INTERNATIONAL

Δ Soviets remove books

Some Soviet cities have been ordered to remove all political and economic material written before Mikhail Gorbachev became the leader in 1985. Library officials in major Soviet cities have been told to clear out all the writings of two former leaders, Leonid Brezhnev and Konstantin Chernenko, as well as Mikhail Suslov, the longtime Kremlin ideologist, among others.

Δ Miners strike

Demanding higher wages and the restoration of the Solidarity trade union, thousands of Polish miners went on strike Tuesday at July Manifest Mine, one of Poland's largest mines.

NATIONAL

Δ Bush makes choice

Republican presidential candidate George Bush chose Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle as his vice presidential candidate Tuesday afternoon. Quayle has been a member of the United States Senate since 1980 and was a member of the U.S. House in 1976.

STATE

Δ Grant awarded

Graham County has been awarded a Community Economic Development Block Grant in the amount of $233,974, according to the Kansas Department of Commerce.

Graham County was awarded the grant for the creation of Harmon Foods, Inc., a wheat snacks manufacturing company. The project is expected to generate 34 new jobs within the next 18 months.

Δ Turnquist pre-files bill

Rep. Larry Turnquist, a ranking Democrat on the House Insurance Committee, said he will pre-file a bill for the 1989 session to require yearly public disclosure of campaign finance records by all state elected officials. In addition, he called on Gov. Mike Hayden and Insurance Commissioner Fletcher Bell to voluntarily release their campaign finance reports this year.

Δ Enrollment rises

Summer enrollment increased at Fort Hays State this year, surpassing the 1987 mark by 70 students. A total of 3,228 students were enrolled at FHSU during the summer months.

Δ Classes begin next week

Students at FHSU will return to the classrooms Monday morning as the fall semester gets underway. Students can enroll for the fall semester all day today and tomorrow, and Saturday morning in Memorial Union.

Δ Yearbooks available

The 1988 Fort Hays State Reville yearbooks will be available in the Sunset Lounge during enrollment. The books are free for 1987-88 full-time students and for faculty. There will be a $5 charge for non-students and faculty members.

AT&T donates new computers

By JUNO OGLE
Copy editor

A $345,000 computer equipment grant from AT&T has brought Fort Hays State closer to its goal of an electronic campus.

The donation, announced yesterday, includes more than 30 terminals to be used by the mathematics department.

"It gives us a major step forward in achieving our goal of the electrification of campus," President Edward Hammond said.

"Obviously, AT&T recognized the fact that our university and our faculty have chosen to make a difference in how future FHSU graduates are prepared for the challenges that lie ahead," Hammond said.

The donation is part of an AT&T program to help colleges and universities expand their computer programs.

"As a computer company, AT&T has a stake in the strength of computer programs offered by our nation's universities," Clo Whitaker, AT&T branch manager, said.

The new system will be installed in a special laboratory to be developed in Rarick Hall when the equipment arrives later this fall.

The lab will contain 28 of the 32 terminals. The remaining terminals will be used by the mathematics faculty.

Hammond said the lab should be completely developed by Christmas, but is not sure if the computers will be operational by the spring semester.

Developing the programs will take time, Ellen Veed, mathematics department chairman, said.

"There is a great amount of development needed as not much mathematics software is available," Veed said.

However, AT&T will be providing some software, and some of the university's software currently in use is compatible with the system.

Veed said even if the system is ready for use by students in time for the spring semester, it will still take a couple of years to develop it to its full capabilities.

The new system will be beneficial to work and research in the department.

"The terminals are very advanced, with capabilities we need for the mathematics department," Veed said.

One of those capabilities is three-dimensional graphics, which will be beneficial in graphing various equations, she said.

The computers are intended for students enrolled in mathematics courses, but the system will be open to the entire university, Veed said.

In addition, the new system will be connected to the university's existing computer network.

Computer terminals located around campus, such as those in the residence halls, will have limited access to the programs.

FHSU is one of 46 colleges and universities in the country to receive such a grant, and is the third in Kansas.

Seventy-five schools across the country were invited by AT&T to submit proposals for projects they wanted to undertake or expand in the physical or biological sciences.

AT&T awarded the grants based on these proposals to 46 of the 75 applicant schools.

The proposals included data networking research and instructional applications aimed at development of strategic computer applications for education, business and industry," Whitaker said.

The University of Kansas and Kansas State University have also received similar grants.

Violators parking in the well-marked handicapped zones will be fined $20 for the first violation and repeated violations will result in towing away the car. Photos by Jean L. Walker.

Violators target of crackdown

Illegal parkers could face stiffer fines from campus police

By DAWN JOHNSON
Staff writer

Non-handicapped persons parking in handicapped zones on campus will be fined $20.

In previous years the fine was $5, but too many people repeatedly violated the parking restrictions.

"The reason the cost of the violation was raised is because we were bothered by people running in to take books in or to see an instructor," Don Brown, university police chief, said.

"They don't really intend to deprive the handicapped individuals, but often they end up doing so."

Brown said most people don't park in the handicapped spots all day, but even the short term parking inconveniences the handicapped individuals.

The handicapped spots are well marked, and signs announcing the change in ticket cost have been posted.

A ticket will be issued on the first offense with no warning given. People repeatedly violating the handicapped parking zones will be towed away.

"The estimated cost for the towing is $25 to $35," Brown said.

Other parking violations, however, are still $5.

Parking violators will be issued one warning followed by a ticket for subsequent offenses.

"If parking violations are ignored, after five tickets the car can be towed at the owner's expense."

"If at the end of the semester the student has unpaid tickets, he will not be able to re-enroll or get transcripts," Brown said.

Parking permits will not be issued to students or staff if the applicant has any unpaid parking tickets.

He said the security department usually issues 300 to 400 tickets a day at the beginning of a semester.

Later in the semester it slows to 100 to 150 a day.

"Usually at the beginning of the semester there are a lot of illegals parking on campus, and by ticketing them we clear them out a bit," Brown said.

Many tickets are given for parking in the wrong zone.

"We're really sticky about that. If a student has only a Zone 2 sticker and parks in a Zone 1 spot they will be ticketed," he said.

Students living east of Fort Street and north of 12th Street will be eligible to purchase the Zone 1 stickers at a cost of $8 annually or $4 a semester.

All other students will be issued Zone 2 stickers free of charge.

All parking permits must be attached to the outside lower left corner of the rear window.

Expired permits must be removed before new permits are attached.

"Since the campus is not within the city limits of Hays moving violations that occur on campus and are ticketed are subject to the Ellis County Court, and will show up on your driving record," Brown said.

For further information on traffic regulations and a map of the parking zones, traffic and parking pamphlets are available at the Student Service Center in the Memorial Union or at the Campus Security Building located west of the Union.

