Students to travel abroad

By BECKY OBORNY
Staff Writer

Ten Fort Hays State students will be broadening their horizons as participants in the National Student Exchange next year.

These students, beginning with the fall 1988 semester, will be studying at colleges in areas ranging from the U.S. Virgin Islands and Pennsylvania to California and Oregon.

Each student first found out about NSE from different sources.

Jamie Kelly, Larned freshman, and Vickie Schmitt, Tipton sophomore, were told about it by relatives.

Kelly's uncle, who is also her adviser, received a letter describing NSE and suggested she apply for it.

Schmitt's sister, on the other hand, was on exchange last year and told her all about the experience.

Chris Patterson, Wakefield junior, was informed about it by a friend who had previously gone on exchange.

Mary Dolenz, Lyons junior, and Patterson will both attend the College of Charleston, located in South Carolina.

Yet another source was found in high school by Cheri Simon, Morland sophomore.

"A teacher of mine had a daughter who was in it," Simon said.

The main reason students interviewed gave for choosing their particular college was to learn about the culture and the people of a different area of the United States.

"I guess just to experience a different part of the country, a different culture," Patterson said.

The students said the toughest thing they would probably have to face would be leaving their family and the friends they have made here.

"Probably just being a distance away from my family," Patterson said.

Simon agrees.

"The shock of being all alone. I think going away on my own will be a big, big change," she said.

"Not having any relatives or friends or anything."

But even tougher for Simon is leaving her fiancé.

Schreiber and Batchman win Rally course tough

Right at the first stop sign. Left or you'll get plugged. Right at the toughest mailbox on the block.

Sound like a maze?

It was for Eric Schreiber, Downs sophomore, and Robert Batchman, Lincoln sophomore, but one they successfully deciphered.

On April 30, Batchman and Schreiber won the $150 first prize at the West Hall 13th annual road rally.

The road rally is based on clues that lead its participants from checkpoint to checkpoint.

If they interpret the clues correctly, they find the checkpoint and are able to move onto the next clue.

However, if they interpret the clues incorrectly, they find themselves lost and confused.

"One time we went the wrong way down a one-way street," Batchman, the driver, said.

The event started at 2 p.m. with the first car leaving the West Hall parking lot. Every five minutes another car began the search.

Each checkpoint was marked by a vehicle with the word "checkpoint" scrawled on its window.

The contestants entered the rally for different reasons.

"I needed the money. I wanted to have some fun," Batchman said.

"It was an investment. A $15 investment," he said.

"Instead of putting it in stocks or bonds, I put it in the road rally, and it paid off."

For some of the winners this was the first rally they had been involved in.

"This was my first time, but the guy I was with had done it before and that helped," Batchman said.

This was the first rally that Lori Thielen, Sterling freshman, and Tom Mauch, Lindsborg junior, had participated in.

Thielen and Mauch won the $50 third prize.

June Helman, print shop employee, and Leslie Eickelberry, Hays Daily News, won the $75 second prize.

The time needed to complete the event varied greatly.

Batchman and Schreiber found the final checkpoint within two and a half hours.

Before the rally began Joel Moyer, Leoti junior, who was in charge of the event, said it would take anywhere between two and eight hours depending on how well the contestants could interpret the clues.

Batchman and Schreiber found the final checkpoint within two and a half hours.

Thielen and Mauch completed the course in four and a half hours.

The road rally attracted seven entries compared to eight last year.

Each car had a driver and a co-driver, who was in charge of reading the clues.

Batchman said he was surprised he won and enjoys the limelight he has received.

"This is my first claim to fame in Hays, Kan., and I'm kind of proud of it."

Survey produces surprises

By DAVID BURKE
Managing Editor

A Student Government Association survey of nearly 450 students brought some surprises for the people conducting the survey.

David Herl, SGA student affairs committee chairman, said that the surveys were distributed to various classes, at the Memorial Union and at the polling places for SGA elections.

The purpose of it was to give some kind of direction as to what we can work on in the upcoming year that will affect the students," Herl said.

Herl said that he was surprised by the response concerning awareness of SGA action of the year, including cultural enhancement, lobbying for the Margin of Excellence, the funding deficiency for Forsythe Library, fee increases for Student Health Center and athletics and appropriations and allocations for student groups.

According to the survey, 26 percent were aware of the lack of funding in Forsyth, ranging from 16 percent of respondents aware of the Margin of Excellence lobbying.

"It was good to see that they were aware of the library issue, and aware of senate's involvement in it," Herl, Collyer senior, said.

While being aware of SGA activities, only 4 percent of those surveyed deemed the organization's involvement with student concerns as excellent.

Forty-eight percent, however, rated the involvement as good, with 45 percent rating fair and 4 percent rating poor.

Respondents were asked to rank, in order, the issues they wanted to see SGA work on in the following year. They responded:

- No. 1. Tuition increases;
- No. 2. Student fee increases;
- No. 3. Financial aid cuts;
- No. 4. Underfunding of library;
- No. 5. Governmental support of higher education;
- No. 6. Student apathy;
- No. 7. Cultural enhancement;
- No. 8. Faculty turnover; and
- No. 9. Equipment improvements.

Sixty-five percent of those questioned by the survey said they felt four hours of physical education was not too much. Of the total respondents, the range of required physical education hours was anywhere from two to six.

