FHSU sends delegation of 13 to ASK Lobby Day

Representatives from six Kansas universities met at the state capital yesterday to present the concerns of students to legislators.

The Associated Students of Kansas discussed issues of importance to higher education including base budgets, the third year funding of the Margin of Excellence, the Youth Education Service program and fee waivers for graduate teaching assistants.

Fort Hays State sent a delegation of thirteen which included Andrew Irwin, FHSU ASK director; Coy Martin, ASK assistant director;

Erik Sandstrom, student body president; Scott Jecha, student body vice president; and Grant Bannister, administrative assistant.

Timothy Nimz, executive director of ASK, said he was pleased with the day and he thought it went as well as could be expected.

"Given the economic conditions that we're going to be dealing with this year, I think it was fairly successful," he said. "I think most legislators are accessible and willing to discuss the plans that we've got, it's just a question of whether or not we're going to be able to get any money out of anyone."

Although the overall view of the day was positive, some doubts about the ability of the legislators to find enough funding for the proposed programs were expressed.

"Our reception was pretty lukewarm I would say," Jecha said. "Most representatives seem leery of Finney's tax plan and are unwilling to commit on the Margin of Excellence."

"The general perception that I have so far of the Margin being passed is dimmer than last year at this time," he said. "It's still too early to tell about what will happen until we know more about the tax situation. If the money's not there they can't fund it no matter how important it might be."

Sandstrom said he thinks the programs would be funded if the legislators could come up with an agreement on a plan to find new sources of revenue.

"I believe the fate of the Margin of Excellence rests with the ability of the legislature to find a tax plan that it will support and at the same time increase revenue," he said.

"The only way the Margin will find third year funding from the legislature is if the revenue dilemma is solved, which appears a long way off," Sandstrom said.

The YES program is also facing a cut in funding. However, ASK is looking to get the program recognized as a statutory program as the first step to expansion, Kriste Wardell, ASK legislative director, said.

"As far as the YES program is concerned, I think chances are good for it being established as a state statute, but maybe not in getting increased funding," she said.

While visiting with legislators, some students were asked where ASK suggested they get the funds for the programs, Sandstrom said.

"ASK has taken a position that we will not take sides on the revenue issue," he said.

The students were at the capital to present the programs they thought needed to be funded and let the legislators find the resources, Sandstrom said.

Off-campus classes excluded from funding

Cheryl Milam
Staff writer

Starting the Fall 1991 semester, the Financial Assistance Office will only pay for hours taken through Fort Hays State.

Karl Metzger, director of student financial assistance, said in the past they allowed students to take off-campus courses in surrounding area schools for credit to be transferred to FHSU.

"Some students will enroll in nine hours at FHSU, which would be three-quarter time, and take an extra three hours off-campus to bring them up to full-time," Metzger said.

He said they would still be paying for the telenet classes in continuing education along with the radiation technology programs because they are seeking a degree from FHSU.

"Fort Hays State is not receiving the money for the off-campus classes. They are getting paid out of Federal funds to take classes somewhere else," Metzger said.

"We will pay for the Kansas State social work program because we have a consortium agreement with K-State," Judy Getty, director of loans and grants said.

"We're only responsible for Fort Hays State enrollment," Getty said.

She said she did not know why FHSU started accepting off-campus hours. She said none of the other universities accept off-campus hours.

"They don't count hours at another school because they would have to prove that a student is actually taking a class," Getty said.

She said there was no way to check if the student was attending class or if he/she dropped it.

Getty said many students would drop three or six hours at FHSU and take them somewhere else and that put a lot of burden on her office to check on them.

"We just don't have any way to document the classes until the end of the semester and by then they are in repayment," Getty said.

She said they had more students taking off-campus classes than ever before.

"When the Federal Government gives us the money to give to students, we have to be able to document that student was enrolled in the required 12 hours," Getty said.

"It has been a real hassle trying to keep track of who is enrolled where," Janet Koerner, student aid administration, said.

Koerner said the change will really lighten her work load because she was always sending paperwork to these students to sign.

"To me it doesn't seem fair to pay someone to go somewhere else," Koerner said.

Getty said the options for financing the off-campus classes would be either to apply for financial assistance at the half-time rate through the other college as well as FHSU, or pay for the class themselves.

"The financial assistance office is responsible for the awarding and the overawards but the collection is my responsibility," Getty said.

"It is fraud, it is misuse of Federal funds," Getty said.

The Fort Hays State symphonic band and concert choir took to the stage early in the rededication ceremonies of the newly renovated Sheridan Hall. The groups performed three patriotic numbers to open and close the speaking portions of the ceremony.

Cooperative learning topic of lectures

Madeline Holler
Staff writer

Nearly half the seats in the Beach/Schmidt Performing Arts Center will be filled next week during one of the building's first mainstream events.

Consultants and policy makers of education will help Fort Hays State education students more fully understand cooperative learning and its applications and current federal education policies in two lectures, 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. Tuesday, Feb. 18.

The lectures are sponsored by the School of Education but all students and faculty are welcome to attend.

Leonard Haynes, assistant secretary for postsecondary education in the U.S. department of education, speaks at 3 p.m.

Mary Hoy, dean of education, said Haynes, one of the leading officials in the U.S. department of education, was encouraged by Sen. Bob Dole, R-Russell, to speak at the lecture.

