Subcommittee formed to find Pride solution

Sarah Simpson
Copy editor

Disparity among Pride In Our Community committee members has resulted in the formation of a subcommittee, Steve Denney, Tescott sophomore and committee member, said.

Pride was formed by the Hays City Commission to look into complaints regarding behavior and property appearance in the residential areas near campus.

The committee met Tuesday to discuss the preliminary report they were to present to the commission at yesterday's meeting.

However, because of the disagreement, the paper was not presented.

The report was to contain a specification of problems as well as suggestions for solving those problems, Denney said.

Two propositions were written, one by Bill Davis, committee chairman, with assistance from Bill Bannister, committee member, and another, by James Dawson, vice president for student affairs.

Denney said he met with Davis prior to the meeting to attain a copy of his report and "immediately found discrepancies."

"I was disgruntled to how the college area is described. It's not an accurate portrayal of what really goes on."

"It insinuates these things happen every day on a day-to-day basis," he said.

Davis was not available for comment.

The report mentioned such things as drunken behavior, urination and vomiting, according to an article in Tuesday's Hays Daily News.

Denney and Davis would not release a copy of the reports to the University Leader.

Denney said both reports had positive and negative aspects.

"There are discrepancies, but also positive ideas in both," he said.

Denney cited green space propositions as positive concepts. Green space is the program that would outlaw the parking of vehicles on front lawns.

The subcommittee formed by Pride has been instructed to examine both propositions and blend the two into one that will be agreeable to all members of the committee.

Combining the positive ideas in each report should lead to an acceptable compromise, Denney said.

After the subcommittee reaches a compromise, the proposal will come back before Pride for a final vote.

If passed, the report will be presented to the commission for approval and action.

The Student Government Association will also propose a resolution either in favor or against the report, Denney said.

"SGA has been very positive about working with Pride from the beginning," he said.

Denney said the two reports differ mainly in their proposed agents for enforcement.

"Dawson's proposal mainly focuses on what the college can do on the college level, whereas Davis' is more about enforcement through ordinances and such," he said.

Denney said he believes some of both types of action are necessary for success.

The subcommittee will meet today to discuss the proposals.

Actor staged

Lecturer speaks of life's theater

Juno Ogle

Senior copy editor

The acting bug may bite many, but it takes an actor with a cause to make show business a successful lifestyle.

Actor/director Leonard Wilson may not be a household name, but he has made show business his life, working professionally at it for 24 years.

Believability, understanding, commitment and especially persistence are the qualities a successful actor must possess, Wilson told acting students at Fort Hays State yesterday.

Wilson spoke to the Basics of Acting students and at a meeting of the FHSU Players theater group at the invitation of Stephen Shapiro, associate professor of communication. Shapiro had heard of Wilson through a FHSU theater graduate now living in Oakley and met him while in Denver a few years ago.

Wilson shared tips on auditioning and other tools of the acting trade with the students and entertained them with stories from behind-the-scenes.

He also shared his ideas of what it takes to be a success in show business.

"Probably the most important thing about being an artist, an actor, a playwright... is purpose," he said.

"Everybody I know (in the business) has a purpose in why they do it. They're committed to it. It brings a purpose to them and it also brings enlightenment to others," he said.

Wilson has been a performer since the age of 9, starting as a stand-up comedian performing for neighbors and friends at school. He decided at the age of 12 to make show business his life after seeing a stage production of "Rebel Without a Cause."

"It wasn't a very good production, but I was caught by it," he said. "I'd seen the movie, so I knew what the story was about and I was really into James Dean at that time."

"From that day since, that's all I wanted to do. That was one moment in my life that changed me forever."

"That's one thing that's exciting about being in this business, being an actor, is that you can change people's lives," he said.

Wilson said his work as a stand-up comic was good preparation for being an actor.

"For me, that was some of the best training I ever had in learning how to work with an audience," he said. "You go up to the microphone and start on your material and you know in 60 seconds whether or not you're working with them."

"And some days... some days..." he said, laughing.

He recalled one night when the act didn't go so well.

