined them accordingly.

Sebastian Klier finds one of the candy eggs the Easter Bunny hid among the books at the Hays Public Library, 1205 Main St., Tuesday evening. Sebastian, 4, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Klier, professor of history, at Fort Hays State.

Dole drops out

Local experts say senator couldn't overwhelm Bush

By KEVIN KRIER
Editor in Chief

After winning the opening primary in the state of Iowa, the presidential hopes of Kansas Republican senator Bob Dole were at an all-time high.

But, a lopsided loss to George Bush in New Hampshire sent Dole's campaign on a downward spiral that ended Tuesday afternoon with his withdrawal from the presidential sweepstakes.

Dole started his candidacy on the bright note with a win in Iowa. He benefitted from his farm roots in the neighboring state of Kansas. His win left Bush in third place and apparently in big trouble heading into New Hampshire.

But, Bush rallied to post a big win in New Hampshire that started the beginning of the end for Dole.

Dole's campaign strategy of relying on a surge in his popularity after the Iowa win backfired and catapulted Bush to the top.

"When Bush won everything, it just wiped out Dole."

— Richard Heil, associate professor of political science

According to an Associated Press wire story that appeared in Wednesday's Hays Daily News, Dole withdrew before a supportive audience of Senate and House colleagues and offered his congratulations to the apparent Republican presidential nominee -- Bush.

"My friends know that I am a fighter, I don't like to lose," Dole said. "I have been beaten before, and no doubt will be again. But I have never been defeated and never will be."

Richard Heil, an associate professor of political science, said that Bush just had too many advantages for Dole to combat.

"Bush had the advantage of being Ronald Reagan's vice-president and heir apparent and there are a lot of advantages that go with that," Heil said. "Plus, Dole didn't win New Hampshire. If he had won there, then it's a whole different game."

"After Iowa, he had the momentum and had Bush on the ropes, he just couldn't put him away," Heil said.

Although Dole's announcement was expected for several days, the wide margin of defeats he suffered took Charles Wilhelm, professor of communications and a Republican delegate to the national convention, by surprise.

"I never realized just how much people on both coasts do not like people from the Midwest," Wilhelm said. "I think they have some kind of Dorothy-Toto ignorant image of us out here. The magnitude of Dole's rejection is what really surprised me."

Another major factor in the Dole loss was the sweep on Super Tuesday by Bush.

Dole failed to win even a single state, but Heil said it may have been difficult for Dole to rebound even if he had won three or four states.

"When Bush won everything, it just wiped out Dole," Heil said. "Everyone said how Iowa determined the winner but look at it this year."

"Gephardt (Missouri Democrat Richard) and Dole won Iowa this year," Heil said. "So much for Iowa. Remember that in four years, Iowa doesn't mean that much anymore. At least their winners didn't make it very far."

Wilhelm said he believed Dole had a chance based on his image and how the American people support the hard-working candidate.

"Everyone seems to have this image of supporting a guy that has worked his way up from nothing into a position of great respect, which is what Dole has done," Wilhelm said.

"Yet, when they're given a choice between the hard working street-fighter type that has risen to the top and a pampered rich-kid that Bush, at least to me, appears to be, they go against the hard worker."

"It's almost like a backlash against the values I really enjoy, like honesty and hard work, and all of the things we work for," Wilhelm said. "They're swapping those in for a silver-tongued devil. Bush represents the smooth-talking eastern establishment."

Both Heil and Wilhelm believe Bush has an excellent chance in November to become the next president.

"Bush has a very good chance. He's the favorite," Heil said. "I saw a poll a couple of weeks ago, before the Michigan primary, that rated Bush-Dukakis even. But, things can change in a hurry. If I were a betting man, I'd pick Bush right now."

Wilhelm also believes Bush has an excellent chance in November to gain the White House, but he does have a few problems to overcome.

"Bush is probably a very nice guy but he doesn't seem to be a proven product. Dole has a record, people know where he stands on issues while Bush is a resume."

