Parking restrictions Students may misinterpret rules

By Scott Schwab
Copy editor

Students and faculty misinterpret some parking rules, Sid Carlile, campus police chief, said.

"Probably, the biggest problem and it's nothing that's new, is the removal of the old permits," Carlile said.

Carlile also said some people are still using stickers instead of tags.

"We still do have stick-on permits on the rear windows," he said.

Vehicles such as jeeps, convertibles, or cars that are unable to lock or do not have an inside rearview mirror still use the stick-on permits.

Other problems with the parking tags consist of the material in the faculty permits.

"The only other problem is the inferior material that the faculty and staff permits were made of," Carlile said.

Any faculty or staff members having trouble with their tags wrinkling should contact the security office to get a replacement.

Signs will soon be placed at campus entrances warning people of the parking permit requirements.

"People who forget to hang their permits and get fined need to contact the campus security office. There may be a difference in the fine if they do," Carlile said.

Campus traffic tickets can be appealed to the traffic committee.

That committee is comprised of faculty, staff and students. They are scheduled to meet on the first Tuesday of every month.

The department also asks that drivers use caution.

"I plead to the people in the vehicles to drive cautiously. I assure you that the officers from time to time will be watching crosswalks," Carlile said.

There has also been a slight problem with permits being stolen. Carlile said it would be a good idea for everyone to lock up their vehicles.

"If people are caught using a stolen permit, they will be prosecuted," he said.

Students take aggressive stance SAD targets drug problem

By Madeline Holler
Staff writer

A group of students may become aggressors in the war on drugs, if members and their adviser can get federal support for their plans and actions.

They have already located their first target, two areas in Osborne County.

Students Against Drugs will arm themselves with herbicide, torches and the initiative to eradicate local fields, and others in western Kansas, of the marijuana plants growing there.

SAD, sponsored by Model United Nations, was formed with the sole intent of turning the use of words into an active attempt at ridding the nation of illegal drugs.

According to their plans, Ayla Schbley, assistant professor of political science and adviser of the group, said SAD will take it upon themselves to locate fields growing illegal drugs and removing and disposing of the plants according to legal guidelines.

Schbley said the Osborne County areas they have located are one 10-acre field and 15 to 20 miles of ravine with over 300,000 plants. In the 10-acre field, Schbley said there are probably more than one million plants.

Although the fields have been sighted and several students have agreed to help in the eradication of these fields, Schbley said they must first establish who has liability for the students, something Schbley said should be the responsibility of the federal government.

"We want to first be able to relieve the university and myself of any liability for the students and the actions," he said.

Additionally, he said they are requesting at least $20,000 for the services SAD would perform. This money, he said, would be given to the students in the form of an hourly wage. Schbley said Osborne County should help fund the project, since they have been receiving money from the Drug Enforcement Agency's Crop Eradication Funds.

Before students could begin, the DEA would train the students in several work sessions.

During the action, Schbley said he would escort students on and off the site, and he would supervise and control the actions.

SAD will use three different methods to rid the fields of the marijuana plants, depending on the condition and geographical elements of the land.

They will spray chemicals or use controlled fire if the plants are not located within 200 feet of a water table. In areas where fire and chemicals are unsafe, the group will pull the plants by hand.

Schbley said he has worked on this idea since late last spring when he discovered the fields while hunting turkeys with a student.

Later, he flew over the fields to confirm the site of the fields with the plants.

Goulds Memorial established in honor of father

By Dawn Hansen
Senior copy editor

A new scholarship in international studies has been established by Larry Gould, executive assistant to the president, and his wife, Eva.

The scholarship was established in memory of Gould's father, Lawrence V. Gould Sr.

"I basically created the scholarship in memory of my father because he was very committed to my education," Gould said.

Gould said freedom was important to his father.

"Freedom was very important to him as a value. As a youth he provided me with a great deal of freedom to do whatever I wanted to do and he felt education was another way for me to further my appreciation of freedom.

"He always told me freedom equals the opportunity to choose, and the more education you have, the more choices you have," he said.

The scholarship was established to further carry out his father's belief, Gould said.

"I wanted to be able to continue the help he provided me by helping other students," he said.

To qualify for the Gould scholarship, students must meet the following criteria:

- be juniors or seniors;
- be majoring in political science/international relations;
- have a minimum 2.5 grade point average; and
- have completed two courses in international relations and commit to the completion of one additional course.

The first of the scholarships will be given next fall, Gould said.