Hammond sets goals for future

By KARI AUSTIN
Senior copy editor

Fort Hays State is ready for a new strategic plan, according to president Edward Hammond.

As Hammond begins his second year as president, FHSU will begin the process of developing a strategic plan.

"The strategic planning we're going to embark on this year is going to be critical," Hammond said.

"You don't go through major strategic planning every year. We are going to this year," he said.

The process, Hammond said, began last year while the university's vision was being established.

"We clarified our vision, articulated that vision and got consensus on that vision," he said.

In July, Hammond released an updated list of university goals for the strategic plan.

The 10 goals are as follows:

Δ To become a unique and eminent regional university by "electrifying" the campus environment;

Δ To foster a liberal arts framework for student thinking through a computerized curriculum;

Δ To target selected instructional, research and professional programs for distinction;

Δ To establish coordinated and integrated programs for outreach in western Kansas;

Δ To assume an active role in the economic development of western Kansas and the state of Kansas;

Δ To develop a stronger "sense of community" among students, faculty and staff;

Δ To enhance the personal and professional development of students, faculty and staff;

Δ To establish and maintain a successful enrollment management program;

Δ To implement an on-going process for effective and efficient planning, resource allocation and evaluation in academic service units; and

Δ To establish aggressive institutional advancement and development programs.

These goals, Hammond said, will guide FHSU to accomplish its vision.

Institutional objectives and action plans will be aimed at accomplishing the vision, Hammond said.

"Early in the fall we're going to work on institutional objectives to meet those goals to achieve the vision."

Then each of the departments will come up with action plans," he said.

Reorganization plan takes shape

By PAULA COX
Staff writer

President Edward Hammond created the position of provost as part of the reorganization process to emphasize academics.

James Murphy, former vice president for academic affairs, was appointed to the position of provost.

Jim Petree will be assistant provost and also director of off-campus programs.

The reorganization process also calls for many changes in academic departments at Fort Hays State.

The education department was divided into three departments. They are now the departments of administration, counseling and education; curriculum and instruction; and special education.

A School of Health and Life Sciences was created. The school will include departments for agriculture, health and human performance, nursing, biological sciences and allied health, the communications disorders program and the radiologic program.

The university farm is now a part of the agriculture department.

Virgil Howe was named dean of the School of Health and Life Sciences.

The move of biological sciences from the School of Arts and Sciences to the School of Health and Life Sciences has bothered some people, Leland Bartholomew, dean of School of Arts and Sciences, said.

The feedback Bartholomew said he has received is that biological science belongs in with other liberal arts departments.

In the School of Business, Jack McCullick has been named dean. The department of economics is now the department of economics and finance.

Editorial

Three cheers for AT&T

Applause to AT&T. When they say reach out and touch someone, they mean it.

Even though AT&T has donated over $345,000 worth of computer equipment to Fort Hays State, most students probably won't realize the impact right away, but the long-term effect will be everlasting.

AT&T is taking a bold step that some may think foolish. AT&T obviously saw it as an investment in their future.

FHSU is among the trend setters in the country, and with President Edward Hammond pushing for a computerized campus, students and faculty will only benefit by moving into the computer age.

FHSU has made the decision and it has made the right one. Almost every department on campus has access to computers. The advanced system in Forsyth Library is one prime example of how computers can help students and faculty.

With a more high-tech campus, recruiters are likely to attract more students while at the same time giving them the quality education they will need to move into the job markets of the future.

Students beware

Students, be warned! When you get back to campus there's no doubt you will be excited about seeing old friends and meeting new challenges. But, like everything else in life, there is a catch.

There will be people waiting for you to come back. What are they waiting for? Your money. That's right. Think about it for a minute. Here you have worked all summer long, slaving away just to get back and get suckered into something you think sounded like a great deal at first but turned out to be a real lemon.

These people will come in all shapes, sizes and colors. They will do anything to contact you. They will call you at the crack of dawn trying to sell you subscriptions to this or that.

They will come knocking at the door trying to sell you worthless slips of paper that only entice you to spend more of your hard-earned money. They will send you tons of junk mail that will clutter your apartment or room for months.

There are two ways to deal with these people. You can either be suckered into every one of these scams or you can just say no.

Just say no to Suzie the operator or Joe Shmo the door salesman. Just pitch those pieces of mail with addresses from New York or Chicago into file 13. Then you can have plenty of money to have a good time with your friends or maybe even enough to buy yourself something really worthwhile.

BETTINA HEINZ

Europeans becoming a dominant power

Graduated.

With four years of continuous study behind me, what did I learn from undergraduate school?

Never to write a goodbye column before you know 100 percent you aren't coming back.

As a journalism major, you write a mushy last-ever column, take just one more teary-eyed walk around campus, ready to go on to bigger and better things — and find yourself back in the same place seven months later.

Yet, it is not the exact same place. If nothing else, my perception of it has changed.

Distance, even mere geographical distance, helps you gain objectivity. So when I went back to West Germany, naturally my picture of the United States adjusted to the European view of things.

Usually, it is not hard to keep up with U.S. news when you are abroad. Traditionally, the big U.S. news is of international importance and makes it into European news. If not, there is always USA TODAY International.

But leaving Gannett's gift to journalism out of sight, what I noticed most this time was what was no longer in the focus of European news — U.S. politics.

That, in an election year, is amazing.

For years, Europeans followed the American election closely, because they knew the outcome would affect individual European countries as well, politically and economically.

Much has been said about the loss of American dominance in world politics in regards to other emerging superpowers, such as Japan, China and a unified Europe.

This is the first time, though, that this development becomes obvious in a lack of interest in an American election.

As far as Europe is concerned, what is happening right now in the Soviet Union is much more exciting.

Politically speaking, the first Soviet attempts at reforming their society are intriguingly fascinating.

Economically speaking, there is a huge market nearly untapped, and European firms are already fighting over access to it.

But it is not only the Soviet Union Europeans are looking at.

They are also rebuilding the European identity. A free, unified European market will be reality in a few years.

Millions of dollars have been invested in promotional ads depicting a unified Europe.

An American election cannot compete with that.

It will be up to future historians to evaluate what will come out of these ambitions. America always had an edge on idealism. But maybe it has been holding on to outdated ideals for too long.

It seems the Soviet Union and Europe have passed the United States in reevaluating their role in an ever-changing world and are trying to strive for a new image.

It's not sudden insight striking overseas that causes these developments.

It's rather the last-minute acknowledgement that current threats such as environmental catastrophes can no longer be solved by one nation alone.

Looking at the presidential candidates, one doubts either one is aware of the necessity to cooperate with other, maybe even hostile, countries for their own sake.

Whoever will be the next president has one difficult task to face that is more crucial than national economics — he will have to find a new role for America in a world where power is shifting.

AMY TOMPKINSON

New student takes a good look around

Before I was assigned to do this column for the first issue of the University Leader, I liked journalism.