Wilhelm also has another reason for supporting Dole throughout the race.

"For those of us who know him and know he really cares, it hurts."

— Charles Wilhelm,
Dole delegate

"Bob Dole has done things for Fort Hays State. For those of us who know him and know he really cares, it hurts," Wilhelm said. "It's almost like having a guy that's a friend of yours that other people don't like. And, personally, I can't understand why people don't like my friend."

But party loyalty, at least for Wilhelm, is an important reason to support Bush.

"I'm a Republican and I'll stand by him," Wilhelm said. "But, I do think there are a lot of unanswered issues, particularly the Contra affair. The American people seem so willing to sweep that under the carpet and that just bothers me terribly."

Dole had been sending signals for days that he was ready to end his campaign to the inevitable numbers that signaled his loss.

"One thing you learn how to do pretty well in our business is to count," Dole said in his withdrawal announcement. "You come to trust your instincts to tell you when it's over, and in my heart I know the time is now."

The only two Republican nominees left are Pat Robertson, who has acknowledged defeat, and the all-but-nominated Bush.

what's published," Cole said. A line-item for binding of magazines and journals is $15,000.

"That's a small amount, since we are spending about $20,000 in binding," Cole said.

Cole said the cost to replace an average journal or magazine that would cost $1.25 is $5 to $10.

There's an inordinate number of magazines that are gone," she said.

Another problem is the lack of staff. Forsyth has six full-time staff members. Cole said Emporia State University has nine staff members and Pittsburg State University has 11 full-time staff.

"Even if we do get an influx of money, we don't have the staff to process the materials through," Cole said.

Cole said that if the students do not act to save the library, they will be the ones who will suffer.

"If academics and the library aren't working together, then you guys are being short-changed," Cole said.

In other business, the SGA approved a by-law revision that would add McMinder and West halls as polling places for the SGA elections April 13 and 14. Voting will be from 5 to 7 p.m.

in McMinder on Wednesday and West on Thursday at the same time.

"We came up with this idea as something to increase voter turnout this year," Mark Hammeke, election committee chairman, said. "The only feasible solution I can see at this point is to go to the dorms in the evenings."

The intent-to-run forms are due at 5 p.m. today in the SGA office.

The SGA unanimously approved a bill that would give the Collegiate 4-H $300.25 to attend a Collegiate 4-H conference in Brookings, S.D.

Lance DeMond, Associated Students of Kansas campus representative, said that a site for the health and life sciences building was selected by the facilities planning committee at its meeting yesterday.

The site for the building is the tennis courts south of Forsyth Library. The estimated cost of the health and life sciences building is $10 million.

Bill Jellison, vice president of student affairs, said "It'll be about a time and a half as big as Albertson Hall, but that's preliminary planning."

Parking for the building would be added south of Plymouth School, DeMond said.

Summer students face hard time finding jobs

By MARVEL BALL
Staff Writer

Students attending summer school may have difficulty finding a job with fluctuating hours to fit their school schedule.

Federal work-study programs, available on campus, may help students work and attend classes without the added worry. Kathy Radke, administrator of financial aid, promotes an additional program each summer to help students find jobs on campus and earn work-study monies.

Radke has a list of all the departments that will receive work-study students for the summer and how many positions will be open.

The various types of jobs that are available are secretarial, custodial, housing annex maintenance, van drivers for the handicapped, campus switchboard, cafeteria help and other various jobs within the departments.

"I would encourage anyone who is interested to come in and apply," Radke said.

Students who are interested in applying for summer work-study should obtain a summer work request form from the financial aid office and complete it, requesting work study.

Students can also apply for supplemental grants with this form.

Some departments will not hire students in the area of their major because of the organizing of departmental tests, Radke said.

"I will try to place students on a first-come-first-serve basis," Radke said.