By a narrow margin, 51 percent of those responding said they did not approve of a substitution of an hour of cultural enhancement for one of the physical education credits.

In the final question, students responding were asked to grade, from A to C, elements of Fort Hays State.

The highest grade given to any of the elements was a C, given to faculty overall, faculty in your department, campus facilities (Student Health, bookstore and cafeteria) and FHSU administration.

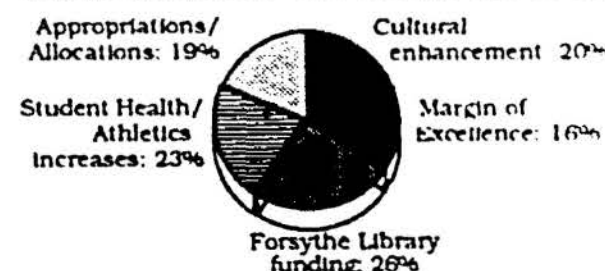

Grades of C minus were given to the student advisory system and equipment used in your department, and a grade of D was given for career participation.

"I think a lot of those need to be taken with a grain of salt," Herl said. "I had not necessarily expected the opinion taken by any means concerning faculty or administration."

While not gaining official results, Herl said the survey gave SGA an idea of where to plan for next year.

"It wasn't a professional or scientific survey," Herl said. "That wasn't our goal. We just wanted to see where we should get started."

Awareness of SGA actions

Giamatti sends forth bad signal in ruling

Bartlett A. Giamatti has a strange sense of the word justice.

The National League President handed down one of the severest penalties in recent years yesterday afternoon when he suspended Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose for 30 days.

The incident occurred Saturday night during the Reds-New York Mets game at Riverfront Stadium. First base umpire Dave Pallone made a delayed safe call at first base, and, as a result, the winning run scored for the Mets.

Rose came out and argued heatedly, but was provoked into a shoving match when Pallone jabbed his finger at Rose's face. After the contact, Rose shoved Pallone and a wild scene erupted at Riverfront Stadium.

As a consequence, Rose was suspended yesterday but umpire Pallone managed to escape scott-free.

It was undoubtedly Pallone that started the ugly scene with his actions. I can see Rose being suspended for five games but Pallone deserves the same penalty, if not worse.

After all, Pallone is accountable for his actions. Rose admitted that his delayed call cost them the chance to win the game. He said he would have had no problem if Pallone would just have made a call immediately, thus giving his first baseman a chance to react.

Rose admitted his mistake and said it was wrong for him to push Pallone. The umpire should act accordingly and admit his wrongdoing and therefore be suspended for an equal amount of time.

Make Forsyth No. 1

Fort Hays State President Edward Hammond had a list ready for FHSU faculty during their meeting Friday afternoon.

Hammond's "Top Five" contained his priorities for the upcoming year. The priorities were:

1. A complete budget.
2. Improvement of faculty salaries.
3. Improvement of conditions at Forsyth Library.
4. Additional funding for admissions and student recruitment.
5. A more efficient use of operating money.

Hammond's top priority can be easily accomplished. Hammond wants a budget free of complications, hidden line items and hidden expenditures. That can easily be accomplished.

Hammond's second priority was already granted in part with his announcement of an 8.25 percent increase in faculty salaries, a raise more than previously expected. Thanks to strong testimony and lobbying in the legislature, it was completed.

Now, the next item on the list. Improving the conditions at the library should become Priority One.

The next item -- recruitment and admissions -- is an item needed on the list, true, but why would a prospective student want to come here when he or she sees the lack of materials at the library?

As for the fifth item, a more efficient use of money, what is more efficient than making sure the library is fine-tuned and in condition to run smoothly?