I still do. That's why I decided not to move to California, but instead to move to Hays.

Packing and moving up here was the experience of my life. It is one thing I will never forget.

Since I had a room all to myself at home, it was not easy deciding what to take that wouldn't totally offend my roommate.

I realized that my room at home was probably twice as big as the one I would have to share with someone, so it was hard to decide what I really needed and what was junk.

If I thought that was hard, getting it all into the car was even worse.

I can be very stubborn when I don't get what I want, when I want it, and no one was really thrilled to be helping me pack the car.

Instead of graciously accepting their help, I refused to even let my family touch anything.

Of course, instead of hurting them, I was only making myself do more of the work.

Because my car only runs when it really wants to, I decided not to bring it with me.

My mother drove me up here and helped me move in. I'm really glad I did it this way, because it gave her some time to see where I was going to live and to get used to the idea that I wasn't going to be home with her any more.

I know, though, that they are probably going to come visit me so often that I will probably see them more than I did when I lived at home.

When I moved into Agnew Hall on Sunday, I didn't realize that I wouldn't have a view from my basement window, or that I would be the first girl to move in on my floor.

But it only seems obvious since I moved in a week before classes start so I could attend the Leader and Reveille staff retreats.

The first couple of days were lonely for me because of leaving all my friends and family, but meeting new people here helped.

Growing up in a small town didn't really prepare me for college.

Since I went to school forever with the same people, and everyone knew everyone else, there wasn't really any need to meet new people.

It's hard for me to meet people because of that. I hope that's why.

The town I grew up in wasn't the place for teenagers.

The places that stay open late want the business, but they wouldn't let anyone park in front of the business to talk to their friends.

The police in our town really didn't like teenagers. They were all right as long as we kept moving all the time, either walking or driving, but the minute anyone stopped, they assumed we were up to something awful.

I'm glad that I got positions on the Leader and the Reveille, because it will help me make new friends.

At first, I didn't know if I should apply for the jobs or not, because I wanted to move to the land of sun, sea and sand. California.

Now, I'm glad I did apply for both jobs, because everyone seems to be nice, and because I thrive on stress and because this seems to be good for stress.

The Leader and Reveille are going to be excellent this year, and I am very glad to be a part of both of them.

I can't wait for classes to start. That probably seems weird, because nobody likes school, but I can't wait to get the year going. Good luck to everyone.

COLIN MCKENNEY

Off-campus living proves unattractive

Off-campus living, although glamorous at first glance, is not always the proverbial bed of roses as told in residence hall folklore.

I remember my days as a wet-behind-the-ears freshman dreaming of living in a cozy little homestead or apartment somewhere in the realm of the 625 prefix.

I dreamed of the day when I would no longer have to go down and up four flights of steps to do my two-weeks' supply of laundry.

I dreamed of not having to worry about being in time to eat or even if I could stand to eat what they had in the cafeteria if I could get there on time.

I could hardly fathom being able to turn the stereo up to an intolerable level at any time of the day or night without being harassed by persons beating on the walls or door.

Or just simply being able to watch MTV without having to fight with the guys in the lobby who were watching soap operas.

For me, off-campus living was a dream that was impossible to reach.

How could a person go wrong with access to all-weekend parties and freedom from unruly RAs, you say?

Well, my castle on the plains has been more of a pain in the privates than stuff that dreams are made of.

The nice older home in need of some shingles and paint that I put a deposit down on last spring now falls a little short of my humble expectations.

When I pulled up and my housemate told me that we had a mess, I assumed that he had thrown a small get-together and had spilled some fruit juice on the carpet.

It didn't take too long for my underestimation to become reasonably apparent to me.

A few broken bottles and beer cans on the front porch didn't phase my hearty spirit of adventure.

Water stained ceilings and lathe and plaster on the floor didn't bother me too much.

The stench of moisture-soaked insulation and carpeting couldn't cramp my style.

But, by jingo, when it comes to damage so great that it requires lowering the ceiling in the dining room and removing the crystal chandelier, I have to consider any hope for a lucrative and fulfilling life finished.

How on earth will I ever be able to eat my puffed wheat under a fluorescent light in the mornings?

And if I can't eat the most important meal of the day, how can I be expected to accomplish anything productive in class? I guess I might be making too much out of a little thing.

Dawson wants improvements in campus and Greek living

By MARVEL BALL
Copy Editor

Enhancing the Greek system, improving residential living and developing leadership are the main upcoming goals of James Dawson, vice president of Student Affairs.

Dawson comes to Fort Hays State from the University of Evansville, Evansville, Ind.

"One of the primary goals is to bring more students to campus, make the campus more residential," Dawson said.

With more students living in residence halls, the university has a greater sense of community, Dawson said.

Part of Dawson's concept of developing this sense is to involve more students in campus life and get more students to live on campus.

"It's not only because we have residence halls that need to be filled, but because I feel there is a learning experience involved in living on campus."

Dawson said there is much more to living and learning than what happens in the classroom.

He said improvements would have to be made to attract students to living on campus.

One way is to improve the physical facilities.

"Our major thrust is to dress up West hall a little bit," Dawson said.

West hall is the one hall that needs the most attention right away, he said.

"I think it's the nature of residence halls; often they receive a little more abuse."

Dawson also wants to try to enhance the Greek system.

"The first thing I want to do is find out where these fraternities and sororities are in terms of numbers and what their rush systems are like," Dawson said.

Dawson was involved in building a Greek system at the University of Evansville.

Dawson said he would like to get the fraternities and sororities at FHSU directly affiliated with the institution.

"Often what happens when you have houses off campus is they tend to become little islands out there and serve their own interests," Dawson said.

Dawson said he hopes to convince them to develop a system with great credibility and a greater interest in the national Greek organization.

Dawson said the reason some Greek houses fail is because of the lack of unity for the Greek system.

"They tend to rush for their own organization and not for the system," Dawson said.

Dawson said he doesn't know what the organizations have here, but he hopes that unity can become important.

"I think this is an important leadership program," he said.

Dawson plans on visiting with other campus organizations and become acquainted with their programs also.

"I'm going to try to attend all the events that I can," Dawson said.

Dawson said the university is small enough that everyone can become involved in as much as possible.

He said the staff and students have been great.

"It's fun to come some place where everybody is so positive. Everybody you talk to feels good about the place. It's fun to be involved," he said.

Dawson said he wants to get to know as many people as possible and help them as much as possible.

"I want everyone to learn very quickly that I care about individuals and their successes. And I want to help that occur," Dawson said.

Horn takes fourth in MIT debate tournament

By TIM PARKS
Managing editor

Martin Horn, sophomore debater for the Fort Hays State Talking Tigers, captured the fourth place trophy in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Debate Instruction and Tournament this past weekend.