"Right now the scholarship is $100 per year, but what we ultimately want to do is endow it with a principle of $2000 which means $200 every year in perpetuity. It will be a permanently endowed scholarship," Gould said.

Spillane to visit Hays

By Beth Brungardt
Staff writer

Mickey Spillane, author and former Fort Hays State student will once again attend FHSU Homecoming festivities.

"He's one of our most visible alumni," President Edward Hammond said.

Since Spillane's first return trip to Fort Hays State two years ago for Oktoberfest and Homecoming activities, Hammond has encouraged the famous mystery writer to make additional visits, and he will be here for this year's Homecoming festivities.

Spillane, the creator of Mike Hammer, who attended FHSU from 1939-1940, will arrive Sept. 29 and stay through Oct. 5. Spillane is paying his own expenses.

Hammond said Spillane "appreciates the value structure in the Midwest," and FHSU exemplifies those qualities.

Since Spillane's 1988 visit, he and Hammond have kept in regular contact. While on the East Coast, Hammond and wife, Vivian, have met with Spillane and his wife, Jane.

"(We) hit it off real well," Hammond said of his first meeting with Spillane.

Hammond invited Spillane to stay with him and his family while in Hays. Spillane will have overnight accommodations in a local motel the first two days with his Phi Delta Chi fraternity brothers. The rest of the week, Hammond will be his host.

While here, Spillane will speak to the English Club at 1:30 p.m., Oct. 1 in the Memorial Union.

"He will speak about publications to the English students. And then we'll have an open floor for questions," Kris Bair, English Club sponsor, said. The public is invited.

Spillane will also do a videotape for the university and Hammond said if any students want to personally meet with the author about writing, Spillane could arrange to stay longer.

The parade committee asked Spillane to be grand marshal, but Spillane declined, saying they have more important people around here to choose from.

Meanwhile, the mystery and children's books writer said he is perfectly content riding with his fraternity brothers.

Week-long postponement ends; student radio back in action

By Andy Addis
Managing editor

Despite a week long delay in getting on the air, KFHS radio debuted its album rock format at 2 p.m. yesterday.

"Right now, we're a lot further ahead of where we were last semester. We're on the air sooner and a lot more professional," Mike Brown, Valley Center senior, said.

The station, 600 AM on campus and 94.9 Cable FM off campus, was originally scheduled to begin active program Sept. 10, but time needed for additional programming pushed that date back to yesterday.

The television station still awaits word from the learning channel to set a start date.

"I don't think it (the delay) was really detrimental at all. I think the only thing that may have been harmed by putting it back was our egos," Brown said.

"Putting it back the extra week helped us get better prepared. If we had gone on our original date we would have been bareheaded, unprofessional and our sound wouldn't really be good at all," Brown said.

The station is basically album rock or straight rock, and is trying to stay away from techno-pop, synthesizer music.

The programming also consists of news and sports updates, and most of the material is written by Radio/TV students.

"How we do on the first day is usually indicative of how we're going to do the rest of the semester," Ed Jarmer, Cunningham sophomore, said. "So far, we're doing pretty well."

Brown, who was the first live voice on KFHS, said although he had "the jitters and butterflies" in his stomach, he seemed to get the semester started right.

Free expression

American attitudes restrictive to free society

In days past, patriots proclaimed "I may not agree with what you have to say, but I will defend your right to say it."

Today, Americans tend to say "You don't agree with what I say, so you shouldn't have the right to say it."

A recent poll by the Thomas Jefferson Center for Protection of Free Expression shows that is what Americans are beginning to think, however. In the survey, more than half of the 1,500 people surveyed said the government should have the authority to ban the sale or broadcast of recordings that favor drug use or contain sexually explicit lyrics; about 30 percent believed the First Amendment does not guarantee free speech to art, film, music, radio, television, plays, photographs or newspapers; 72 percent opposed spending tax funds on "objectionable" art, films or plays.

It is the media that, throughout American history, has defined the limits of free speech more than private individuals or groups. In the founding days of this country, newspapers were a forum for the political views of their publishers throughout every page. Artists have shaped as well as reflected the moods and accepted standards of society. From ragtime to rock 'n' roll to rap, music has reflected the attitudes of youth.

To censor any of those, or suppress the work of those in the media in any way, is to muzzle the expressions of all. When there are laws and court decisions against burning the flag, recording a song, printing or broadcasting a news story, or banning an art or photography exhibit, we all suffer. What applies to one applies to all.