Students also need to obtain a certain number of hours of study in order to receive work

An undergraduate student must be enrolled in at least six hours during the summer session; a graduate student must be enrolled in at least four hours; and a graduate assistant must be enrolled in at least three hours.

Students are allowed to work 20 hours a week or less during the session and are paid $3.35.

"I wish we could pay better, but that's all the government will allow us," Radke said.

Students who are currently on work-study and are interested in working this summer should return a request to the office as soon as possible. These students will be the first considered for the job they are presently holding.

Radke would like to see the work-study program be a success this summer and to carry over into the fall.

"I hope that the students will take this job seriously and show up for work as they would for employment out in the world," Radke said.

Summer request forms can be picked up in the Financial Aid Office and should be filled out and returned as soon as possible so the forms can be processed.

Fear, desire inspire work

Fear and desire. Two different motivators with two different consequences.

These two facets of motivation were the key elements of a motivation workshop with James Costigan, chairman of the department of communication, Tuesday.

Costigan said that people are essentially motivated by one of two emotions, fear and desire.

"If you are here because you want to be here, then you've been motivated out of desire," Costigan said.

"If someone told you to be here, you've been motivated out of fear."

Costigan said that the chosen route towards motivation can have a great effect on the outcome of the event or situation.

"If you choose desire as your motivator, you will function in a way that is healthy and enriching," he said. "but fear simply makes you want to get out."

"I had a student who went to college because her parents had sent her."

"Her grade point average was 1.5 and she said that I would have to keep my eye on her," he said.

"But I told her that I couldn't make her do better, I could only stimulate her to do better. It was up to her to motivate herself and want to do it."

The student raised her grade point average to a 3.25.

Costigan said that motivation through desire works well for individuals, as well as companies and organizations.

"If a company wants top turnover rates, it won't scare the workers to death for increased production," he said.

"Instead, they use desire."

Costigan attributed the use of desire as a motivator to the success of the Japanese.

"The Japanese do so good because they are made a part of the company and aren't afraid," he said.

"American management is very much at ease, however, with cutting out the middle man or corporate takeovers. That often motivates workers through the fear of losing their jobs," he said.

Harriers to compete in Bethany invitational

By TIM PARKS
Staff Writer

Head Track Coach Jim Krob says he isn't too worried about how his team will compete tomorrow in the Swede Invitational.

Krob has been putting his squad through rigorous workouts since his team started outdoor track practice three weeks ago.

"We've been working the tar out of them, and they won't perform to their best until we give them a little rest," Krob said. "We also need to work on technique as we progress into the season. We still have an awful long way to go."

Krob said his team will do the best they can, but is gearing his team to compete well at the end of the season.

"We're training through these first few meets. The meet last week, this one and the one next week are not that important.

We'll compete, do the best we can, but we're training through them.

"May is the big month, and that's what we'll try to get ready for. That's when we'd really like to do well with most of our people. We have a ways to go yet before we'll be ready," Krob said.

Eleven teams are expected to compete in the meet. Among those are FHSU, Emporia State University and the home team from Bethany College.

Emporia State beat the Tiger men last Thursday, 89-73, in a dual meet. But the FHSU women returned the favor by defeating the Hornets by the score of 68-63.

"Obviously, Emporia State will be a tough team. The team scores should be interesting," Krob said.

Other teams expected to attend are Bethel College, Sterling College, Tabor College, McPherson College, Ottawa University, Langston University, Okla., Dodge City Community College and the throwers from Barton County Community College.

Field events will get underway at 10 a.m., with running events following at 11 a.m.

Krob said he plans to make the trip to Lindsborg with 44 athletes, but said that injuries may reduce the number of entries in the meet.

"Some of them are questionable, but I'll make a decision on those," Krob said.

Marlys Gwaltney and Jon Haselhorst, who were both triple winners last week in the dual meet at Russell, are expected to do well in their respective events.

Gwaltney won the 200- and 400-meter races and anchored the women's 400-meter relay.