"I'll never forget a horror one night I was at a club. I'd had a couple drinks and was with some friends of mine, and one them said 'Hey, Wilson, go do your act.' At that time, that was like saying 'sick 'em' to a dog," he said.

He got on stage and started his material, but did not get many laughs, he said.

"I'm a third of the way through my act and I've got this piece that always knocked 'em dead. I do the bit — nothing. The next one I felt sure, but — nothing. It was worse than the first one," he said.

The performance went so badly, Wilson said, audience members started to leave before he finished.

"I learned from that you don't want to do your act under the influence."

Wilson began taking part in acting classes and workshops during high school in Texas, and continued in college, receiving a degree in theater direction from Southwest Texas State University. He currently lives in Denver.

In addition, he has worked as a

Library access discussed

Pam Norris
Staff writer

A proposal of a library systemwide access program was extensively discussed by guest speaker Karen Cole, director of Forsyth Library, at last night's Student Government Association meeting.

The proposal entails enabling the Board of Regents schools to share resources among each other.

"This proposal is seriously being discussed among regent committees," Cole said.

The program, if instigated, would be funded through state money as directed through the state legislature. The dollar figure has been estimated at $3.5 million.

"The $3.5 million is quite a small budget item considering other line item budgets," Andrew Irwin, Associated Students of Kansas campus director, said.

Four components of the systemwide program were highlighted in the proposal:

- electronic database-mapping;
- document delivery;
- computer catalog records; and
- systemwide access libraries

The electronic database component deals with the idea of all regent schools sharing information with one another. The licensing of this type of accessibility would touch the quarter of a million mark.

Document delivery was the next component discussed. It was reported that it takes 25 steps in order to deliver a resource document and it goes through seven individuals hands.

"This proposal would guarantee a two-day turn-around with information instead of the now three-day turn around," Cole said.

Thirdly, the computer catalog recording issue was discussed. Cole reported that 50 percent of all book and magazine titles are not being recorded to on-line access systems.

The fourth component, systemwide access libraries, dealt with the simplification of using the system. As of now, the resource system which Fort Hays State uses was described by Cole as being time-consuming and inefficient.

"In order to search through other state regent libraries now, you have to log-in to their system and search for your article topic," Cole said. "If you have no luck with that specific regent library, you must log-out and back into another library. This tends to be quite silly."

Condom distribution to be considered by senate

A Student Government Association committee will begin considering whether condom machines should be installed on campus.

Grant Bannister, student body president, said at last week's Student Senate meeting a representative from C and G Marketing Inc. in Grand Junction, Colo., contacted him with information about condom distribution on campus.

Lane Victorson, student body vice president, said at last night's Student Senate meeting, the issue has been handed over to the Student Affairs committee for consideration.

Bannister said SGA will consider whether the machines are necessary on a campus that distributes condoms free from the Student Health Center and the residence halls.

The president of the distributing company, Gacia Saenz, said the condom machines would be installed and maintained free of charge.

If those signing the contract do not wish to receive a part of the profit for condom sales, they are sold for 50 cents for one, $1.25 for three.

Campuses may think free distribution at health centers is enough, but Saenz said there is still a demand.

"Even more than giving away condoms in the health center, to have machines in the bathrooms has been more productive than the other," she said. "With the machines in the bathrooms, students can purchase the condoms in complete privacy."

C and G Marketing distributes only to 80 college campuses in the United States, Saenz said.

The condoms sold are American made. They are lubricated and contain non-oxynol 9. Saenz said not all types contain a spermicide, because of some women's allergic reaction to the spermicidal coating.

"The people who agree to have the machines on campus decide what types of condoms will go in the machines and in what quantities," Saenz said.

The company does not distribute colored condoms or exotic "French tickler" types, she said.

What do you think?

Mark the appropriate box and send through campus mail addressed to the University Leader or bring by Picken 104. Return ballots by Monday, and we'll print the results. Please feel free to add any comments.

- ☐ Yes, condom machines should be installed on the Fort Hays State campus.
- ☐ No, condom machines should not be installed on the FHSU campus.