"It's a thrill to have someone of this caliber coming to campus," Hoy said.

Hoy said Haynes will talk in general about education issues and how these issues affect the grades kindergarten through 12.

"I've heard Dr. Haynes is a very dynamic speaker," Hoy said. "He would be something anyone on campus would enjoy listening to."

Kicking off the day of education lectures will be Linda Munger, director of educational support services in Ames, Iowa. Hoy said Munger will address cooperative learning and its applications as an effective teaching strategy.

Cooperative learning, Hoy said, takes students and puts them in a non-competitive environment. As a result of the low pressure in the environment, students begin to support each other's learning instead of working against it.

"The students work in assigned groups where students who are strong in a particular area are assigned to students who are weak in that area," she said.

These students assist one another to gain competence, make group decisions and learn interpersonal skills, Hoy said.

"This is one of the current effective methods teachers are using," she said.

She said the department of education has worked cooperative learning into its education program.

"Cooperative learning is something for all levels of education," Hoy said. "It can be applied by everyone from kindergarten teachers to high school coaches."

SI to continue despite low funds

Supplemental Instruction revised its program to keep sessions going after having some financial difficulty at the beginning of the semester.

"The difficulty had been that there was an increase in minimum wage ... and of course that's going to happen this year too."

Edward Tejeda, S.I. advisor, said this year's increase could affect the whole campus, including the S.I. program.

"(When) the minimum wage increases, then your total dollar amount decreases because you have to pay more per hour."

"What that meant was that it put a crunch on student salary budgets across campus, including the salary budget for the S.I. program," he said.

Knowing the problems were coming, S.I. had to do some re-scheduling.

"What we did was we looked at the different courses and we ended up being able to service almost all of our courses that we had previously with the exception of maybe one or two," he said.

Tejeda said S.I. combined some of their study sessions to help reduce cost.

"Let's say professor X is teaching section A and section D, we provide direct services to section A, let's say the professor teaches the same course at the same rate (as another professor) ... then the students in section D are invited to come to the study review session."

"So in that sense, we end up covering five more additional sessions if those invited (to the) sessions can attend. That's another way for us to stretch our dollars," Tejeda said.

He said this plan is different than others used before.

"What has happened in the past (after wage increases), instead of having student number one in section A and student number two in section D, now what we're doing is providing services to section one and not having a totally different student," Tejeda said.

Bill Culver, S.I. leader in Logic, said the program is beneficial to all students who take it seriously.

He said if Logic were ousted, "teachers would have to move slower," during class due to the lack of outside help.

"It would be detrimental to the overall grades across campus," he said.

KSPA contest draws high-school students

High-school journalism students throughout Western Kansas will converge on Fort Hays State tomorrow for annual competition.

The event takes place from 9:30 a.m. to 12:40 p.m. Thursday in the Memorial Union.

Organizers expect about 500 students to participate in the regional contest of the Kansas Scholastic Press Association. The contest is divided into 13 categories of journalistic competition.

Serjit Kaisor, contest director, compared the contest events to a test, both of knowledge and talent.

Competition will revolve around the writing categories of news, sports, features and editorials. Separate categories include editing and photography.

Students placing in the top three spots have the chance to compete at the state level next April at the University of Kansas.

Kaisor, first year director of the contest, set up the operation by delegating duties more evenly than in recent years. Past events have been organized and run by a skeleton crew.

"It's a very good learning experience for me," she said. "I have never taught in high schools or grade schools in America. This at least gives me an idea of the students."

According to Kaisor, the contest is designed to challenge and inspire high-school journalists to hone their talents and carry on their work in journalism.

Art professor one of seven selected for governor's creative achievement award

Sarah Simpson
Staff writer

Michael Jilg, professor of art has been selected as a recipient of the Governor's Arts Award.

This award is based on creative achievements or contributions to cultural growth in Kansas. Individuals, foundations, corporations and arts organizations are eligible.

Seven recipients are chosen each year. Each must be nominated by the public and selected by a panel of peers from the Kansas Arts Commission.

This year's winners include Jilg, Margaret Pitzer, Wichita; Edward Grisnik, Kansas City; Helicon Nine, Inc., Shawnee Mission; Lawrence Arts Center, Lawrence; Salina Arts and Humanities Commission, Salina; and Bayer

Stone, Inc., St. Marys.

Joanne Harwick, acting chair of the Fort Hays State art department, said she nominated Jilg because of his "outstanding artistic ability."

"He's good in several parts of the field," Harwick said, "he's an individual that contributes to the community, the university and the art world."

Jilg received his bachelor of arts and master of arts degrees at FHSU. He did post-graduate studies at Kent State (Ohio) University after which he received his master of Fine Arts degree from Wichita State University.

Jilg began teaching at FHSU in 1981 when he was chosen to replace another art teacher. Though he was only to teach for one year, "I liked it, so I stayed," Jilg said.

"I was the only one around who was qualified and I liked teaching," Jilg said. "When they asked me to stay, I did."

Jilg has gained national and international recognition for his drawing, painting and printmaking and has art exhibited in Oklahoma City, Okla., Chicago, Wichita and Lindsborg.

Jilg is also a member of the Kansas Watercolor Society, the Philadelphia Print Club, the Boston

Printmakers Society and a board member of the Hays Arts Council.

Jilg said he chose art as his way of life because it "seems like a noble way to spend life."