Haselhorst won the high hurdles, 200-meter dash and was a member of the men's mile relay.

"We just need the competition now. As long as we are competing, we'll be all right," Krob said.

Tigers win pair from Cavaliers

By HEATHER ANDERSON
Assistant Sports Editor

After waiting nearly an hour for rain to subside in Dodge City yesterday, the Fort Hays State baseball team picked up two wins against St. Mary of the Plains.

The Tigers won the twin bill 15-10, 17-13 to advance their seasonal record to an even 6-6.

"Poor pitching on the their part and poor fielding on our part accounted for the high scoring," Gillispie said.

"They walked a lot of our players, and we just couldn't seem to get them out."

Rich Thompson and Tony Duka were cited as outstanding players in the first contest by Head Coach Steve Gillispie.

Thompson was three for four at the plate, accumulating five RBI's, while Duka connected on all four attempts for four RBI's and a home run.

Duka was a key player in the second contest, bringing back FHSU in the seventh inning with a grand slam home run.

"We were down 11-7 in the top of the seventh," Gillispie said.

"Duka came in and hit a beautiful grand slam, and then we just kept on scoring little by little."

Gillispie also complemented the pitching efforts of Jarrod Sanford in the nightcap.

"Overall, our pitching wasn't too good, but Sanford did a good job keeping us in the game as a relief pitcher."

"I thought it showed a lot of guts and determination to stay in the game and keep working for the win," Gillispie said.

Although the team is scheduled to compete today and tomorrow in Greeley, Colo., recent snow may delay the contests.

The University of Northern Colorado, an NCAA Division II school, is expected to provide tough competition for FHSU.

"I haven't heard much about them," Gillispie said, "but they played well when we've played them in the past."

If the UNC double header is postponed, the squad's next competition is Wednesday against Washburn in Topeka.

"Washburn is a little down from last year," Gillispie said.

"They've lost to some teams this season they shouldn't have, but when you play teams like Emporia or Washburn, there's usually a sense of rivalry involved."

Leslie only Tiger gymnast to meet

By TED HARBIN
Staff Writer

Carolanne Leslie will be competing in the NCAA division II national gymnastics meet tomorrow.

The Dix Hills, N.Y., freshman will be the only Fort Hays State gymnast competing in Springfield, Mass.

"She knows her stuff, that's going to really work for her," Head Coach Tawntia Augustine said.

Leslie goes into the tournament ranked 20th in the nation in the all-around competition.

"Her strongest event, scoring wise, is definitely the floor exercise," Augustine said.

Springfield is only three hours away from Dix Hills, so her family is expected to be there.

"I'm really excited because I think that I've gotten a lot better since they saw me perform last," Leslie said.

Being the only Tiger gymnast to make it this far, Leslie has been working out on her own.

"It's hard to be motivated when you are by yourself," Augustine said.

"It is more relaxing, mentally, because I have all of the attention.

"Physically, it's been hard being by myself," Leslie said.

Leslie said that this isn't the first time that she worked alone.

"Coming here (to Hays), I had to get used to the new coaches and new coaching styles."

"Back in New York, the club gymnastics was more independent, while this is more team oriented," she said.

Leslie also said that coming to Hays, and the small town atmosphere, was a lot different than that of Dix Hills.

"It shocked me the first time that somebody that I didn't know said 'Hi,'" Leslie said.

In practice, Augustine said that Leslie works on old routines and skills.

"She has worked hard all season coming back from her (ankle) injury. It took some time to work with the injury to this point," Augustine said.

Leslie said that some of her teammates have helped her prepare for nationals.

"Everybody has really been pulling for me. Some of them have come in and helped me," she said.

In this region, three teams are going to the national meet: Southeast Missouri State University, Texas Women's University and the University of Northern Colorado.

"I'm really pleased that she could get in as a freshman," Augustine said.

"I'm really excited, and I can't wait to get there and start going to work," Leslie said.