FAMILIAR ACTIONS

Bush's answer equal to terrorism

President George Bush has a strange notion that sending U.S. military forces into Libya will solve the problem of Islamic terrorism. He announced he is considering such actions after the apprehension of two suspects charged with bombing Pan-Am flight 101 over Lockerbie, Scotland, several years ago. Bush's political ideas seem only to mimic those of the terrorists themselves. Any military action will kill just as many non-political citizens in Libya as were killed in Lockerbie. But that's no matter to Bush. When it comes to dealing with non-Europeans, he is content simply stroking his Patriot.

PRECIOUS GIFTS

Family, friends only part of season

The stores are laden with green and red and it is already beginning to look a lot like Christmas. While would-be Santa Clauses are managing to get their holiday duties finished earlier every year, the time to check their lists twice is now.

Projects to help those who get little during the season of giving have already begun and families and children who benefit from the work of these volunteers deserve a line on everyone's list.

The Hays Area Jaycees are accepting donations for their Toys for Tots campaign, which delivers gifts for needy children, and helps to fund the Early Childhood Developmental Center, the Community Day Care Center and Big Brothers/Big Sisters. ECDC is selling Christmas cards designed by the center's children. The money goes towards funding its numerous programs.

Toys for Tots and ECDC are only two of the many organizations in need of money and donations year-round. Although donors will not see the smiling faces and thanks from those who get the gift of giving, knowing the Christmas ghosts will stay away should be reason enough to give.

For more information about ECDC Christmas cards, call the center at 625-3257.
To reach the area Jaycees about Toys for Tots, call 628-1960.
Call the United Way of Ellis County, 628-8281 for information about a number of other charitable organizations in the area.

Condom, beer ads pose no evil

The television networks just can't seem to decide whether to get more liberal or conservative in the content of the commercials they air.

Since Magic Johnson made a statement concerning his contraction of the HIV virus, condoms have been in the forefront of the news. As a result, the Fox television network will begin to run commercials for condoms.

It is very comforting that someone has the presence of mind to realize that condoms are not evil, disgusting items but rather some very effective tools in the fight to prevent the spread of the HIV virus. I applaud the Fox network for this decision and hope the other networks will follow in Fox's footsteps.

However, after deciding to run the condom ads, Fox has regressed and stated they will only run condom ads that deal with stopping the spread of sexually transmitted diseases. Any commercials that are directed in the area of birth control will not be allowed to be put on the air.

Scott Roe

Staff writer

Give me a break. What is the big deal here anyway? Europe has been running condom commercials for years and I don't see society coming apart over there.

In addition, female contraception is currently being advertised on television in the United States. These contraceptive devices don't even prevent the spread of disease. What is it about the condom that makes it so socially unacceptable that we can't acknowledge its existence?

I suppose that some will see these commercials and argue about their affect on children. So what if children see these commercials and start asking questions? I think that today's young people must be told that sex has the ability to kill.

Hopefully, if young people realize the possible consequences, a greater emphasis will be put on this issue.

I don't think these commercials can do anything except cause a positive reaction.

In a completely different direction, it seems that some groups are trying to ban television commercials that promote the sale of beer. Excuse me, I may be wrong here, but isn't beer a product that is accepted and legal to sell? Why shouldn't beer be advertised on television?

I know a lot of people will argue that there are viewers who will associate the fun, happy antics of beer commercials with real life. But it seems to me that rational people can tell the difference between real life and television.

After all, how many times have you been drinking a beer with your friends and had the Swedish bikini team drop by? Furthermore, I don't know about you, but I have never been able to cool the air and cause a downpour of snow by having a beer.

I do realize that children may be seduced by an overload of these fun, joking ads, but it isn't as if they are aired during a child's prime viewing time.

Give people some credit. The commercials are sometimes very funny and entertaining, but give people the benefit of the doubt. They are able to make rational decisions about their lives.

Storybook man evaluates system

Business beware!
Do not trifle with David Zoomwatt.

Zoomwatt (a fictitious professor) looks like a nice, upper middle-class type.

Most of the time he is. Sometimes he's not — nice, that is.

"I behave reasonably outrageously by current standards," he admits without a hint of hedging.