The Governor's Arts Awards will be presented from 2 to 3:30 p.m. next Monday in the Rotunda of the State Capitol. Examples of Jilg's work will be on display during the ceremonies. The public is invited to attend.

ASK lobby day

Education issues still within reach

Thirteen of Fort Hays State's finest traveled to Topeka Monday for the Associated Students of Kansas Lobby Day. They went with hopes of swaying the state's legislature to avoid support of education, and as always, were confused, inspired and disappointed in the process.

Erik Sandstrom, student body president, said it was too early to be pessimistic, but current indicators don't show the legislature making much headway in the current session concerning student issues.

Still, hope remains for the education minded in 1991.

Though Gov. Joan Finney's budget proposal calls for substantial increases in secondary education across the state, visitors to the state capital yesterday saw less hope for funding to higher education, Tim Nimz, state ASK director, said. The expectation came from a variety of factors, but one was dominant, an issue from the past that continues to take time and energy away from the legislature.

Property taxes will again be an issue to cloud the way to educational reforms, as were in the prior administration of Mike Hayden. But this time, the fog needs to be cleared so the needs of Kansas' schools and universities will receive the attention needed after many seasons of neglect.

As all issues do, the advance of education in the state of Kansas depends on the finances provided by the state. From the burdening issue of qualified admission to finally receiving the third year funding for the Margin of Excellence, Kansas needs a full, concentrated effort in the direction of education reforms.

Many students have become discouraged with last year's efforts in letter writing and lobbying, encouraging state representatives to push for the Margin, but this year is different.

A workable plan is on the table, more than the wing-and-a-prayer depended on last year.

Spare second relieves stress

Usually the radio and the television are easy outs to escape the stress and strain of class and work, but no more.

Compounding the intensity of everyday personal problems are the bleak forecasts of lost lives and the ecological holocaust seen on the evening news. Not since the spring semester of 1975 have students had to deal with all of life, plus a war so many thousands of miles away.

Over the weekend, thousands of demonstrators from the Apostolic Christian Church of Hutchinson to the American Legion of Washington D.C., walked the streets to show support for the soldiers in the Persian Gulf area, and across the street was opposition.

For students participating, or just watching, the stress of war and school is becoming too much.

Living in the residence halls, it's easy to see lights on later into the night, groups gathered in the lounge during late night news shows and the discussion among residents violently swing from that day's pranks to pity for captured allied pilots.

Andy Addis
Editor in chief

An appropriate outlet is much needed.

Refraining from petty vandalism at West Hall, excessive drinking at any number of spots in Hays or just worrying, students seek some kind of release to the pressures put on by such an infamous semester.

In this year of stress, the world has given a blessing, small as it is.

The rotation of the earth, according to some authorities, is off, and these authorities said in order to keep things in the perfect order maintained by the calendar for the last several thousand years, one second must be added to 1991.

Quite possibly, no one suffered from an uncontrollable urge to bump their clocks up one second when the clock struck midnight Jan. 1. Thus, people everywhere have a second to spare this year.

Some can save the gift of time so that when someone asks if they "have a second?" They can gladly give it away. Others can keep the gift to use when that moment comes to "give me a second."

Either way, the concept is there. Between classes and special reports, at some point this year, everyone in the world has a second to use.

True, claiming that one second can make a difference in someone's life is a little exaggerated, but in theory, a point is made.

Stress comes to students of all ages and just because a war is happening thousands of miles away, there will be no easing in the problems of everyday life. To avoid anxiety, hypertension and other stress disorders, one needs to make a personal promise in a hectic season of undetermined length.

Take time out to seek consolation with friends, your church or just take time to think and process the barrage of information handed to you daily. Things are rough, but the right attitude can ease the strain.

Bartending drains worker

It is incredibly difficult to convey the wide array of emotions one experiences working in a bar. Last Saturday I felt like I experienced nearly all of them.

The day started pleasantly enough with a 10 a.m. wake-up call followed by a 15 minute tirade from my boss, who was slightly perturbed with my inability to remember to shut off our deep-fat fryer the night before, thus almost adding another bar destroyed by fire in the Hays area.

That would have been tragically ironic considering that our establishment has been prospering remarkably as much of our competition goes up in flames.

Following the phone call I reported to work with little enthusiasm.

The shift started off splendidly as

Mark Dolezal
Staff writer

my first table failed to remember that it was customary to tip your waiter, particularly, after running up an $80 tab of food and drinks.

After this unpleasant episode I experienced that dreaded emotion ... hate.

I also had a table of thirty alcoholics, celebrating somebody's birthday. These professional drunks were inhaling drinks as if Prohibition was going to go into effect the next day.

One slobbering inebriate shrieked at me, "Where in the ____ is my damn beer!" Followed by more expletives too offending to even hint at. I calmly told him that I would be back with his beer as soon as I possibly could.

What I wanted to give him was a Budweiser enema and punt his inbred butt out the front door.

Following this episode I began experiencing intense frustration.

Just as I began to look back on my days of flipping hamburgers at McDonald's with envy, a horribly intoxicated man gave me a $40 dollar tip and told me what a great waiter I had been. I'd wager that he was probably just too drunk to count currency.

Elation was the emotion that I experienced now.

My mood was markedly better following this. My boss did chastise me somewhat after finding me dancing with an attractive customer (whom I was experiencing lust with) instead of earning my hourly wage.