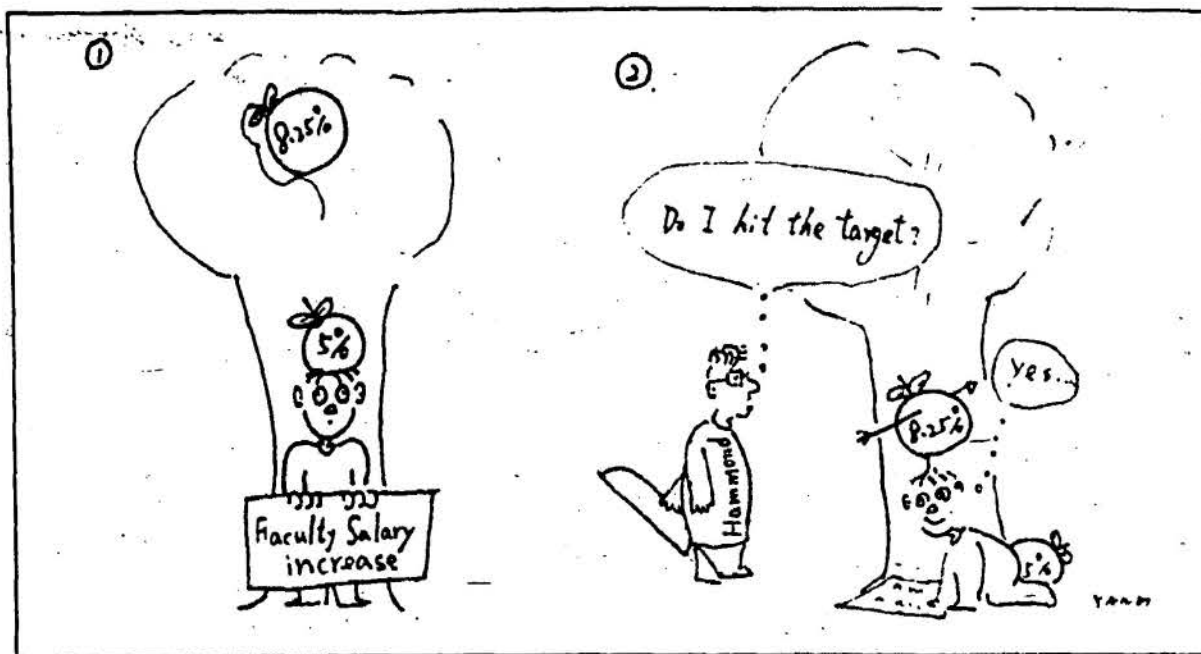

Since the first priority can be accomplished realistically and the second, in part, already has, it is time to make Forsyth Library Priority No. 1.

Hammond's list is a fine, well-planned one. But now that he can easily clear two hurdles, the biggest hurdle awaits. And once Hammond clears it, it would be the most gratifying.

T-Storms ignite thrill, help solve problems of the world

Singin' in the rain, just singin' in the rain...

Okay, okay, so I can't sing. And you won't find me dancing around campus, either, but nevertheless, I love rainy days.

How could I possibly love something so wet and gray and miserable as a rainy day, you ask?

I can't explain why, in exact words, but maybe I can describe it.

The storms that roll in during the spring and summer months give me a kind of thrill, a natural high.

Maybe it's some sort of primal instinct linked to an element of danger: it's like when you know something is going to happen and all your senses are primed to catch its first sign. You can feel the electricity in the air.

Yesterday morning, for example, I walked to my first class of the day as the storm started. Lightning flashed, thunder crackled, and the rain splashed down steadily.

I was getting soaked. I was running late, and it was Monday.

But I didn't mind. The energy of the storm was giving me a boost I couldn't get anywhere else.

And I recall observing many late summer night storms with all my senses -- the wind blowing against my face, the sweet smell of the approaching rain, the lightning flashing across the sky and the roll of distant thunder.

Contrary to popular belief, the greatest show on earth is the one provided by mother nature during a summer night's storm.

No laser can match her show of lightning arcing across the sky, illuminating the area in brilliant white or soft red.

No heavy metal band could match the magnitude of a thunderclap so close by that it's almost instantaneous with its lightning bolt -- so loud it rattles windows and walls.

She even provides air conditioning, free of charge, in cool breezes that carry away the heavy, humid air of the day.

What more could you want for your entertainment dollar?

But perhaps the best part of the storm is when it is over, and the world seems reborn.

The sky is clear and bright, birds are chirping and children are once again enjoying the outdoors.

But even as the rain cleans the physical surroundings, it also cleans the mind.

In the freshness of this new world, problems do not seem as bad as they once were.

In the fresh, clean and peaceful surroundings, it's hard to be depressed.

It is much easier to think when you sit outside after a storm surrounded by the new world with the sun warming your skin.

Many is the time I have solved a major problem by sitting outside after a storm, watching the people and animals enjoying the new day.

If only we could have this kind of weather every time we needed to solve a big problem.

As I'm writing this, I'm sitting by a window, watching the rain fall harder as people rush to their destinations under umbrellas, jackets, textbooks or whatever protection they can find.

But not me.

Finals cramming jams semester of learning into one solid week

Look out, it's time for finals, and everybody is trying to cram a whole semester of learning into a week of studying.

I know who most of you are. I saw you at the bars for Tuesday teasers, Wednesday quarter draws, thirsty Thursday and on the weekends as well.

I have heard rumors that the alcohol distributors in Hays are recording higher levels in profits. It must have been a fun semester.

It's been so fun that many of you will be taking the same classes next semester.

Now I want you to think back to the beginning of the semester when you got back from Christmas break.

Remember those mornings that your bed held you down and wouldn't let you go?

If you pried your way loose and got up, the cold weather forced you back in under the blankets.

You ended up skipping one, two or maybe all of your classes that day. But you didn't get out of bed with a hangover.

Of course, you didn't get out of bed until 1 p.m.

And then there was February. Unseasonably warm weather had us out at keg parties in shorts and tank-tops.

For some reason, people quit saying "it's too cold to go to class," and started saying "it's too nice to be stuck in class."

This was followed by a nice March, and the backyard keg parties continued.

Ah, spring break!

Almost everyone left Hays. Those who stayed in Kansas lasted through a nice wintery week.

Once everyone was back, you went to class just to see what everyone had done and to explain your adventures.

One week of going without skipping was enough to give you a headache, so you took a couple of sick days.

During that time, you enjoyed the chance of getting up around 11 a.m. and opening a beer. If you did go to class, you were slightly intoxicated while there.

April came and the idea of going to class left. You just got tired of going, so you washed your car or played basketball.

Golfers decided to sneak on the country club and play a few holes before getting kicked off.

I can see all of this happening this weekend. You'll say you have to study, but everyone else will have one more party before we all go home for the summer.