Zoomwatt has no middle-class hang-ups. He doesn't care about his credit rating (although it's still impeccable); he doesn't give a hoot whether business organizations and their employees think he's cheap or crazy, or both, and he isn't a bit abashed about making a scene, as long as the scene is quiet and well bred.

Zoomwatt is at war with the system "and if more people did what I do, business practices might improve," he said.

A distinguished looking man with a serious demeanor, twinkling eyes and a Vandyke beard, Zoomwatt began his campaign three or four years ago

LeRoy Wilson

Staff writer

"when things began to deteriorate," he said.

Take, for instance, one of his early experiences, a mere skirmish, but enough to whet the appetite.

The professor arrived at a Wichita motel after a tiring air trip and was told that his confirmed reservation could not be honored.

There wasn't a room available.

Sorry.

"I will give you three minutes to find me a room," he told the clerk quietly but firmly.

"After three minutes, I am going to undress in the lobby, put on my pajamas and go to sleep on one of the sofas."

He got a room.

He also got a lot of cheers and pats on the back from scores of other men waiting for overbooked rooms.

"But," Zoomwatt recalled, a little sadly, "none of them would go ahead and do the same thing. I think I made my point in a reasonable, courteous way, but I also took a no-nonsense approach."

More recently, Zoomwatt, who has a master's degree and is a professor of social science at a university, has had several run ins with retail operations.

As a result, he has involved his own charge system.

He bills the store for any time he spends clearing up errors they have made on his orders or his account.

The current Zoomwatt rate is $10 a letter, reasonable fee, he points out, when one considers not only his time but such expenses as photocopying checks that have already been cashed.

Telephone calls are billed at $2 each.

The fee scale is pre-inflation and is open to adjustment.

"I simply deduct the amount from my monthly charge account bill," he explained.

"I add the total amount of time spent on letters and telephone calls when I'm billed incorrectly, or if orders come incomplete, or if merchandise is unsatisfactory.

"The complaint system has always struck me as terribly one-sided," he continued.

"The store has people to handle complaints, and these people not only get paid to handle them but the basic cost of the department is added to the merchandise."

Zoomwatt knew what was happening. It was inevitable. It was the epitome of the system.

"The customer is not only paying a higher cost for everything because of store error, but he or she is also expected to spend time writing or telephoning to clear up something that should never have happened in the first place," Zoomwatt said with a sigh.

Christmas season already here

The scene is your local shopping mall, on an average day in early November. But what it really seems like is five days before Christmas.

Customers are everywhere throwing any available objects into their cart until it is overflowing and nearly impossible to push to the check-out counter.

For some, the spirit of the Christmas season seems to have come earlier this year.

There are decorations all over town and advertisements are already on the television and radio.

It is true merchants are always eager to get customers in their stores to purchase gifts for family members and loved ones. They are just getting a head start.

This year, the displays and Christmas items were on the shelves almost before the

Angela Leggett

Staff writer

Halloween items were sold out.

It seems like Halloween was only a week ago. It was. There are still Halloween supplies on the sale racks at Dillon's.

The early snowfall and cold weather brought the Christmas fever to almost everyone's blood.

"Selling clothes at the Buckle has never been this easy," Melissa Rohn, Colby senior said. "People just grab a few things and say 'I'll take these.'"

The Mall is planning to put up more Christmas decorations this weekend and the announcement of Santa's arrival plays repetitively on local radio stations.

Santa will appear at The Mall the Saturday before Thanksgiving with sleigh bells and candy canes.

The local video stores also have tons of Christmas movies ready to check out or even buy as stocking stuffers.

They have children's movies like "The Simpsons Christmas" and tons of popular movies like "Home Alone" and "Robin Hood" on sale.

Before some people start thinking about Christmas they have to get Thanksgiving over with.

"I won't buy any Christmas gifts until I get my Dec. 1 paycheck," Jean Thill, Ellinwood sophomore, said. "That will be the last one I get before Christmas."

So when you head out to The Mall or Walmart to pick up a few things, be prepared for the millions of people who are in line ahead of you, especially on weekends.

Don't forget to allow extra time to park and walk to the store or try to get around inside. The overflowing carts can be dangerous.