The evening climaxed at around 1:30 a.m. when some intensely obese woman had discovered that her stomach was too full of alcohol to digest anymore. To make extra room, she expelled the contents of her stomach all over the table, much to my chagrin.

Disgust concluded my ride on the emotional roller-coaster.

Employment in a bar is rarely pleasant, seldom easy, but it is never, never, ever, boring.

Valentine's Day filled with colorful history

Tomorrow is St. Valentine's Day. On that day, millions of Valentine cards will be sent out to people of the opposite sex. And I for one will be watching my mailbox.

The Valentine card, once individually written and now mass produced, are light-hearted missiles of love. Either in prose or in rhyme, they voice amorous feeling. Mostly they are humorous, sometimes vulgar and often accompanied by illustrations.

How did this St. Valentine become so famous?

It is all a play of love, strongly spiced with sentimentality and fun.

Who would think that this gay and harmless custom of budding romance began many thousands of years ago? It has its origins in pagan tradition about the love-life of birds, ancient lottery for sweethearts, and most of all, the martyr's death of a Christian bishop.

Long before the advent of Christianity, the middle of February was considered

Leroy Wilson
Staff writer

propitious for love. It was the season of Spring and birds started mating.

Roman mythology associated the day with the goddess Juno, worshipped especially by women at all crises of life.

She was the "venerable ox-eyed" wife of Jupiter and the queen of heaven.

Identified with the Greek Hera, she became the guardian of women and marriage, though significantly also a goddess of war.

Part of the pagan ritual honoring Juno was a unique kind of lottery.

Young girls wrote their name on slips of paper and these were placed in a drum from which the boys drew their luck. There were no blanks.

The girls drawn by a young man became his sweetheart until the next annual draw.

All the world loves a lover, and Christianity was unable to uproot a day dedicated to the enjoyment of life and love.

Therefore, the early Church appropriated Feb. 14, for its own calendar, linking it with the martyrdom of St. Valentine.

Originally, Valentine was a pagan priest of third century A.D. He was converted to Christianity and became bishop.

The story is told that at the time Roman Emperor Claudius had decided to abolish the institution of marriage, as he believed husbands did not make good soldiers.

He tried to enforce the new law with the utmost rigor.

Valentine considered such policy against the spirit of God and of human nature. He secretly married young lovers, but not for long.

He was arrested, imprisoned and brutally murdered on Feb. 14, 269 A.D.

Another (and more plausible) account relates Valentine frequently aided persecuted Christians, and it was for this reason he was thrown into prison.

But even there he continued his saintly work, miraculously restoring vision to the gaoler's blind daughter.

But he was doomed. On Feb. 14 he was clubbed to death. The dated coincided with the ancient pagan feast of Juno and ever since has been celebrated as St. Valentine's Day.

But the Church's desire to Christianize pagan practice did not end here.

There was still the most popular part of the feat ... its lottery for love.

Those early theologians were men of the world and certainly did not live in an ivory tower.

They knew only too well that one cannot suppress man's deepest urges, including his love of gambling ... no matter for what.

Therefore, they retained the ancient lottery but changed its prizes.

The names of saints were substituted for those of girls!

Now the lucky winners were expected in the ensuing year to match their own names and the ancient love-play started all over again.

Then the final development took place.

People were no longer satisfied with having their sweethearts chosen for them by chance.

Their own choice, they felt, should take the place of luck.

So, on Feb. 14 they began sending a gift, a card or a set of verses to whomsoever they considered nearest to their heart.

Often the cards were sent anonymously and it was left to the recipient to guess their author.

Their text stated briefly but to the point that "The honey's sweet and so are you" or went into more elaborate and passionate musings.

Those who could not write their own words selected them from specially published handbooks, such as "The Young Man's Valentine Writer," which appeared in 1797.

And that is how, eventually, the printed Valentine card came into existence. Its popularity was greatly fostered by the introduction of cheap postal rates.

It was only the new fashion of Christmas cards that ended the vogue of the Valentine. Though in its small and quiet way, it still survives, hoping perhaps one day to recapture the imagination of young lovers.

chairmen, Gerald Tomanek, former FHSU president, the Rev. William C. Miller, President Edward Hammond, Robert Creighton, Board of Regents chairman and Sen. Gus Bogina, R-Overland Park.

Governor attends Sheridan dedication

Colin McKenney
News editor

After more than 10 years in the making, the project President Edward Hammond suggested was the longest in recent Kansas history came to an end Saturday.

The ceremony to officially open Sheridan Hall spared no expense in the pursuit of a dedication befitting the end of such a major project.

Featuring a large sampling of who's-who in Kansas government, including Gov. Joan Finney, the final surprise of the project was unveiled in front of a crowd of hundreds. The final touch for the new performing arts center was a sculpture created by James Hinkhouse, professor of art, to serve as the centerpiece for the new fountain in front of Sheridan.

Hammond said the sculpture represented the need for "something warm, something beautiful, something lasting" to commemorate the project.

The crowd then proceeded to the Leo J. and Albina Dreiling lobby for the formal unveiling of portraits of the two.