You are stuck between calculus and your friends.

The urge for a beer is tempting, but you know that if you don't study you will be enrolling in calculus again next semester.

But your friends prevail, and you go out for one last great time before finals.

While enjoying the party, you decide to have a chug race with your friends. Then you continue the feat for about an hour.

You are so intoxicated that you can't make it home without being carried.

It's Sunday, and you know you have to get up and study all day for your Monday finals, but you can't seem to open your eyes without getting nauseous.

Take it from me, the best way to get started studying again is to open a beer and crack the books.

You may throw up a couple of times before you relax, but you will feel better in the long run.

Continue this procedure for the rest of the day, and you will be prepared for your finals.

They always say it is easier to study for finals if you study in the same manner all semester.

Once finals are over and you leave for home, the stress of the past semester will leave. You will spend time either with your family or working.

Then comes August. You have spent many hours at work or are tired of spending that quality time with the family.

Everyone is smiling when they come back to campus, and they are ready for another semester of school.

What a change from those who are saying that they hate school and are ready to quit.

These will be the same people who enjoy buying their books and figuring out their class schedule.

MAX EULERT

Frustration from others riles writer

Frustration. It's the one emotion that riles me the most.

I know what you're thinking, but I'm not talking about sexual frustration. I've always managed to channel those energies into more productive pastimes, my own version of safe sex, I suppose.

My frustration is usually the result of other people's attitudes and behaviors.

For example, let's talk politics.

Oh no, you say, how boring.

Weeeeeeell... you're just the person I'm talking about. Living your lives as if politics won't affect you because you're a student, and you don't earn that much so tax changes don't really bother you.

This is my first semester back in school after sitting out six years. I've overheard enough conversations to know that the main topics discussed on campus are just trivial caca.

Here are some examples: "Did you hear who got a.) really drunk, b.) engaged, c.) arrested d.) married and e.) any or all of the afore mentioned?"

It really frustrates me to meet people whose biggest concern is what happens on yesterday's episode of "Days of Our Lives."

Why?

Because the indifference of the masses makes the work of the concerned that much more difficult. We live in a democracy. We are privileged in the fact that we can be involved in the world, around us.

We have the right to get directly involved in elections or join socially conscious organizations that help to improve this earth we live on. Groups like Amnesty International and Greenpeace.

Yet most of you ignore this fact. Apathy abounds. This frustrates me almost to the point of anger.

I've tried to figure out what makes a person so uncaring. I used to think it was a lack of education, but I know some people with degrees who are afflicted with this illness.

You should follow the political news with a zealous passion or at least a mild enthusiasm. Politics affect you every second with every breath you take, everywhere you go.

It's our government that makes the laws on environmental safety, on building codes, automobile safety, road improvements and drunk driving legislation. These are things you usually don't think about when you get into your car or walk into a building. I do.

The government also makes decisions concerning your education. How much financial aid you qualify for and/or how much funding your department in the university will get are just a couple of examples.

Our government officials don't just sit around thinking up things to make laws about. That's because they hear from concerned citizens.

Sure, we are deluged with politics from the media, but for good reason -- to keep us aware and to keep politicians on the ball. They have been known to go overboard with their law-making.

So as A. Whitney Brown would say, "What's the big picture?"

This is election year. It would be in everyone's best interest for you to get off your apathetic butts, pay attention to what is happening around you and the implications of those actions, register to vote, then do it.

Maybe you will even get steamed enough to send a letter to your congressman.

Wait, who am I kidding? You probably didn't even finish reading this column.

Students, faculty nominated

By DAVID BURKE
Managing Editor

Year-end nominations for the Pilot and Torch awards have been received by the Alumni Association.

Pilot Awards are given to one male and one female faculty member. Torch Awards are given to an outstanding senior man and woman.

Jan Johansen, acting director of the Alumni Association, said the number of nominations remains constant through the years.

"It's usually about the same every year," Johansen said. "We usually get about the same number turned in."

Sixteen men and five women were nominated by graduating seniors for the Pilot Award.

The men are Gerry Cox, professor of sociology; Clifford Edwards, English department chairman; Mark Giese, associate professor of health, physical education and recreation; Glenn Gunther, associate professor of industrial arts; Larry Gould, associate professor of political science; Mike Gould, agriculture department chairman; Robert Jennings, professor of education; Glen McNeill, associate professor of home economics; Robert Meier, professor of business administration; Allan Miller, professor of education; Paul Phillips, associate professor of earth sciences; David Rasmussen, music department chairman; Jim Rucker, associate professor of business education and office administration; Chaiwat Thumsajit, assistant professor of art; Charles Wilhelm, professor of communication; and DeWayne Winterlin, assistant professor of Spanish.

The female candidates are Tawntia Augustine, instructor of health, physical education and recreation; Sharon Barton, associate professor of business education and office administration; Martha Holmes, associate professor of art; Joan Rumpel, associate professor of business administration; and Ellen Veed, mathematics department chairman.

Seven men and 15 women were nominated by faculty for the Torch Award. The men are Gary Aistrup, Spearville; Steven Beaumont, Oberlin; Jay Belfort, Hays; Joe Dinges, Hays; Jack Schmitt, Scott City; John Sekavec, Hays; and Ronald Sturgeon, Hays.