Who knows, before long, there won't ever be a break between the after Christmas sales and Christmas advertisements. The two will just run together.

But most importantly remember the meaning of Christmas isn't how many gifts you get, it is giving. "Christ died for us and Christmas is a time for family to be together and look back," Christina Humphrey, Salina senior, said.

There are only 40 shopping days left until Christmas. I suggest you shop Monday and Tuesday when no one else is out.

Religious opinions may doom own rights

Dear editor:

Pam Norris, or should I address you as the "Messiah" Pam Norris? First you wanted to limit our freedom to die, then you wanted to restrict women's freedom to choose and now you want to limit our freedom of speech.

What's next, Pam? Maybe the freedom of religion. And what if it was your religion, or your speech, or your choice or your life?

But that could never happen because you have such a keen insight into God's mind and what he wants. Or at least that's what you maintain in your article on euthanasia.

Luckily for the rest of us poor, unenlightened folk, our forefathers had the wisdom and foresight to create the Bill of Rights to help limit the influence of ultra-conservative, small-minded "prophets" such as yourself.

The Fort Hays State Accounting Club will meet 6 p.m. Tuesday in the Sunflower Theater.

The club invites all accounting majors and minors to join the group.

Several ropers place in top 10 at rodeo

Several members of the Fort Hays State rodeo team placed in the top 10 in their events at Northwestern Oklahoma State University.

David Browder, Lakin junior, competed in the bareback competition, placing sixth in the long round and sixth in the average.

Browder is currently ranked seventh in the Central Plains Region.

Buddy Darnell, calf roper, placed fifth in the long round, ninth in the short round and ninth in the average.

Saddle bronc rider Jim Brown, placed eighth in the long round and is ranked sixth in the Central Plains Region.

Clay Preeder, Sublette junior, competed in steer wrestling. He placed sixth in the qualifying round, fourth in the short round and fourth in the average. Preeder is currently ranked 14th in the Central Plains Region.

The FHSU men's team is currently the ninth ranked team in the Central Plains Region.

12 people audition for January operetta

More males are needed for the 9-member Gilbert and Sullivan operetta, "The Sorcerer," the annual Fort Hays State opera performance.

Twelve people auditioned for "The Sorcerer" Wednesday night.

A cast list will be posted Monday at director Rager Moore's office in Malloy Hall. The opera is a comedy based on the conflicts between the social classes.

Moore said Gilbert and Sullivan wrote scripts that poke fun at the social classes in England.

This opera is based on the feelings in one village.

"The Sorcerer" is the story of a man and a woman who fall in love. In their village, people do not get along because of the differences in social classes. Believing love will conquer all, the man asks a sorcerer to make a love potion.

After the potion is consumed, that person falls madly in love with the first person he sees.

A conflict arises when the woman takes the potion and sees another person before she sees the man. He becomes discouraged and orders the sorcerer to break the spell.

The opera does, however, have a happy ending, Moore said.

"The Sorcerer" will be performed Jan. 30, 31 and Feb. 1 in Picken-Sant Theater.

Teresa, Memorial Union Activities Board Gallery Series performer, entertains Wednesday night at the Backdoor.

Variety artist sings at Backdoor

LeRoy Wilson
Staff writer

Performers, like writers, have to win over their audience with a snappy opening.

Despite being unknown, Teresa, Puglese, who uses only her first name professionally, wooed over her audiences Tuesday and Wednesday at the Backdoor with a wit and charm that quickly made them comfortable with her.

"I thought she was just great. She gave me the warm feeling, like she belonged here," Brad Gearheart, Hays junior, said.

Her banter between songs often proved as interesting as her selection of music, ranging from Cyndi Lauper and James Taylor covers to original selections. In a short, black, skin like skirt, the brown haired guitarist had a sound reminiscent of Linda Ronstadt and the Indigo Girls.

She would sometimes follow people around and also sing to them personally. No one in the audience was safe from Teresa, including one passer-by.

"Throw money at her," he said, and walked away.

Teresa was pleased with the suggestion and dedicated her next song, "You're So Vain," to him.