Bill Watt, sponsor of the FHSU debate team, said it was a big accomplishment for Horn because he had done only a few weeks worth of research.

"It was wonderful," Watt said. "It was nice to bring home some hardware at the beginning of the year."

Before the season began, Bill Watt had a void to fill after Eric Krug and Chris Crawford graduated, ending their FHSU debate careers with a third place in last year's national debate tournament.

Krug is now the assistant debate coach, but Watt said he is confident in this year's top team.

"We have an extremely experienced sophomore team," Watt said.

Horn was accompanied on the trip to Boston by teammate David Klein, who became ill during the tournament and had to drop out.

Horn and Klein studied debate theory and participated in a debate tournament during their 11-day trip.

"In the tournament, each team had five topics to choose from," Watt said. "The teams would each pick one and use them in the tournament."

Other members of this year's team are James Talley, Salina freshman, and Allen Proctor, El Dorado freshman.

Proctor placed in last year's national high school meet.

The Talking Tigers first meet is Sept. 16 at Johnson County Community College.

Before sending his own debaters to a workshop, Watt and his crew had a workshop for Kansas high school debaters.

Eighty-five students and 35 coaches from 40 schools attended the camp.

"We had schools from Overland Park, Haysville, Concordia and Mound Ridge. They came from every corner of the state," Watt said.

The workshop was used to research the 1988-89 high school debate topic and to write positive and negative cases.

"We had students and advisers in the novice, experienced A, experienced B and champion divisions," Watt said.

The camp lasted from July 29 to Aug. 6.

"When we first talked about having a workshop here, I couldn't see any reason to," Watt said.

"We already had two of the best in the nation at Emporia (State University) and KU (University of Kansas)."

"But they said to have a workshop, but not a tournament," he said.

Watt said another thing that makes the FHSU workshop distinctive is the fact it is both a debate and forensics camp.

"Kansas State (University) has a forensics camp, but ours is both."

"It's just a time when they can use our library and prepare for the upcoming year."

FHSU to receive $100,000 for scholarships

Students coming straight out of high school may have a little extra incentive to enroll at Fort Hays State thanks to Hays City Commissioners.

FHSU will be receiving $100,000 of city funds to be used for scholarships for incoming students.

Last Thursday night at City Hall, commissioners approved a $9.943 million budget package that included the scholarship funds.

City Manager Ken Carter said as approved, $60,000 of the funds would be used for recruitment of freshman students.

The remaining $40,000 would be used for retention purposes once the students were in the program, Carter said.

The proposal passed by a 3-1 vote with one commissioner absent from the meeting.

"We had several people there at the meeting. Some people spoke in favor and some were opposed," Carter said.

The money will be available beginning January 1989.

New students given chance to become acquainted

By ERIC HODSON
Editor in chief

New students at Fort Hays State will have a chance to get acquainted with the campus and each other at the same time.

Saturday, students can register for the "New Student Orientation '88" program.

Registration takes place from 9 to 11 a.m. in Memorial Union on the second floor in the south lobby.

There is a $5 registration fee for students who will be living on-campus with a meal plan.

The fee includes a dance, two picnics, live entertainment and all orientation materials.

HAMMOND'S GOALS Continued from Page 1.

"Those action plans will be what we implement to achieve those objectives, to reach those goals to meet the vision."

The results will be visible to incoming and prospective students, Hammond said.

"They are going to find an innovative environment that is electric."

"They will find more and more merging of high-tech with the high-touch environment," he said.

Hammond said he had three goals for himself last year.

"One was to develop a consensus for a new direction and vision for the institution."

Hammond said his second goal had been to learn about FHSU.

"I spent a lot of time talking to people, doing a lot of listening, and reading files," he said.

"I think I learned a lot about Fort Hays. I was really pleased with what I found."

Hammond said he decided to take the first year to look at and evaluate FHSU.

"There's a tendency I think I have to make decisions sometimes to move the organization

New students will be organized into groups during the morning with student counselors leading the group during the day. Campus tours will be conducted in the morning.

Students can attend three 45-minute sessions during the afternoon. One session is designed to give students an idea of what to expect at college and how to deal with typical college problems.

Another session, entitled "The Career is Right," uses a game show format to educate students on the many career opportunities available to them.

The session is sponsored by the Career Development and Placement Service.

"Academic Survival - It's a Jungle Out There," is the title of the final session. Its purpose is to give helpful information to new students on study habits, counseling, study skills and other useful tips.

At 5:15 p.m., students interested in sorority or fraternity life can get information from organization representatives.

The day concludes with a dance at the tennis courts behind Forsyth Library.

Sunday at 1 p.m., students interested in joining departmental clubs or other organizations on campus can meet with members of various groups to learn more about the group or groups of their choice.

Tomorrow, parents of new students are invited to attend orientation sessions of their own.

These sessions will take place in Sunflower Theatre in the Union from 2 to 4 p.m. Campus tours are available after 4 p.m.

Classes begin Monday. At 5:15 p.m., there will be an all-school picnic and student organizational fair in the Quad in front of the Union.

Off-campus students will need to present their orientation name tag for admittance. On-campus students will present their meal ticket for admittance.

MUAB sponsors entertainment

Even with school barely beginning, the Memorial Union Activities Board is working to provide entertainment for Fort Hays State students.

MUAB and the Residence Hall Association are sponsoring a Welcome Back dance 8:30 to 11:30 p.m. Saturday at the tennis courts behind Forsyth Library.

Code 202 will provide the entertainment.

A valid FHSU student ID card is needed in order to be admitted.

If it rains, the dance will be moved to the Memorial Union Fort Hays Ballroom.

MUAB has set the Fourth Annual Fort Hays Family Picnic for 5 to 7 p.m. Monday on the campus quad in front of the Union.

Code Blue will perform during the picnic.

A barbecue meal will be provided free to anyone who has a current meal ticket. Otherwise, the charge is $1 per person.

Faculty, staff and Hays residents are also invited to attend the event.

MUAB will also sponsor "We Can Make You Laugh," a two-hour comedy performance, at 8 p.m. Monday in the Union Black and Gold Room.

It begins with three comedians performing for 20 minutes each.

Then the same comedians will have two minutes each to make a contestant laugh.

Contestants will be selected by a random drawing from names of people in the audience.

Any contestant who does not laugh during the full six minutes receives $25 and a "We Can Make You Laugh" T-shirt.

All participants will receive a T-shirt even if they have been disqualified.

Admission is $2.50 for FHSU students and $3.50 for the general public.

Residents receive honor

Six Fort Hays State students have been inducted into the campus chapter of the National Residence Hall Honorary.

The NRHH is a national organization which recognizes individuals who have made significant leadership contributions to the residence hall system.

Those inducted this year were Kristina Bell, Douglass junior; Dawnae Urbanek, Ellsworth senior; Tammy Knaub, Haviland senior; Gwen Billau, Salina graduate student; Cheryl Griffith, Scott City junior; and Annette Kennedy, Sedgwick senior.