The women are Carolyn Bird, Hays; Jane Costigan, Hays; Patricia Crowell, LaCrosse; Tammy Eilert, Beloit; Brenda Geerdes, Menlo; Elaine Hilger, Hays; Mary Hurst, Goodland; Paula L'Ecuier, Haddam; Carol Malir, Wilson; Tanya Moon, Hays; Lisa Moritz, Tipton; Diane Pfeifer, Morland; Amy Rodriguez, Elkhart; Jody Sturgeon, Hays; and Renee Werth, Hays.

Johansen said the Torch Awards are given to those with outstanding leadership skills, and the Pilot Awards are given to faculty who show outstanding personal and professional qualities.

The committee meets and looks over three or four nominees for both the Torch and Pilot awards," she said. "The committee then interviews four male and four female nominees for the Torch Award, and three male and three female nominees for the Pilot Award. After the personal interviews, the committee makes their selections."

Johansen said the interviews, where four committee members take part, are beneficial in selecting the candidate.

"It's nice to get to know them a little more than what we see on paper," Johansen said.

All four award winners will be announced at the graduation buffet brunch, at 11:30 a.m. Friday, May 13. The brunch will include a speech from Fort Hays State President Edward Hammond.

STUDENTS.

Another reason cited by Hartley is a culture event occurring during her exchange.

"The Shakespearean festival. I'm really looking forward to that. Participating if I can, seeing it."

The students said family and friends generally have been very supportive and have encouraged them to enjoy their exchanges, although some of their friends wished they were going too.

In order to go on exchange these students must follow certain criteria.

They must have completed at least two semesters at FHISU before being allowed to apply.

The exchange students must have at least a 2.5 grade point average to be eligible.

According to the NSE brochure of exchange sites, "This GPA is required at the time of application and at the completion of the semester prior to exchange."

Students interested in going on the exchange have to follow a step-by-step procedure.

The first step is to consult with Dorothy Knoll, NSE coordinator, in Picken 304 and fill out an application.

After being selected, the students are then placed at either the school of their first choice or their second choice.

After placement has been decided, and the student has accepted his placement, he must follow normal procedures of enrolling at the host college.

Other students selected to go on exchange are Kristina Bell, Douglass sophomore; Tammy Brungardt, Morland sophomore; Sean Gunther, Andale freshman; and Bugle Lauw, Indonesia sophomore.

Patterson stated a feeling that was echoed by the other exchange students.

"I'm really looking forward to going."

Kamela Jones, Garden City junior, practices her part in "Home Town Cookin' XVIII" with the Fort Hays State Jazz Ensemble last night in Felten-Start Theater.

Jazz group gets cookin' in concert tonight

The Fort Hays State Jazz Ensemble will present "Home Town Cookin' XVIII" at 8 p.m. tonight in Felten-Start Theater.

The program will feature big band jazz arrangements from Buddy Rich, Count Basie and Maynard Ferguson.

According to Brad Dawson, director of the ensemble, Steve Story from Wichita will be the featured guest soloist.

"He (Story) is a jazz violinist originally from Oklahoma. Right now he is in Branson, Mo., playing at a resort," Dawson said. "It's kind of unusual to find a jazz violinist. There aren't that many. Steve is just a fine player."

The program was given its name 18 years ago.

"Home Town Cookin'" was just a nickname that caught on 18 years ago," Dawson said.

Twenty-two FHSU students perform with the ensemble.

Trash Cannes collects 14 entries

The award ceremony for the first annual "Trash Cannes Film Festival" is scheduled for 8 p.m. tonight at the Backdoor.

Sponsored by the radio-TV-film department, the contest was opened to anyone who wanted to enter their five minute film for judgment.

The contest began as a way to showcase projects of students in the Cinematography II class.

Kevin Campbell, associate radio-TV producer-director, said, "We needed a bigger audience for the films other than the four students and me."

"They put a lot of time and money into making their projects. They are really junior film makers," Campbell said.

Campbell said that they have received 13 entries, one from as far away as Ellinwood.

Campbell said that half of the entrants are FHSU students, while the other half is area high school students.

Campbell said that of the ones he has reviewed, most of the entries are humorous.

"A dog drug dealer, a homicidal maniac in the library and office humor are some of the film subjects," Campbell said.

Campbell said the award ceremony, which is free and open to the public, will be fun.

"They have technical quality, and the audience won't be bored," Campbell said.

Casper stars in own creation

Three years ago, "The Fourth Wall" was an idea in the mind of Jerry Casper, Hays graduate student.

Last year it became his project in playwriting class, and this week it becomes a one-man performance at Alive Theater.

Casper will be featured in his show as Michael Johnson, a high school history/literature instructor.

Casper described the show as an intense comedy/drama with the comedy heavy in the first act and the drama falling mostly in the shorter, second act.

The show focuses on Johnson, a teacher lacking assertiveness, charisma and control of his classroom.

"He's the kind of teacher all the kids make fun of," Casper said, "kind of a wimp."

Casper said his character personifies the kind of teacher the kids figured was too stupid to understand he was being made fun of.

But, Casper said, Johnson

does realize the ridicule.

"He finds a way to fight it -- an extreme way to fight it," Casper said.

Casper became interested in one-person shows after directing "Vincent," in 1983.