The solution to so-called abuses of the First Amendment is not to scream "obscenity" but to take simple precautions. If you don't like it don't listen to it. Don't read it. Don't watch it. Turn it off. Turn the page. Change the channel. Don't buy the ticket. Retain values of family and religion, and pass them on to the children.

America is an individualistic society, but individualism can only go so far in ensuring our rights. If we expect to remain the free society that the rest of the world has looked to for 200 years, we must remember the rights guaranteed in the amendments to the Constitution were created for "We, the people," not "Me, the person."

Opinion

MEANWHILE, FOR THE BENEFIT OF HIS STUDENTS,
A PROFESSOR REVIEWS HIS SYLLABUS...

Mutual respect key to male-female relations

Webster defines a friend as "one attached to another by affection or esteem." Webster further defines affection as "a moderate feeling of emotion" and esteem as "high regard" for another individual.

The question at hand is can a man and a woman be just friends? Can a man and woman sustain a fruitful and fulfilling friendship as defined by Webster? In my opinion, it is a very rare occasion.

In society today, women are portrayed as sex objects. A woman's body is used to sell everything from shaving cream to automobiles.

For this reason I believe that it makes it virtually impossible for a true friendship to occur between individuals of the opposite sex. Now this is not to say that true friendships do not occur at all, it is simply rare.

Men have a difficult time not perceiving women as objects when women so readily allow themselves to be exploited in this manner.

Men tend to render an impression of a woman based solely upon her appearance. This of course springs from the fact that women in society now dress more provocatively than they have in the past.

This in turn makes it difficult for a man to base his opinion of a woman on her personality, intelligence and overall qualities first and foremost.

Physical attraction is the main reason men and women have an extremely difficult time maintaining quality friendships. Both men and women need to base long-term friendships and relationships on a more solid foundation.

Mutual agreement on moral values, interests, hobbies, educational goals, religious beliefs and family importance are some areas men and women have to talk about and concentrate on to develop long-lasting friendships.

Sexual attraction and intimacy can ruin a friendship if that attraction dominates the relationship or is the only common interest shared between a man and a woman.

Friendship among individuals of the same gender does not have to deal with the aspect of sexual attraction. This allows an atmosphere of trust and honesty where true friendship can blossom and grow.

For those who find it easy to debate this point of view, I suggest watching the movie "When Harry Met Sally." It depicts the point that women and men are incapable of sustaining a "just friends" relationship.

It is hard for men to look at an attractive woman and hope to become friends without the underlying desire to have sexual relations. This is brought on by society and how women are portrayed.

There seems to be a lack of mutual respect, and without it this important aspect of a friendship cannot develop.

I should hope that with the onset of sexually transmitted diseases, especially Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, that men and women alike will take the opportunity to learn how to be "just friends" until something more develops and a monogamous relationship can be found and nurtured.

Christina Humphrey
Sports editor

Perhaps there is an ulterior reason that AIDS has entered society at this time. Perhaps someone of a much higher power realizes we need to once again re-evaluate our morals and virtues.

Residence halls offer reasons for better living

Being a freshman I really don't want to complain about anything too loudly, but something has happened to me that has really tormented me off.

I am upset with the way things are run in the Student Residential Life Office concerning living in the residence halls and moving out.

I am currently pledging the Sigma Chi fraternity. I decided it would be to my advantage if I moved out of the residence hall and into the house. The people in the Residential Life Office don't seem to agree with my opinion though.

When I made the decision to move out of the residence halls, I went and talked it over with the people in Residential Life.

I told them I understood the fact it would cost money to break my contract, but that didn't bother me. They told me it wasn't possible and I would have to stay in the residence halls until semester.

I did sign a contract, but I don't understand what the big hairy deal is. I guess it wouldn't be that bad if the residence halls were maintained just a little bit better.

Really, though, I can't think of any reasons to move out of the hall. I am sure it's not because I have to walk up a zillion flights of stairs to get to my room.

Oh yes, we do have elevators — when they work. But do you really want to ride a 4-foot wide, 4-foot deep, 10-foot high box that people urinate in two or three times a day?

I am sure it's not because I like to walk around in the morning on a nice cold, hard floor. Yeah, we can put carpet in our rooms, if we can afford it. Granted this is not a great expense, but I have seen a lot of colleges where this is provided.

I am sure it's not because I have mice that run around my room. No, I really like the added effect of having pets in my room. They're such cute little guys.

I am sure it's not because of the gourmet meals we are served. I can't think of anything that describes the things that crawl around in the serving trays at lunch.

I am sure it's not because I have to park two blocks away from the residence halls. Unless of course I want to park in the back "staff" parking lot. This one really stumps me. There are at least 20 parking stalls back there that are never used.