To officially open the Beach/Schmidt Performing Arts Center, the program included performances by the Symphonic Band and Concert Choir preceding speeches by such dignitaries as Finney, Gerald Tomanek, former FHSU president, Sen. Gus Bogina, R-Overland Park, Robert Creighton, Kansas Board of Regents Chairman, and Norbert Dreiling and Robert Schmidt who served as co-chairmen for fundraising.

The highlight of Finney's speech was an invitation extended to the band and choir to perform on the lawn of Cedarcrest, the governor's mansion.

The event ended with the dignitaries disappearing below the stage on the hydraulic orchestra pit as the band played "Home on the Range."

Tomorrow night will mark the first scheduled event for the performing arts center when the encore series, "Into The Woods," is scheduled to perform.

The 1989-'90 staff of "The Reveille," student yearbook, has been bestowed two honors.

The staff received a four-star All-American rating from the Associated Collegiate Press for the '89-'90 student yearbook.

Serjit Kaisor, "Reveille" adviser, said there are five possible marks in the competition and the Reveille staff received top marks in four areas. These include photography, art and graphics display, copy and concept.

This marks the fourth consecutive year this honor has been received by "The Reveille" staff.

The staff also received an honor

Each year, the company puts out an annual volume of yearbook design and copywriting excellence.

Layouts from the 1990 edition of "The Reveille" will appear in the company's 1991 edition of "Yearbook Yearbook."

Madeline Holler, editor in chief of the "1990 Reveille" said the honor was a surprise.

"It's kind of surprising because we had such a young staff. There was a lot of change. We had a new staff and a new adviser. We were constantly teaching new things. But, for the work we put into it, it's nice to see some recognition," she said.

Three new ways to survive college.

With Apple's new stack of three new Macintosh computers, meeting the challenges of college life is a lot easier. Because now everybody can afford a Macintosh.

The Macintosh Classic is our most affordable model yet. Comes with everything you need to create a hard disk drive. The Macintosh IIx combines color capabilities with affordability. And the Macintosh IIx is for the students who need a computer with extra power and expandability.

No matter what Macintosh you choose, you'll have a computer that manages your workload without giving you another tough subject to learn. Every Macintosh computer is easy to set up and even easier to master. And when you've learned one program, you're well on your way to learning them all. That's because thousands of available programs all work in the same consistent manner. You can even share information with someone who uses a different type of computer—thanks to Apple's versatile SuperDrive™, which reads from and writes to Macintosh, MS-DOS, OS/2 and Apple II floppy disks.

See the new Macintosh computers for yourself and find out how surviving college just got a whole lot easier.

Acting career sets scene for designer's talent

Bardwell ready for challenge of state-of-the-art facility

Vicki Schmidtberger
Staff writer

With the Beach/Schmidt Performing Arts Center, in Sheridan Hall, opening soon to the public, work behind the scenes must begin for Fort Hays State faculty and staff in the Theater Department.

One particular faculty member takes a vested interest in the opening of the center.

"I am really excited to work with the equipment over there. It is state of the art equipment that we don't have in Felten-Start. It's all brand new, and I'm looking forward to using it," Bruce Bardwell, technical director, said.

Bardwell said he recently put his professional acting career aside to return to FHSU to pursue his love of technical directing and theater.

"I love the theater here and the people. This gives me a chance to design shows. I love theater, and I love being involved in technical directing," he said.

Bardwell made the move to FHSU last fall after the sudden resignation of Steve Larson, technical director.

"I got a call from Fort Hays State saying that they needed a technical director and designer as well as someone to be the technical director for the new Beach/Schmidt Performing Arts Center," he said.

Bardwell is filling the position of technical director temporarily while a national search for Larson's replacement is conducted.

Though Bardwell is a candidate in the search, the final decision will not be announced until March.

"I'd really like to have the position permanently because of my love of technical directing but also because Hays is comfortable, and the people are friendly. They tend to care more about each other than they do in the city where it is a little faster paced," Bardwell said.

The Kansas City native has been involved in acting since 1978 doing commercials. He recently received his master's degree from FHSU to pursue a career in technical directing.

"Theater kept calling me back, and I have always loved to draw. I wanted to combine my acting and my technical theater so I came to get my master's here," he said.

Since his decision to become a professional actor in 1978, Bardwell has acted in two commercials that were aired nationally, Blockbuster Video and Payless Cash Ways.

"The Blockbuster Video commercial involved an ape beating his chest. I played a construction worker that went into the store and came out with a lot of tapes," Comprising the list of Bardwell's acting credentials are the two national commercials, at least 40 stage shows and several Kansas City commercials.

"I've done about 30 commercials for the Kansas City area over the past year. And I still do commercials there. I fly out if the money is good enough to pay for the plane ticket and make some money," he said.

Bardwell said he hopes he will be able to continue to do commercials when he has breaks from his work as technical director, but prefers working behind the scenes.

"I'm a very private person. I don't like to look at my commercials because I'm my own worst critic. I saw one once," he said.

Bardwell said, though he enjoys working with stage and theater, he does not attend many other stage productions or films because he does not want to be inhibited by them.

"I don't go to a lot of films or plays because sometimes I worry that it will stifle my creativity," he said.

However, Bardwell said his work as an actor helps him identify with the actors on stage and helps him design sets to work with them.

Tiger grapplers qualify for nationals

Harding sets records at NAIA 5 State Area Tourney

Christian D Orr
Sports writer

The Fort Hays State Tigers wrestling squad accomplished its goal for the weekend when they placed all six of their wrestlers in the top three of NAIA Five State Area tournament, qualifying them for the national tournament.