Students can nominate themselves or be nominated by the Residence Hall Association.

It is based on their involvement and leadership contribution. Some examples would be if they were on staff as a resident assistant, or involved in Residence Hall Association or some campus activity like MUAB or SGA. Mike Ediger, McMinder Hall director, said.

After being nominated, the students' applications are evaluated and assigned a point value. — Students are then selected after a cut-off point is determined.

Each year there are 15 active members, or one percent of the hall population, in the organization.

The NRHH is a sub-organization to the National Association of College and University Residence Halls.

There's no cost. It's an honorary organization just to recognize these students' achievements," Ediger said.

Stress: symptoms, cures

By DAWN JOHNSON
Staff Writer

Stress is normal, but too much stress can cause problems.

"Too much stress can make you sick," Ruth Durham of the High Plains Mental Health Center said.

"Stress is like a circuit overload in that it feels like too much is going on at one time and it is overwhelming.

"The coping systems are taxed beyond their normal capabilities," she said.

Durham said some stress is a normal part of daily life, but if it is allowed to build up, it can interfere with normal daily activities.

Patty Scott, Student Health RN, said "A certain amount of stress is good because it motivates us, but too much stress can cause physical ailments.

"Stress-related illness is very common among college students," she said.

Scott said stress can manifest itself in a variety of ways.

"Symptoms of stress-related illness are headache, diarrhea, stomach ache, and low-grade fever.

"This is often accompanied by a nervous feeling, pounding heart, sweating, shaking or dizziness," she said.

Acknowledging stress and dealing with its presence before it builds is important.

"The key things to remember when dealing with stress are to set priorities, balance work and play, get enough sleep, relax and exercise," Durham said.

Durham said stress can be dealt with if it is understood.

"When feeling stressed, try to take a step back and look at things in perspective.

"Try to break things down into smaller pieces and they'll be more manageable," Durham said.

Scott and Durham both said exercise is a good way to combat stress.

"One thing we encourage is exercise - regular exercise," Scott said.

"Sometimes, when discouraged, doing something active helps. Rather than brooding about problems, go swimming, jog, ride a bike, etc.," Durham said.

Thinking positively will also help to combat stress, Durham said.

"Sometimes the anxiety of thinking 'Oh, I can't do it,' actually impedes being able to hear and understand what is being said.

"Replace negative thoughts with positive ones," she said.

Talking also helps to ease stress, Scott said.

"Talking things over with a friend or a willing listener is very helpful," Scott said.

She said sleep is very helpful in combatting stress, too.

"A big help is getting enough sleep. You can deviate from your bedtime, but when you are tired you don't learn or respond as well," Scott said.

Self-medication is not helpful in dealing with stress.

"Avoid alcohol or drugs to cope with stress. They are just a short-term help, and they certainly add to stress as far as long term goes," Scott said.

In college, good study habits help fight stress buildup too.

The most important thing to remember is there is no substitute for daily preparation.

Besides preparing daily, other helpful study habits include

Δ Keeping a calendar of test dates, meetings and other important events.

Δ Take accurate, legible notes.

Δ Don't doodle on notes.

Δ Review notes at least one hour per week.

Δ Study in a place that is comfortable and has good lighting and no distractions.

Δ Be on time to class, be a good listener, participate in class discussion and do all work on time.

"Getting work done on time and studying as you go is a good study habit," Durham said.

"All-nighters tend to compound the stress and are not a good study habit."

For more information on good study habits, see the Phi Eta Sigma handout "Hints on How to Study," found in the Office of Student Affairs.

Trouble with classes and professors can also become a problem.

"If you are having trouble with a class, talk about the problem with the professor. They aren't as scary as they may seem," Durham said.

Waiting until the last minute to get work done is not a good study habit, Scott said.

"We find there is a lot of stress at the end of the semester when things are due and money is short," Scott said.

She also said stress does not go away, it is simply managed.

"Talking things over with a friend or a willing listener is very helpful."
Ruth Durham

"Stress will always be a part of your life," Scott said.

What's hot, what's not

Unisex clothing and shoes are the fashion wave of the near future.

Move over ruffles, polka dots and bows. Here come double-breasted suits, men's ties, oversized dress shirts and bulky white socks.

"We are getting a lot of unisex stuff in," Brenda Patterson, Brass Buckle manager, said.

"Sometimes it is hard to tell which are the girls' sweaters and which are the guys'," she said.

Forest green, burgundy and red, green and black plaids are the pick colors for the fall for male and female.

For dressing up, there are tailored double-breasted blazers with shoulder pads, which are worn with pleated and cuffed slacks or a straight skirt that hits at the knee.

For the men there is the same - minus the skirt.

There is relief from the masculine look in party dresses.

Jeans are almost all dark denim this year.

Stacy Hathway, Attic manager, said that acid wash was still around, but darker denim is easier to find.

Pleated front jeans are popular for men and women.

For just the women there are jeans with fold-down waists or ones that are gathered with a belt.

The latter is called the paper bag look for casual wear.

The legs are either tapered in or have a slight flare that is worn with a boot or pegged and rolled.

Pegging the leg is done by folding about a half inch of material over on the side of the cuff and rolling the leg up to just touching the ankle bone.

There are a lot of pleated jeans for guys, which the guys have a hard time getting used to.

"If you can get them in the jeans, they like them," Patterson said.

The wider bottom on the jeans is a shock to some people.

Patterson said.

"I like to remind the men that they can wear their boots with their jeans again," she said.

Patterson said the full cut in the leg is also a football player's and weight lifter's dream.

White socks are popular with the rolled-up jeans, although tie-dyed socks, as well as other items, are also selling well.

"No matter what you have on, the white socks look great," Patterson said.

The rolled-up jeans with the socks are completed with penny loafers, a heavy-soled mailman's type shoe or with an outdoor-style boot.

Changes in sweatshirts this year include the reversible sweatshirt and a high-necked sweatshirt, referred to as mock-turtleneck.

Patterson said that the mock turtleneck is to be found on all types of shirts and dresses this year.

"Even your basic T-shirt has a mock neck," she said.

Accessories are wide and varied, Claire's Boutique manager Pat Fox said.

"Patterns are real big for all items," she said.

"Plaid, hound's tooth and tweed print on barrettes, bows and scarves are what is in. Jewel tones are also popular."

Some unusual items with rumblings from the past are the tie-dye, the peace sign and happy-face jewelry and accessories.

"They sell pretty well," Fox said.

"Still, for a pair of jeans the price range is from $69 to $30," she said.

Since the style is towards men's fashion, many women have gone over to the lower-priced men's side.

Some women have discovered that the men's jeans that sell for $17 and the men's shirts that sell for less than the same style in the women's section are a good buy, Patterson said.