I am sure that it is not because I get to wake up every morning and look up on my wall and see the words "Huskers #1 at sucking ____" (I'll let you fill in the blank). Trust me, it's there! This wouldn't be that bad, but I've asked around and it has been there for a good three to four years.

These things really wouldn't upset me all that much if there wasn't money around to take care of the problems, but there has to be.

I pay around $270 a month to live in that building. I don't know exactly where all the money goes, but it sure isn't going where, in my opinion, it should be.

Professor earns trip Down Under Hassett to present dissertation in Australia

By Dawn Hansen
Senior copy editor

Mary Hassett, associate professor of nursing, will present the results of her dissertation on computer-based video instruction at "Nursing Informatics '91" in Melbourne, Australia this April. Hassett said she wrote her own program for the research.

"I wrote my own CBVI program on spiritual assessment of the patient. It assesses for unmet spiritual needs," she said.

Hassett said she wanted to teach students how to recognize whether a patient had unmet spiritual needs.

"We do teach spiritual care of the patient here. We teach the holistic approach. We believe in man as a blending of body, mind and spirit," she said.

However, the course cannot actually be taught through the nursing department yet, Hassett said.

"This program will be a piece of another course. We don't have a CBVI environment on campus yet, so my program can't be run here yet," she said.

"But the school of education will be getting the equipment soon."

Hassett said she studied certain personality types in her research and was researching the differences in learner control preferences between the two types.

"What I studied was psychological types, sensitive and intuitive. I wanted to see which types preferred learner control," she said.

"I was allowing the learner to decide whether they wanted control over the program or whether they preferred to let the teacher control the situation."

Hassett said she was surprised not to find any difference between the two types.

"I only had 32 subjects, total, so I may not have had a big enough group. Also, it was something new, so perhaps that also affected the results," she said.

Hassett said she is looking forward to the trip to Australia.

"I'm so excited. I've never been to Australia. I also have a colleague who is in Australia now. I certainly never expected I'd know anyone there."

"It's an international conference looking at research, practice and education. Just to see colleagues from all over the world that are interested in informatics is exciting," she said.

Hassett said she has not had many computer courses, but she used her own model for writing up her program.

"I took a couple of computer courses, but I learned most of my computer stuff here at FHSU. I wrote the program and acted in a few of the videos."

"I also developed my own model for writing up the CBVI program. I had a hand in all of it," she said. "It was a very big project."

If the government does not accept the liability, SAD will shift from being an action-taking force to an organizational liaison between the government and the National Guard, a group who said he will be able to clear the fields instead.

"The Model U.N. will play the role between the two federal units and coordinate the actions. But it might be awhile before we know."

"The federal government moves slowly, especially where liability is concerned," Schbley said.

If the first two plans are not cleared, Schbley said SAD will sponsor an investigation to find where the crops are and where the money earned from the crops goes.

"But the students say that doing away with the problem will not occur through paperwork. It will only occur by eradicating the fields of the plants," he said.

Schbley said the name of the group is indicative of the students' sentiment toward the drug problem. With this in mind, he said the students are taking such actions.

"The students think that saying no is not enough," Schbley said. "Students want to take the lead on the war on drugs in the state and the nation."

Tiger football team captures its second victory

The Tigers football team captured their second win of the season Saturday night when they beat the Cameron Aggies 28-6.

Cameron got on the scoreboard first when the Aggies got a 28-yard field goal to go up on the Tigers 3-0.

The Cameron drive started on their own 39 yard line and made it all the way to the Tigers 10 yard line before the FHSU defense held the Aggies.

The Tigers got on the scoreboard for the first time late in the first quarter when Bryan Maring, Salina senior, connected with tight end Chris Capettini, Wheat Ridge, Colo., junior, for a 27 yard touchdown pass giving the Tigers a 7-3 lead.

The Tigers got on the board again in the second quarter when they put together an eight-play drive covering 74 yards. Tailback Demond Rivera, Colorado Springs, Colo., freshman, capped off the drive with a 24-yard run with 7:50 left in the second quarter making the score 14-3.

The Aggies came back on the ensuing possession. The Aggies put together a 10-play drive starting from their own 33 yard line. Once again, the Tigers defense proved tough inside their twenty and the Aggies had to settle for another 28-yard field goal making the score 14-6 in favor of the Tigers.

The Tigers put together another drive late in the third quarter when FHSU got the ball on their own 40 yard line. They drove down to the Aggies 20 yard line before stalling.