The Tigers Head Coach Wayne Petterson said he was confident going into the tournament that all his wrestlers would qualify for the national tournament considering all the time his squad had to rest.

"Yeah, I was confident. I knew we had to wrestle intense and couldn't relax. I think we wrestled intense enough to qualify all of our guys, but we relaxed at times which cost us some matches we should have won.

"We accomplished our main goal, and in that way we have got to be a little happy, but we lost some matches that we should have won and that concerns me," Petterson said.

The Tigers were led in the tournament by standout West Harding, Salina senior. Harding captured first place in the tournament with a record of 2-0, was named the tournament's most outstanding wrestler and eclipsed two FHSU wrestling records.

With Harding's 6-2 win in the championship match, he eclipsed his own single-season victory record that he earned last season with his 36th win of the season. The victory in the championship match also gave Harding the all-time career victory record.

Harding now stands with 124 career victories at FHSU which eclipsed the previous record of 123 held by Billy Johnson, a four-time NAIA All-American.

Harding was happy about breaking the school records, but he said that performing well right now at nationals is more important than breaking records.

"I'm happy about it, but doing good at nationals is the most important thing for me right now. I think I'm on track of where I want to be, right now I'm just trying to wrestle good and wrestle every match like it was nationals," Harding said.

Harding and A.C. Barker, Manhattan senior, are the only Tigers who qualified for the national tournament prior to Saturday's tournament.

In order to qualify for the national tournament, each wrestler must finish in the top three of their respective weight classes, which the remaining four Tigers were able to do Saturday.

The Tigers had two wrestlers bring home first place medals, three wrestlers capture second place medals and one wrestler earn a third place medal.

Harding captured the championship in the 134 pound weight class while Lance Walker, Manhattan senior, captured the championship in the 158 pound weight class.

Walker's tournament victory was his first of the 1990-'91 season. He entered the tournament as the fourth seed. He beat the fifth seed in the semi-finals, who had upset the first seeded wrestler in the opening round. Then he knocked off the second seeded wrestler in the championship match.

Capturing second place medals for the Tigers included Don Riedinger, Easton sophomore, who had a record of 1-1 in the 142 pound weight class; Scott Reick, Leavenworth junior, in the 150 pound weight class with a 2-1 record; and Barker who finished second in the 190 pound weight category with a 1-1 record.

Robbie Dulling, Wichita junior, captured third place in the tournament by going 2-1 in the 177 pound weight class.

The Tigers, who finished third in the team scoring at the area meet, next outing is Monday, when they travel to Chadron, Neb., for the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference Championships.

Since the entire team is qualified for the national tournament, Petterson said he is hoping to use the RMAC championship tournament as a stepping stone to the national tournament.

"The pressure is off the kids to qualify, now we can focus on using the conference meet as a major stepping stone to the national meet. The RMAC is probably one of the toughest conferences in athletics and if it (the tournament) is used properly, it can be effective stepping stone into the national tournament," Petterson said.

The next outing for the Tiger wrestling squad is the RMAC Championship Monday, in Chadron, Neb.

Intramural league standings announced

Greg McFadden
Sports writer

Block and Bridle and Who Cares? Run and Gun leads the 8:30 p.m. men's league by winning four and losing none.

The Homeboys 1, 4-0, are holding a one game advantage over the Jurks, 3-1, for 1st place in the 9:15 p.m. league.

Wednesday's 7:45 p.m. men's league has two teams occupying 1st place at a 4-0 record, the Roaches and the Jurks II.

In the 8:30 p.m. league, Snafu is in 1st place by going 4-0.

Hoopster has run up a record of 4-0 to claim 1st place in the 9:15 p.m. league.

This round of competition will be completed when each team competes five games. Then the leagues changes to continue play.

League standings in intramural basketball are beginning to take shape with all teams having completed at least three games.

In the women's Monday league, Right Here Babe has taken claim to the number one spot by going 4-0. McMindes HPL is occupying 2nd place by going 3-1.

The 8:30 p.m. men's league is topped by the Silver Bullets II who have reached a record of 3-0.

The standings for the two early leagues on Tuesday are tighter than those on Monday.

Three teams are tied for 1st place at a 3-1 mark in the women's Tuesday league. The teams are McMindes Powerhouse,

Lady Tigers end conference play with perfect record

Christina M. Humphrey
Sports editor

The Lady Tigers finished their conference play with a perfect record after defeating Chadron State (Neb.) College Saturday night.

The Fort Hays State women's basketball team demolished the Lady Eagles, 94-49. The Lady Eagles were without their two leading scorers, freshman Tes Spahr, who averages 9.6 points per game and 9.4 rebounds, and sophomore Tricia Lukawski, who averages 22 points per game.

The Lady Tigers went to work right from the start. At halftime they led by 24 points.

The win marked the 33rd straight victory for the Lady Tigers at Gross Memorial Coliseum and brought their overall season record to 23-2. This is also a record for the Lady Tigers. With the victory against Chadron State, the women's squad surpassed the old single season record of 22-7 set last year.

The Lady Tigers would not be stopped and all 12 players had the opportunity to play and were able to help in the scoring department.

Leading scorer for the Lady Tigers was Deb Smith, Waverly, Neb., junior, who scored a career-high 19 points. She also recorded three steals in the contests.