Faculty change positions

By TIM PARKS
Managing editor

Two empty faculty positions were filled this month.

Jack McCullick was appointed dean of the school of business, and Patricia Mahon was named the new director of admissions.

McCullick succeeded Robert Camp, who earlier accepted a similar position at Indiana University in Pennsylvania.

Mahon succeeds Steve Sims, who resigned from the post in June to return to Northwest Wyoming Community College.

McCullick's appointment to the position followed a nationwide search for a new dean.

The Ada native, who had been chairman of the department of economics and finance since 1971, said his new position will demand more work.

"It will involve a wider scope, a wider number of issues to be dealt with," he said.

McCullick was the acting dean of the School of Business during the spring 1981 semester and again this summer.

He said he believes the time he spent as acting dean will help him in his new job.

"Yes, there is no question about it," McCullick said. "It's good when involved in the process."

McCullick said he has a variety of duties to perform.

"If you were to put it under one large label, it would be to provide leadership for the school, including computers in classes, recruiting high-quality faculty and retaining them, and helping the faculty make tenure and promotion," McCullick said.

McCullick said he planned to follow President Edward Hammond's 10 university goals.

"We have a number of objectives, but we will also follow the goals President Hammond has put forth," he said.

McCullick was nominated three times for the Pilot Award for outstanding teaching.

Mahon will begin her duties as the new director of admissions Sept. 6.

Herb Songer, the search committee chairman, said that he is happy with the selection of Mahon.

"She possesses the ability and experience to do the job we need done," Songer said.

Mahon was a Montana high school teacher for one year, a resident hall assistant at Eastern Montana College and then became an admissions representative at EMC in 1982.

She became the assistant director of admissions in 1983.

"We had some excellent candidates for the job but Pat simply stood head and shoulders above them," Songer said.

"We believe that we found the kind of person we need to lead us in our student recruiting efforts," Songer said.

Dorms

how to survive a new environment

By REBECCA OBORNY
Copy editor

Residence hall staffs have been working to prepare for the residents moving in this week.

Meanwhile, freshmen and transfer students prepare to adjust to life in a residence hall.

One of the first things an on-campus student should do is get involved, Mike Ediger, McMinder Hall director, said.

"Get as involved as you can, as soon as you can," he said.

Get involved in floor council, hall council, Residence Hall Association and other hall groups, Ediger said.

"One of the biggest things about college is getting to know people," he said.

Ediger said one of the best ways to do that is to get involved in hall activities and campus events, and go out with friends.

"The first person you should get to know is, of course, your roommate," he said.

Next on the list is the resident assistant.

"Get to know your RA," Ediger said.

"The RA is a tremendous resource person. They have been intensively trained to know how to help."

"It never hurts to take the RA out for supper," he said.

After getting to know the RA, new students should try to meet the people living on their floor.

"We really encourage the community concept in the residence halls," Ediger said.

"We want everybody to feel comfortable with their floor community."

A resource available to a new student is the handbook distributed by all of the residence halls.

These handbooks include information pertinent to any on-campus student such as guidelines on alcoholic beverages, use of lounge facilities and borrowing of equipment from the front desks.

The handbooks also contain phone numbers frequently used and information on the halls' policies concerning building security and mail delivery.

The handbooks also inform new students where important facilities are, such as the recreation rooms, computer terminal labs, convenience stores and study lounges.

New students should be excited about living in the halls, Ediger said.

"They should be excited at a new living experience," Ediger said.

"They are going to meet lots of friends."

Ediger said everyone naturally is fearful going into a new situation.

However, he said, they should remember the staff is there to help them and that everybody else is feeling the same way.

Gallery provides relaxation

With fall fast approaching, many students discover that free time is not easily filled with activities.

One place some people leave off the list of things to do is a visit to the art gallery.

Fort Hays State University has such a gallery on campus that everyone can visit and hold meetings in.

Located in Rarick Hall, the Moss and Thorns Gallery of Art has exhibits and special events scheduled for the year.

The gallery is dedicated to two men who have served as chairmen.

Joel C. Moss served FHSU from 1946 through his retirement in 1977.

John Thorns joined the FHSU staff in 1954 and was named chairman of the department of art in 1973.

Included in the special events at the gallery is "A Kansas Collection," sponsored by The Hays Arts Council.

The exhibit includes 24 pieces prepared by Kansas artists.

The exhibit has been displayed at The National Museum of Women in the Arts in Washington.

In order to become an exhibitor, the artists had to be selected by a jury of five.

Originally the number of entries topped 200.

After the first round, the number was narrowed to 44.

The second round was judged by Dodge Thompson, who is the chief of Exhibition Programs at the National Gallery.

Thompson chose the final 24 to go on tour.

Unofficially, three of the artists may be attending the exhibit, to lecture and answer questions.

Included with the exhibit are three displays which were in the first round of the selection.

These displays are works of FHSU staff members.

Two of the artists who are in the exhibit also have artwork on display at Hadley Regional Medical Center.

The exhibit will be on display Aug. 23 through Sept. 23.

Eastman exhibit now open

Fort Hays State's Sternberg Memorial Museum is the site of an exhibit entitled "Wildlife Art by William Eastman Jr."

The exhibit will show through Sept. 11.

Eastman earned his master's degree in zoology and botany from FHSU in 1948 and taught at the university until 1954.

He has also taught at colleges in Oregon, Wyoming and Australia.

In 1970, Eastman became Curator of Natural History at the Denver Museum of Natural History. He held a similar position at the Kansas City Museum before retiring in 1982.

During 1985, he returned to FHSU to begin work on the African Serengeti Plains Diorama at the Sternberg Museum.

He finished the project in 1987, then completed a Great Plains Diorama at Sternberg Museum.

Most of Eastman's exhibit depicts wildlife of the Great Plains, including paintings of pronghorn, elk and deer.

Also included are two of the original plates used by Eastman in his book "Parrots of Australia" and paintings of kangaroos and emus.

The museum is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays and from 1 to 5 p.m. on weekends.

NATIONAL

Δ Tudor for Guerrero

On Tuesday, the St. Louis Cardinals and the Los Angeles Dodgers made a one-for-one trade between Pedro Guerrero and John Tudor.

Tudor ended his three-and-a-half year stay with the Cardinals with a 50-24 record and helped lead them to a National League pennant in 1985 with a 21-8 season record.

Guerrero has a career batting average of .309, but has missed 59 games this season because of a pinched nerve in his neck.

St. Louis General Manager Dal Maxvill said Guerrero had agreed in principle to a three-year contract that goes through the 1991 season.

Δ Malone and Hawks deal

The Atlanta Hawks signed free agent Moses Malone to a three-year contract Tuesday.

Malone reportedly signed a contract worth a minimum of $4.67 million. The Atlanta organization declined to release details of the contract.