Roy Miller, Sheridan, Colo., sophomore, kicked a field goal with 4:27 left in the third quarter, making the score 17-6.

On the following possession, the Aggies connected for a 79-yard pass-play for what appeared to be a touchdown, but Cameron was flagged for holding on the play and the touchdown was called back.

The Aggies went to the air again on the following play, but the Tigers' outside linebacker, Mike Allen, Denver Colo., senior, made his 12th career interception giving the Tigers the ball on the Aggies 14 yard line.

Allen's interception moved him into first on the all-time FHSU interception list.

The Tigers and Aggies defenses took turns showing their talents in the fourth quarter. Neither team earned a first down until late in the quarter when the Aggies earned two first downs with a desperation drive at the end of the game.

In the middle of the defensive struggle, Allen returned his second interception of the game 24 yards for the last Tiger touchdown of the game.

Maring connected with wingback John Ruder, Victoria sophomore, on the two-point conversion with 4:51 on the clock, to virtually put the game out of reach for Cameron with the score reaching 28-6.

The Tigers received 11 first downs in the game. They earned a total of 207 yards with 73 yards coming on the ground and the other 134 through the air. They were penalized twice for 15 yards.

The Aggies had nine first downs during the game. They received 199 total yards, 80 yards came on the ground and the remaining 119 came from the passing game. Cameron lost 60 yards on seven penalties.

The Tigers next opponent is Adams State.

Lady Tigers bounce back, win six out of seven games

The Fort Hays State Lady Tigers volleyball team played at the McPherson Invitational last Friday and Saturday, Sept. 14 and 15, and walked off the court with six wins out of seven games and an 11-9 record overall and a 6-3 district record.

"There were no trophies awarded in this tournament, everything was based on win-loss," Head Coach Jody Wise said.

Central State University (Okla.) and FHSU both went 6-1 in the invitational but FHSU emerged victorious over Central State making the Tigers the winners of the tournament.

On Friday, the Lady Tigers played three matches sweeping all three. The Tigers easily handled Tarkio College in two games, both with scores of 15-5.

Angel Sharman, Lodgepole, Neb., junior led the hitting with 7-9 and 4 kills. Niki Mock, Plainville freshman, was 5-6 with 3 kills.

Robin Booth, Torrington, Wyo., senior, had a perfect setting game with 17-17 with 9 assists. Mock and Aimee McKee, Goodland freshman, went 8-8 serving with 3 and 1 aces, respectively.

The Lady Tigers defeated McPherson College 15-9 and 15-13.

It took three games for the Lady Tigers to conquer Concordia (Neb.) College, 15-11, 13-15 and 15-9.

Mock led the hitting with 35-36 and 19 kills. Werner was 17-18.

Lewandowski had a perfect serving game 15-15. Sharman was 21-22.

On Saturday, the team played four matches picking up their only loss of the weekend.

The Lady Tigers took control to overpower Mid America Nazarene, 15-6, 11-15, and 15-5.

Sharman was the leading hitter, 15-16 with 6 kills. Werner was 18-22 with 6 kills.

The Tigers' only loss of the invitational went to Baker College in a tough match with scores of 18-16, 10-15 and 15-1. Baker went on to take third in the invitational.

Wise said the team's worst game was against Baker College.

"Our loss to Baker was our worst match of the weekend. It was a district match that we had hoped to win," she said.

FHSU took the Central State match with scores of 7-15, 18-16 and 15-9.

Wise said the team played well during the tournament.

"Overall we played very good volleyball this weekend. Our best played match was against Central State," she said.

Mock was 38-38 hitting with 19 kills. Booth was 59-64 setting with 19 assists and Sharman was 18-18 serving with 17 digs.

Wise and assistant coach, Meg Hurley, said they were very pleased with Mock's performance.

"We were pleased with the play of freshman Niki Mock," Hurley said.

In their last game the Tigers came away with their final victory of the invitational, taking the match against Park (Mo.) College in two games, 15-5 and 15-7.

"Everyone got to play but we played our starting line-up more so they could get more experience playing together."

"It was a positive thing to go 6-1. Now we'll go into tonight's match against St. Mary's on a winning note. It also gives us confidence for this weekend's conference matches," Wise said.

All of the Lady Tigers are healthy as they look towards upcoming matches. Marlys Gwaltney was the only player injured in the invitational but she will still be able to play in tonight's match.

The Lady Tigers played St. Mary of the Plains last night. They will play in the RMAC Round 1 at Durango, Co., all day Friday and Saturday.