Annette Wiles, Sylvan Grove senior, scored well below her season average with 10 points but, recorded six rebounds and three steals.

Also scoring in double figures was Julie Kizzar, Lyons senior, with 12 points, LeAnne Bryant, Cimarron junior, had 11 points and Kammie Holmes, Gary, Ind., senior, finished with 10.

Friday night, the Lady Tigers took on the Lady Wildcats of Wayne State (Neb.). College FHSU came out on top, 59-51, but the victory did not come easily.

Wayne State utilized a man-to-man pressure to defend FHSU's tough offensive attack. This was the closest margin of victory for the Lady Tiger basketball squad which has defeated its opponents by an average of 28.4 points at GMC.

The score at the half was 28-26 with the Lady Tigers taking the two point lead into the second room.

Wiles led the Lady Tigers in the scoring department with a total of 28 points, 10 of which came from the free-throw line. She only played 11 minutes because she fouled out of the game.

Petere Faulkner, Byron, Ill., sophomore, also turned in a good performance for the Lady Tigers. She finished the game with 12 points, shooting 4-10 from the field and 4-4 from the free-throw line.

Although Wayne State has a relatively young squad they were able to make the game exciting for the FHSU home crowd.

The home crowd also witnessed another record breaking performance from Wiles. She moved into second place on the all-time rebounding list. She recorded 15 rebounds in the contest bringing her total on the season to 819. Second place was previously held by Deb Robinson with a total of 807 career rebounds from 1976-80.

Kristi Leeper-Meis, Protection senior, had six assists in the game which moved her closer to the women's school record of 357. She now has a total of 350 assists on the season.

Monday night, the Lady Tigers took on the Lady Rangers of Regis (Colo.) College in a non-conference game.

The FHSU women's squad continued their winning ways defeating the Lady Rangers by a margin of 28 points, 90-62.

FHSU men's basketball squad defeats Wayne State, Chadron State

The Fort Hays State men's basketball team went undefeated in last weekend's games when it hosted Wayne State (Neb.) College and Chadron State (Neb.) College.

The Tigers took on Wayne State Friday in a 73-58 victory over the Wildcats.

FHSU needed to win by a large margin to remain in contention for first place in the District 10 Dunkel ratings. The Tigers are currently tied for first with Emporia State University.

The Dunkel ratings will decide the seedings and the homecourt advantage for the eight-team playoffs.

The Tigers were given a 35-31 edge at the halftime mark on a driving layup by Jay Sawyer, San Jose, Calif., junior, with five seconds remaining in the first half.

After the intermission break, Tiger guard Mark Willey, Abilene junior, gave FHSU just what it needed to pull away from Wayne State. Willey connected on five three-pointers in the second half to finish with 15 points on the night.

Willey helped the Tigers turn 35-33 advantage into a 43-36 lead by canning three treys.

Then, when the Wildcats were able to close to within two at 43-41, it was Willey again connecting on two more three-pointers to pace the Tigers on a 11-2 run.

FHSU's guard Damian Evans, Chicago junior, led the Tigers in scoring, as he has done most of the season, reaching his season average with 22 points while pulling down six rebounds.

Troy Zierke, Pierce, Neb., senior, paced the Tigers in rebounding with 13, 10 of which came on the defensive end.

Head Coach Bill Morse got the chance Saturday to showcase the talent of the entire FHSU squad as the Tigers defeated the Eagles of Chadron State by a 34 point margin. The final score was 110-76.

Every player on the Tiger squad was given the chance to play with each of them scoring except two.

The contest was the last of the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference games for both teams.

FHSU finished 6-6 in RMAC play while Chadron State went 1-11 in the conference.

With the Tigers trailing, 12-10 with 13:09 remaining in the first half, Morse sent in reserves Ilan Levy-Mayer, Los Angeles junior, and Jerome Carson, Chicago junior. The two teamed up to score 24 of the Tiger's next 47 points.

On the hot shooting of Carson, FHSU was able to turn the two-point deficit into a 31 point lead at intermission with the score 57-26. Carson scored 15 of his 17 points in the opening 20 minutes of the contest.

On a feed from Willey, Carson tied the score at 12-12 with 12:46 to go before halftime.

Then it was Levy-Mayer's turn to display his ability, as the Tiger forward scored the next five points and had a steal that resulted in a three-pointer by Willey.

Levy-Mayer ended the first half with nine points and equaled his performance in the second half for a game-high 18 points.

Chadron State's 26-point scoring output in the opening half tied FHSU's season mark for the fewest points allowed in a half.

The Tigers had held Cal Poly-San Luis Obispo to only 26 points in the second half in a matchup in December and most recently, FHSU held Colorado School of Mines to only 26 first-half points Sunday, Feb. 3.

After trailing by 11 points, the Eagles closed the Tigers' lead to 27-21. However, the Tigers ran off 13 unanswered points which started a 30-5 flurry in the final 8:01 of the first half to put Chadron State's rally to a halt for good.

FHSU led the contest by as many as 45 points at 90-45 with 9:40 to play in the game.

Sawyer scored 15 points and had three steals in the contest, followed by Evans with 13 points and three steals also. Evans also had a game-high seven assists.

The rebounding department was led by Levy-Mayer and Sawyer, each with seven.