Malone, 33, is a 12-year veteran and has been named to the All-Star team 11 times. He was also voted as the NBA's Most Valuable Player three times.

STATE

Δ Pilots beat San Antonio

The Wichita Pilots scored two runs in the bottom of the first inning, and that was all they needed.

The Pilots defeated San Antonio 2-0 Tuesday at Wichita's Lawrence-Dumont Stadium.

Wichita is at the bottom of the Texas League's Western Division with a 23-30 record.

The Pilots are five-and-a-half games behind division leading Midland, who has a 29-25 record on the season.

Δ NBC World Series

The National Baseball Congress World Series ended Monday night in Wichita as the Everett Merchants won the tournament.

The championship game took place at Lawrence-Dumont Stadium, as the Merchants defeated Midlothian, Ill., 14-11 in 12 innings.

Everett went 7-1 throughout the tournament.

Everett pitcher Dave Wong went 4-0 in the series and was named the Most Valuable Player.

Wong pitched for five years in the Kansas City Royals organization.

LOCAL

Δ Rooks County places bets

The Rooks County Free Fair became the first stop for the pari-mutuel betters in Kansas Monday night.

Harness racing is the featured event at the fair in Stockton, and was chosen by the Kansas Racing Commission to be the first site for pari-mutuel betting.

A total of $30,137 was wagered Monday, and the total is expected to reach $110,000 after the three days of racing are finished.

CAMPUS

Δ Intramural dates set

The Intramural Office has handbooks ready for anyone interested in intramurals.

The book contains rules, guidelines and tentative dates of events.

The first event is co-ed softball. Entries are due on Aug. 25, and play begins Aug. 28.

All entry forms can be picked up in the office in Cunningham 139.

Krob named as top coach, anticipates 1988 season

By TIM PARKS
Managing editor

Jim Krob capped a successful first year as Fort Hays State cross country and track and field coach when he was named co-Kansas Collegiate Coach of the Year for men's cross country.

Krob, who came to Fort Hays after a stint as track coach at Bethany College, tied with Wichita State University Track Coach John Kornelson for the honor.

"It's a nice thing because it was voted on by the coaches. You have to have a good year but it's not dependent on your win-loss record," Krob said.

Dave Burgess of Johnson County Community College was named women's coach of the year.

John Capriotti of Kansas State University was the men's track and field Coach of the Year, and Dennis Shaver of Barton County Community College received the same honor on the women's side.

Now Krob is looking past his recent achievement and toward the 1988 cross-country season.

The Tigers' second-year coach said he is enthusiastic about the upcoming season, but also has many worries, especially about the women's team.

Chrissy Sitts, Jana Howard and Bettina Heinz are the only returning runners from last year's team that finished third in the conference.

Sitts was an all-district and all-conference runner last season.

She also participated in the NAIA national cross country meet.

Heinz, from Newel, West Germany, was injured for part of the 1987 cross country season.

"We have five healthy girls," Krob said. "Bettina ran well while she was in Germany, but she was hurt during the summer," Krob said.

Patty Bergmeier is also questionable because of an injury.

Other women expected to run for FHSU are April Ralstin, who has not run competitively for three years, three junior college transfers and two freshman.

"We have some fair runners coming in," Krob said, "but we'll have to see what happens."

On the men's side, Krob said he expects 18 men to report to the teams first workout.

Among those are top returners Tim and Tom Welker, Marlon Thornburg, Don Brunzell and Larry Wood.

Ruben Lopez, who transferred to FHSU last year and ran for the Tigers' indoor and outdoor teams, transferred to Long Beach State University during the summer.

Krob expects two or three new runners to provide help for the upcoming season.

Freshman Doug Wilson was expected to help but now is questionable because of mononucleosis.

Rob Long was plagued by injuries last season, but Krob said he expects good things out of him this year.

"If Rob can stay healthy, he should do a good job for us," Krob said.

The Tigers will tune up for the 1988 season with an alumni race on Sept. 3.

Volleyball team 'well prepared' for season

By CHRIS BISER
Staff writer

Seven returning players and three newcomers are preparing for the upcoming Fort Hays State volleyball season.

"We are working together as a team well. Our personalities seem to match. Everyone seems to be very team-oriented," Linda Ragland, Leavenworth senior, said.

"The girls seem to have come to practice well prepared. We have already gone through our entire playbook," Head Coach Jody Wise said.

Wise said in addition to being well prepared, this year's Tiger volleyball squad will have more depth than did last year's team.

"I've been putting them all through blocking, setting and hitting drills. And, I'm finding that several girls can play a multitude of positions."

"This means that on off nights, players can be substituted without hurting the team," Wise said.

In addition to the players that Wise has signed already, open tryouts were held Wednesday.

"Everyone has to work hard to keep their spots. There will be some really good walk-ons coming out," Ragland said.

This year the Lady Tigers will be led by two returning All-CSIIC picks in Ragland and Jenny Anderson, Ord, Neb., senior.

Ragland, a three-year starter, earned Honorable Mention All-CSIIC honors in 1987 after leading the team in serving.

Anderson garnered several honors in 1987 including Second Team All-CSIIC, First Team All-District and All-America Nomination. Anderson led last year's squad in hitting with 4.49 total kills and a 3.16 kills per game average.

Shannen Anderson, a two-year returning starter from Eustis, Neb., will look to share setting duties with Ragland this season after the Tigers lost All-CSIIC setter Holli Boland to graduation. She led the 1987 team with a .90 blocks per game average.

Injuries slow football preparation, key players sit on sideline

By TED HARBIN
Sports editor

Injuries have already begun to hinder the pre-season practices for the Fort Hays State football team.

"We started out with 71 players, but we're down to about 55 now. We've got a lot of guys injured," Mike McCarthy, defensive assistant coach, said.

Linebackers Brian Stindt, Belleville sophomore, and Shawn McKinney, McCracken senior, are among the injured players.

"We've got a bunch of nagging little injuries," defensive coordinator Duane Dirk said.

Stindt started seven games last season for the Tigers, and was the fourth best tackler on the team with 53 total tackles.

McKinney was hampered by a knee injury last season.

He transferred from Northwestern Oklahoma State, but also played two years at Pratt Community College.

"I pulled my groin pretty bad," Brian strained a ligament in his left knee.

"I should be back to 100 percent next week," McKinney said.

In a pre-season meeting in Kansas City, Mo., FHSU was picked fifth in the conference poll.

"I think that we have the potential to be better than that, but we're in a bad situation with the injuries and everything," McCarthy said.

FHSU has also lost the services of three transfers who went through practices last spring.

Kevin Simlen, Scott Wilson and Jeff Sinegal are ineligible due to low grade point averages.

"We lost them because their cumulative GPAs were not good enough to meet the 2.0 GPA required by the NAIA of juniors," Head Coach John Vincent said.