He said his interest was borne more of a technical aspect, rather than a performing one. He wanted to explore the challenge of creating enough interest with one character to hold the attention of an audience.

"It's such a challenge," Casper said, "you're up there by yourself. If you mess up, there's only you to get yourself out of it."

"I'm really putting myself on the line with this," Casper said, referring to both his acting and writing skills to be judged this week.

The show, directed by Lloyd Frerer, professor of communication, will be presented at 8 p.m. Thursday and Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Alive Theater, 117 W 11th.

Welker places 12th, tops FHSU finishes

By TIM PARKS
Staff Writer

Tom Welker placed 12th with a time of 32:32 in the 10,000-meter run to lead a squad of 10 Fort Hays State men in the Saturday's 79th Drake University Relays.

The junior from Woodston, along with two other members of the squad, competed against over 800 runners in the event.

Rick Walker placed 17th with a time of 33:27, and Tom's twin brother, Tim, finished right behind Walker, but had an identical time.

Head Track Coach Jim Kroh was pleased with his men's long distance efforts.

"Tom ran very well. He had a personal best time," Kroh said. "The other two didn't do badly either."

Walker and the Welker twins also made up three-fourths of the four-mile relay team, which finished 15th.

Larry Wood ran the first leg in a time of 4:15.

"That was not too shabby," Kroh said. "That is an excellent time."

Walker ran the second mile in 4:24. Tim Welker had a time of 4:26 and Tom Welker finished the race with a time of 4:26.

Kroh said the men's 2-mile relay team was in contention for the first three legs, but Don Brunzell fell down during the final leg of the race.

The relay finished in a time of 7:52.

Ruben Esparza, Mike Filley, Ramon Lopez and Brunzell made up the team.

Esparza ran his leg in 1:55, Filley in 1:56, Lopez in 1:54 and Brunzell in 2:05.

Steve Broxterman failed to clear the opening height in the high jump, but Kroh said only 13 of the 30 jumpers made it over the 6'11" 1/2 high bar.

Jon Haselhorst ran the 110-meter high hurdles in a sub-par time of 15.2.

The Hays sophomore leads the CSIC with a time of 14.3 in the event.

"Jon didn't do squat. He didn't have a very good race at all," Kroh said.

This Friday and Saturday the CSIC Championship meet will get underway at Emporia.

Assistant Track Coach Wayne Sager said he expects the defending champion Emporia State University women to be the team to beat.

"But he said FHSU and Kearney State University will also be in the hunt for the team title."

"It will be a dog fight. It just matters where everyone places their people and how they perform," Sager said.

Sager said Pittsburg State University should be the top team in the men's division.

"Pittsburg has a strong team. They will be tough to beat."

LOCAL

• The intramural four-man golf scramble can be played either Thursday or Friday at the Fort Hays State Golf Course.

The four golfers play 18 holes, using the best shot on each hit to play the next ball.

Scorecards are due in the intramural office by Monday at 4:30 p.m. There is a $5 green fee for each golfer.

• The Fort Hays State baseball team will end its regular season today in Kearney, Neb., against Kearney State College.

Game time is scheduled for 2 p.m.

NATIONAL

• Pete Rose, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, received a 30-day suspension for pushing an umpire during a game Saturday night.

The suspension is the longest since Leo Duracher missed the entire 1952 season for a suspension on gambling charges.

• The Phoenix Suns fired head basketball coach John Wetzel yesterday, following the team's absence from playoff action.

Wetzel replaced John McLeod after a drug and point-shaving scandal broke in Phoenix last season.

Hush grabs first at 23rd FHSU rodeo

By ERIC HODSON
Assistant Managing Editor

The 23rd annual Fort Hays State rodeo produced some close competition during the weekend despite some of the windy conditions.

Winning the average for FHSU in the team roping event was Brandon Hush, Plains senior, and partner Jason Trent, Dodge City Community College student.

Hush now has a possibility at competing in the College National Finals Rodeo at Bowsman, Mont.

In the steer wrestling event, FHSU took two of the top 10 final positions.

Phil Gooch, Scott City senior, placed fourth in the average while Steve Harris, Manhattan sophomore, took eighth in the average.

Stacey Raupe, Douglas junior, placed second in the first go-around in the barrel racing competition but finished far behind in the average.

Teams from 14 schools competed in the rodeo. Stock was provided by Floyd Rumford, a professional rodeo stock contractor.

Saturday night, Beth Zenor, Hutchinson Junior, was crowned as the FHSU rodeo queen.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Zenor of Hutchinson. Zenor has been barrel racing competitively since she was a junior in high school.

She continued barrel racing through junior college and this year as a member of the FHSU rodeo team.