The Tigers took on the Emporia State University Hornets last night, but results were unavailable at the time the Leader went to press.

FHSU will travel to Nebraska this weekend to take on Kearney State College. This will be the last road game of the regular season for the Tigers.

Dreiling family, other contributors receive preview tour of renovated Sheridan

Editor's Note: This story is being reprinted to clarify a mistake in its initial printing in the Feb. 8 edition of the University Leader. The Hays Daily News omitted two lines from the following story during the printing process.

Madeline Holler
Staff writer

Current seniors must think a part of their four-year education has been hearing about the renovation of Sheridan.

A yearbook has not been published without a story about plans and progress of the massive limestone structure on the east side of the campus.

Finally, the transition of Sheridan — from basketball coliseum and office building, to stagnate air space, to the Beech/Schmidt Performing Arts Center of Western Kansas — will be complete, following the rededication ceremony tomorrow.

A private tour for relatives of Leo and Albina Dreiling — contributors to Sheridan's lobby — the board of directors of the Dreiling estate, other contributors and the local media allowed approximately 30 people to preview the building before the rededication tomorrow.

Portraits of the Dreilings were unveiled in the Dreiling Lobby.

Mick Jilg, associate professor of art, painted portraits of the two whose estate provided the money used to purchase the gray and black marble tiles for the floor, marble wings coating for the walls and the chandeliers.

President Edward Hammond explained the motif behind the lobby.

"The marble in the lobby was the kind of classy atmosphere we wanted here," he said.

The marble tiling in the outer lobby changes to a light mauve carpeting that covers the performing art center's floor and the offices on the third floor.

The performing arts center, which seats 1,114 people, has only size in common with its former identity as a basketball stadium.

"The acoustics in this room are superb," Hammond said. "And there is not one bad seat in the house."

Several rows of the balcony extend beyond the middle of the floor seats along the sides.

Hammond said the architects designed the stage to fit New York stage specifications.

"Basically, we built seven stories into a five story building," he said.

"With the extra fly space, semis (trucks) can back right on to the stage and unload," he said.

"We wanted the performing arts center to be flexible enough to suit the needs of different types of shows," Hammond said.

The stage can also be extended into the first few rows of the audience, Hammond said, and the orchestra pit works on a hydraulic lift system.

A computerized sound and lighting system will enable the technical work of a production to be programmed in. Consequently, an infinite number of lighting and sound cues may be executed at the press of a button, Hammond said.

Despite its sophisticated interior, Hammond said the designers still wanted to capture the Kansas motif.

Each of the sound absorbers holds a plaster sunflower in its corner.

The wood on the seats are embossed with a sunflower design. Even the chandeliers in the lobby have gold sunflowers at the base of the fixtures.

Beyond Sheridan functioning as a performing arts center, the building has also been renovated to house the administrative offices currently in Picken Hall.

The second floor will house the Student Affairs office among others.

The third floor, specifically the northeast tower of the building, will house the president's office, complete with balcony and hand-crafted desk.

A new type of light shield was installed in the offices to eliminate the glare on computer screens.

Other prohibitive barriers were also recognized, resulting in an accessible building for all students and visitors.

Ramps and two elevators were installed for wheelchair accessibility. Seats and areas designed for wheelchair accessibility were built in the auditorium.

The state of Kansas has provided FHSU with more than $6 million dollars to fund the renovation of the coliseum. The remainder of the cost, around $2 million, was donated from private funds.

The facility, Hammond said, allows FHSU to provide more than entertainment to its students and community.

"I firmly believe we have on our campus the finest facility of its kind between Kansas City and Denver," Hammond said. "And an even finer facility than some of the auditoriums in those cities."

"This enables us to bring nationally recognized performers and programs to all of the people of Western Kansas."

BSU concert set

The Black Student Union invites students and members of the community to share in a Gospel Extravaganza starring Psalms, gospel group, during Black History Month.

BSU tried to book the group last year, but ran into some difficulty, Latisa Carson, San Diego senior, said.

"We went and saw them at Barton County (Community College) and thought that they were really great," she said.

This year, the group will stop at Fort Hays State after performing at BCCC. Psalms performs a variety of contemporary Christian music.

The group performs at 6 p.m. Saturday, at the New Life Center, 1701 E. 22nd St., and admission is free.

"It is an opportunity for the students and community to experience the African/American culture through the richly dynamic music," she said.

Lesley,
Well, Valentine's Day is almost upon us, and I am really glad that I will be able to spend it with you. You mean a lot to me. I could have never made it through some of my tough times last week without you. I just don't understand why I waited so long to ask you out. I guess I was too nervous, or I guess I never thought an "ex-Dragon" would go out with an "ex-Cougar." (Ha, Ha)
Speaking of being nervous, Friday is getting closer. Again, thanks for everything you do and have done for me, (especially the cakes you baked — it was great.) I really appreciate it.
Love always,

Dear World,
Though you've left me loveless for so long,
I still pour my heart out in this song.
Sleepless nights of tears and pain,
'Til all my love and strength is drained.
I've sought a gal both day and night,
But to no avail, this loveless fight.
Still I seek once more, in this barren land,
Western Kansas, where the women are bland.

Dear Remnant,
The gang's together and LeRoy's back.
So now we're moving in for the attack.
There's a world of hurt that needs to be fixed.
So buckle your seat belt kids.
We're in for some kicks.