The Tigers began practicing four times a day on Aug. 9, and will begin the season Sept. 3, against Western State College at Gunnison, Colo.

This will be the first meeting between the Tigers and the Mountaineers.

"The big key is for us to come out strong and have success early," McCarthy said.

The coaching staff had tentative plans for a scrimmage on Saturday, but those plans may be changed.

"We had thought about having the scrimmage on Saturday, but we have a lot of injuries," Edward Faagal, Walanae, Hawaii, senior, said.

Faagal returns after an injury stricken 1987 season. He was 10th on the team in total tackles.

At the defensive end position, Doug Blank, Grinnell junior, returns as the only end who saw a lot of playing time last season.

"We have some experience at every position," Dirk said.

Blank started in the Tigers first three games last year, and played in five other contests.

Two other ends, Frank Brown, Cape May, N.J., senior, and Duane Charbonneau, Clyde junior, have made position changes for the upcoming season.

Charbonneau moved to strong safety where he competes with returning strong safety Dusty Trail, Osborne senior.

Trail had a pinched nerve last season that hindered his playing performance.

"Dusty is one of those players that is going to be hurt part of the time, but he's going to play all of the time," Dirk said.

Charbonneau started in all 10 games for the Tigers last season.

Steve Heft, Greensburg senior, was the only Tiger defensive back to start every game last season.

"We're going to need to rely on the little experience that we have coming back," Dirk said.

Brown moved down to the defensive tackle position. He has bulked up from 225 pounds to 243 pounds.

"Frank hasn't reported yet. He should be here in a day or two."

"He has been taking classes during the summer and isn't quite done with those," McCarthy said.

Brown led the Tigers in quarterback sacks with six, and was recognized as honorable mention All-CCSC.

"As far as our understanding of the defense, I think that we're picking it up pretty well," McCarthy said.

Offensively, the Tigers will be led by returning quarterback Craig Modellmog, Fort Collins, Colo., sophomore.

"Craig is a lot more confident than he was last season. His reads are coming along really well," Dean Tenbrink, Dodge City senior, said.

Modellmog threw for nearly 2,000 yards last season as a freshman.

"I was really happy with Craig. I think he really showed that he worked hard this summer and he came in poised and confident," offensive coordinator Pat Poore said.

David Lemons, Kansas City, Mo., sophomore, is the only Tiger running back to return from last season.

He played in eight games as a freshman and started in two of those.

"We've got some freshmen in to help out. Cary Henderson, Baytown, Texas, is kind of a scatback, and has a lot of speed."

Walton Burton, McKeesport, Pa., freshman, is kind of the same mold as Henderson," Poore said.

"Our running backs are really coming around. We've got some FOOTBALL.

Former assistant coach returns to FHSU

By MATT SHANER
Staff writer

Five years after helping lead the Fort Hays State men's basketball team to a third place finish in the national tournament, Marc Comstock is returning.

Comstock will be replacing last year's temporary assistant coach Ed Kozol.

Head Coach Bill Morse said that Comstock has done a super job.

"He has done a great job at Eastern Kentucky and Toledo. He is an extremely strong leader," Morse said.

Comstock said working with Morse again will be no problem.

"I know his demands. Being away for five years will help with working (on the team)," he said.

Currently, the coaches are busy looking at new recruits, due to the academic casualties that were suffered last year.

Comstock earned his B.S. in Physical Education from Hillsdale College and received his Masters from Western Michigan University.

Comstock's coaching experience began in 1976 when he coached the freshmen team at Hillsdale High School in Hillsdale, Mich.

He was also the junior varsity football and baseball coach at Hillsdale.

Comstock's collegiate debut was at Hillsdale College.

In 1981, he helped Hillsdale land a fourth place finish at the National Association of Inter-collegiate Athletics championship.

Then he came to FHSU for one season, and helped lead the Tigers to a third place finish in the NAIA championships.

After that he moved to Cumberland College in Williamsburg, Ky., until 1985, where the team got as far as the second round of the tournament.

The next year he was at Eastern Kentucky University in Richmond and then went to Toledo University in Ohio.

He returned to high school coaching last year at Addison, Mich. where he had the dual role of head basketball coach and athletic director.

Comstock has a compiled record of 228-29 and a .719 winning percentage on teams that he has been an assistant coach.

"The transition will be easier because I know the people and I am familiar with Hays and Fort Hays State," Comstock said.

Tenbrink played in all 10 games last season, and caught 14 passes for 248 yards.

"Everything is going real smooth right now. It's clicking between the receivers and I," Modellmog said.

Leiker was a starter in the first three games last season before sustaining a broken hand against Kearney State College.

Faulkner and Crandell saw limited action last season.

"Crandell has done a good job so far in understanding the offense," Poore said.

Faulkner caught 14 passes for 140 yards, while Crandell made one catch for a nine yard touchdown against Lincoln College.

The offensive line is short on numbers again this season. Injuries have also shortened the depth chart.

"Practice is getting everybody down a little. It is very trying mentally and physically," Tenbrink said.

quality kids with good speed," Tenbrink said.

In the receiver corps, five Tigers will return from last year's squad. Tyrone Tracy, Indianapolis, Ind., junior; Jason Leiker, Hays junior; Kenny Faulkner, Memphis, Tenn., senior; Kenny Crandell, Longmont, Colo., sophomore; and Tenbrink.

"We've got good competition at all four receiver spots," Poore said.

"All of the receivers' hands are coming around and we are all concentrating more," Tenbrink said.

Tracy earned All-CSIC, All-District 10 and honorable mention NAIA All-America recognitions following the 1987 season.

He led the team in receiving, kickoff returns and punt returns, and was second in rushing with 286 yards on 82 carries.

sophomore, is a returner from the 1987 team. In Gwaltney's freshmen campaign she led the team in blocking with 105 total blocks.

The Lady Tigers also have a junior college transfer on the team this year.

Cindy Ericksmoen comes to FHSU after attending Central Wyoming College in 1986 and Coffeyville Community College in 1987. Ericksmoen earned All-League honors while playing volleyball for both colleges.

Three freshmen also come to the 1988 Lady Tiger volleyball team.

Brenda Hitt, Montrose, Colo., freshman, led her high school team to the 3A State Championship in 1986. Her senior year she served 94 percent and had a kill ratio of 47 percent.

An injured Paula Gross, Montrose, Colo., freshman, has also joined the Tigers this season. Trainer Lisa Katzenmeier said, "Paula may have injured ligaments in her wrist in a recent fall."

Wise said Gross may be able to see action as early as next week. Gross earned All-State honors all four years in high school.

Letha Parsons, Leavenworth freshman, comes to the Lady Tigers after All-League honors in 1986 and 1987.

The volleyball team will see its first action Saturday, Aug. 27, at Gross Memorial Coliseum.