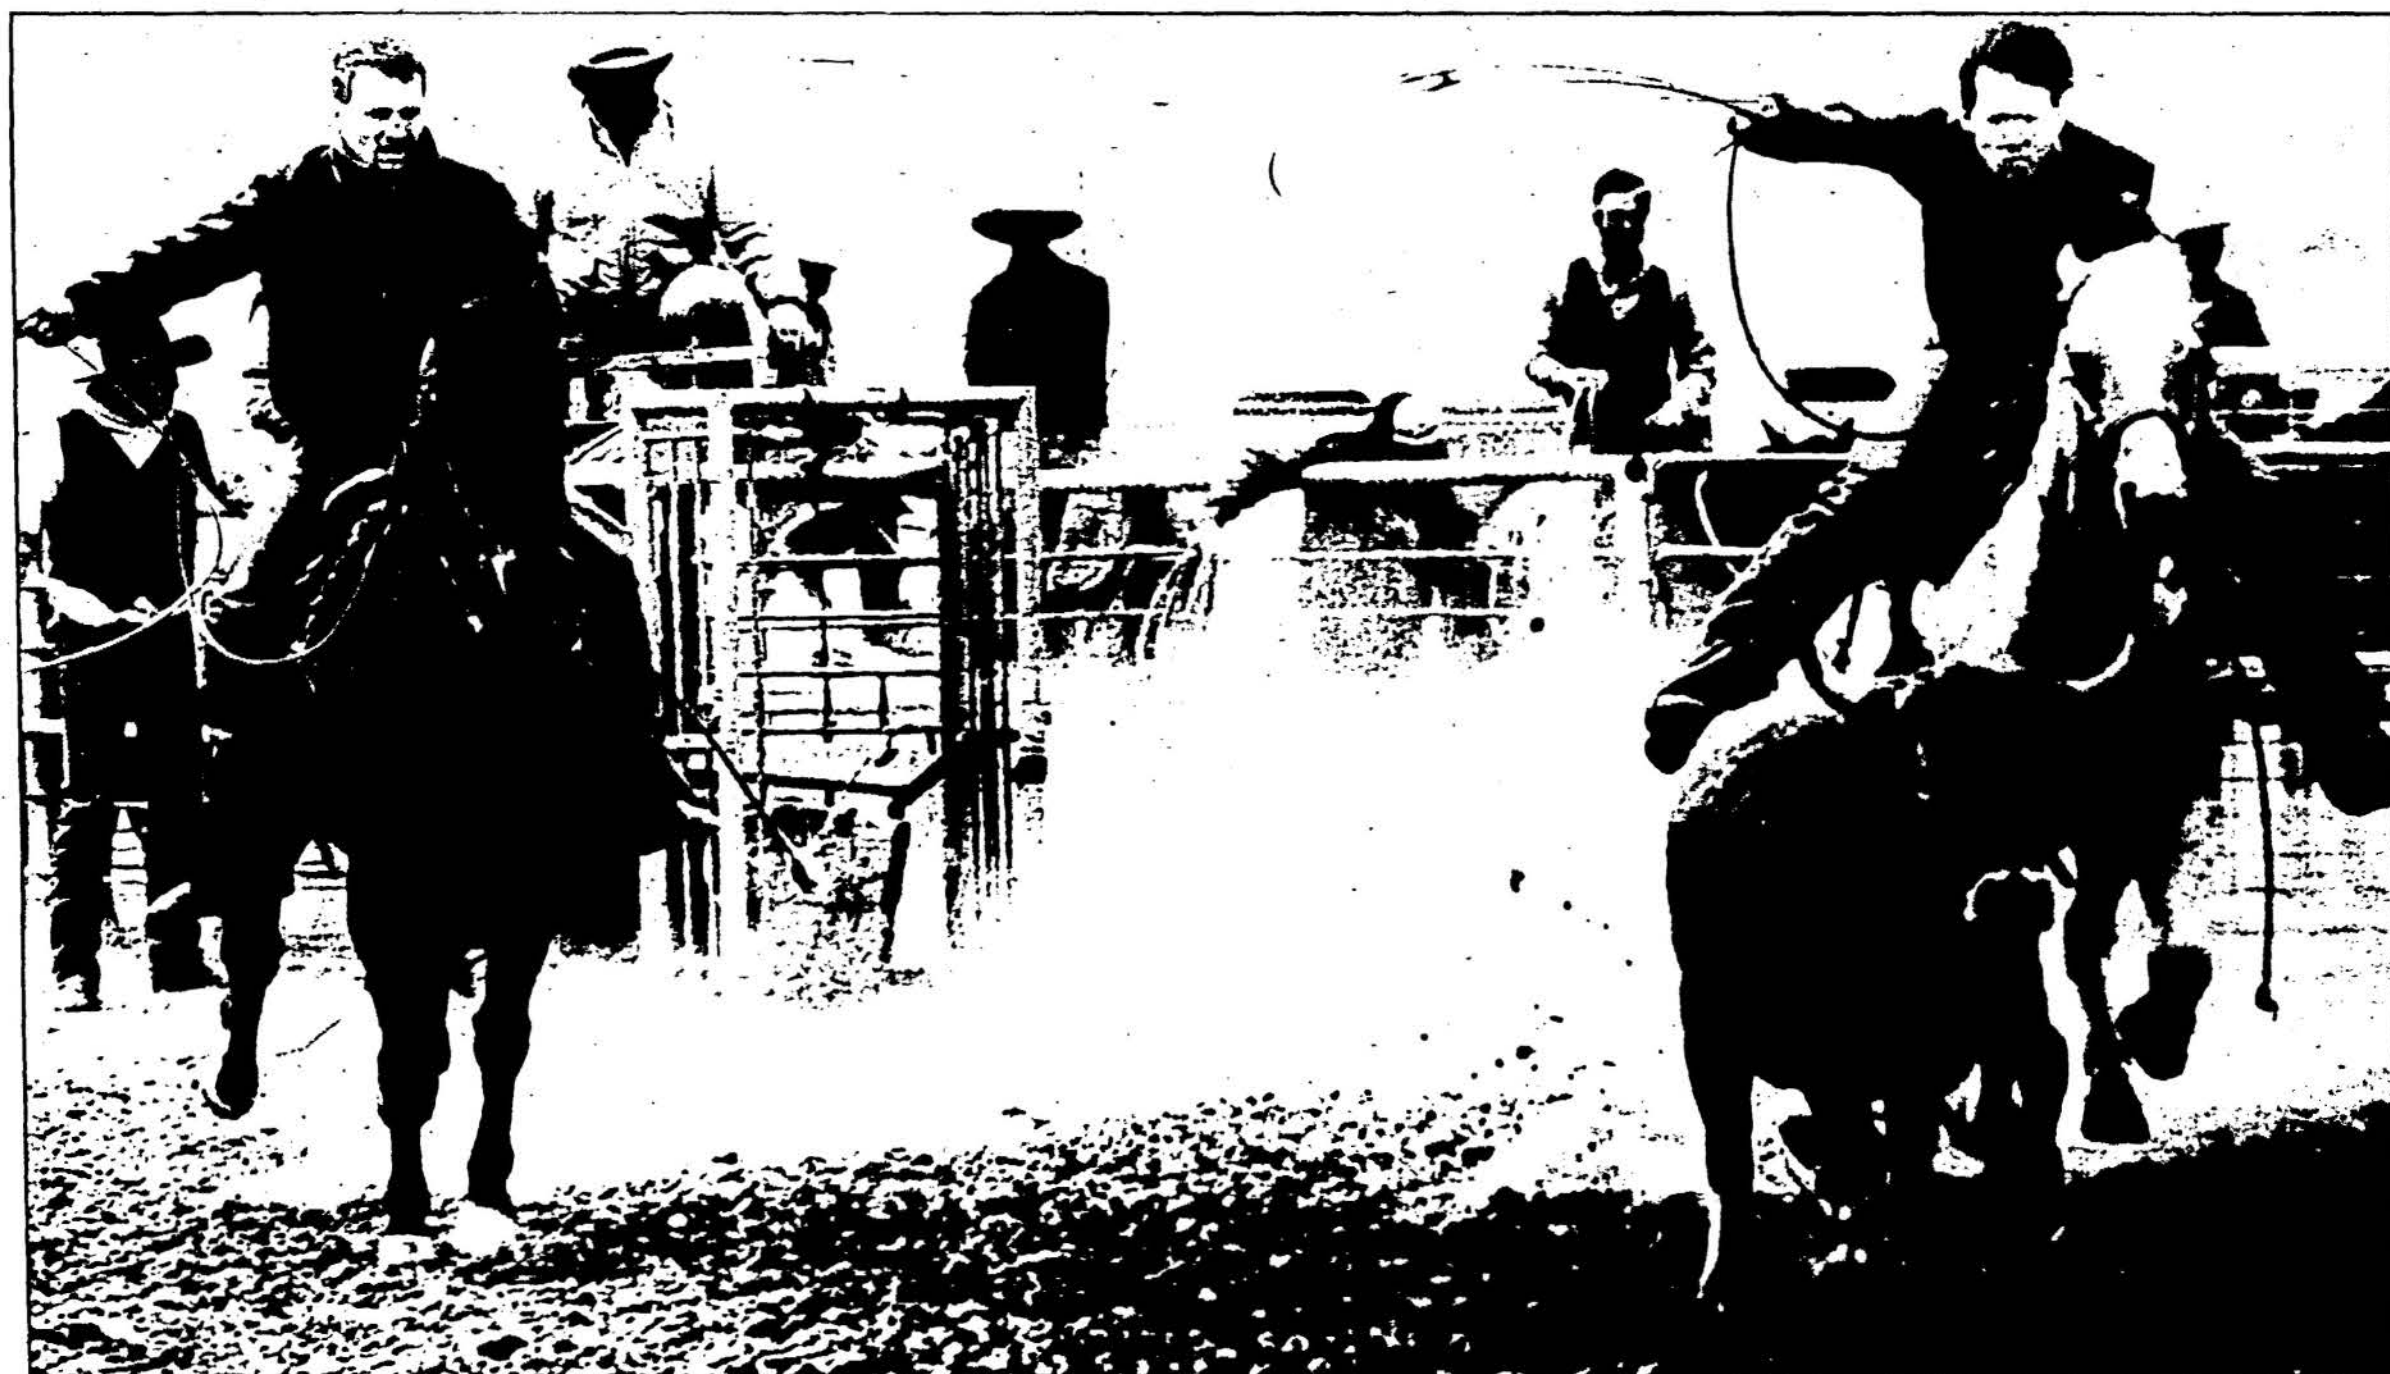

Her primary responsibility as queen will be to promote the rodeo program at FHSU.

Four contestants were judged in different categories the Tuesday before the rodeo.

"We went through a 10-15 minute interview, and then each of us had to give a speech concerning rodeo," Zenor said.

"Mine dealt with dreams, desire and dedication of rodeo. Then we had to do some modeling and horseman-ship."

The three-day event concluded Sunday with the slack competition.