Beginning with a song called "Pressure Makes Diamonds," Teresa, with a range of country guitar hammer-ons and pull-offs, delivered a style similar to the Indigo Girls. Teresa covered songs such as Bette Midler's "From A Distance," The Eagles' "Take it Easy," and gave a rousing imitation of Cyndi Lauper's "True Colors."

Between songs, the guitarist explained how, at other small colleges she has played, she was the sole source of entertainment.

"Some of the colleges I've been to are smaller than my high school," Teresa said. "This one school didn't want me to leave."

"I said 'Why?'"

"They said 'Because we have nothing else to do tonight.'"

As a former student of the University of Connecticut, she also related a story on her bad eating habits during her college days.

"We lived on macaroni and cheese," she said.

"One time we even used chocolate milk to make it," she said. "It tasted good."

She reached a tender moment in her performance when she talked about an ex-boyfriend who she wrote a song about after she dreaming of him.

"This song I wrote at four in the morning," she said, introducing her song, "So Close."

"Don't tell this old boyfriend, though, or he'll have a bigger ego than he already has."

Even with her interesting jokes and stories, Teresa's music brought the most applause. Continuing with cover of Stevie Nicks' "Stand Back" and "Landslide," she played music that captured both '70s country rock and today's trend of acoustic songs.

Teresa, who lives in Nashville, has been touring 50 colleges in her Ford Bronco. With three more colleges to go, she said to the audience she will be happy for a rest when she's done.

Paychecks may be available early

Students and faculty in charge of payroll tried in vain to collect and compute hours and wages in a effort for early paychecks.

And if all goes as planned, students might be able to pick up their Dec. 1 paychecks in enough time to spend a little at home during the 5-day Thanksgiving break.

Marla Kreutzer, business office, said they will attempt to send payroll in to Topeka early this month.

Return of the checks, however, is up to Topeka.

"It will all depend on when they can get the checks back to us," she said.

"But if all goes as planned, students will be able to pick them up early," she said.

Kreutzer said early delivery of the checks will begin after 3 p.m. Wednesday Nov. 27, in Shendan 318.

While the Business Office is hoping all will be processed by the 27, Kreutzer said they cannot guarantee the checks will arrive by then.

Students who miss the early pick up may get their checks, as usual, at the Student Service Center. The center will close at 5 p.m. Tuesday and re-open at 9 a.m. Monday, Dec. 2.

Gallery exhibits best of FHSU faculty, provides students with inspiration

Cecily Hill
Staff writer

The role of a professor is to instruct. Throughout classrooms on any campus one can hear the recitation of information and frantic scratching of pens and pencils as students take notes. In the art department, the pencil scratchings may look more like sketches as students find inspiration from their teachers. Faculty art exhibits give students a chance to see the creative designs of their instructors.

Art students and others can view the works of Fort Hays State art professors now through Nov. 26 at the Moss-Thorn Gallery of Art, Rarick Hall.

"It's really good to see the art faculty working and exhibiting," John Lenz, Hays junior, said.

"I don't think there is another department on campus where the faculty go out and produce something and have it on display for their students," he said.

The exhibit offers students encouragement to pursue their own creative ideas.

"It gives a certain inspiration in that it gives you a goal to look forward to," Cory Knedler, Topeka sophomore said. "If they can do it, I can do it, too."

Lenz agreed.

"A lot of the professors are inspirational to my work," he said. "As an art student it is good to see how professors work and solve problems in their own art."

The exhibit displays a wide variety of pieces, from paintings to prints to sculptures.

Overall the show features some impressive works, particularly pieces by Michael Jilg, associate professor; Joanne Harwick, associate professor; Frank Nichols, professor; and John Thorns, former chairman of the department.

Works by Gary Coulter, professor; Jim Hinkhouse, professor; Joyce Jilg, instructor; Kathleen Kuchar, professor; Darrell McGinnis, professor; Leland Powers, assistant professor; Zoran Stevanov, associate professor; and Chaiwat Thumsurjit, associate professor are also featured.

"I think it is an especially strong show," Lenz said. "A number of faculty have had sabbaticals recently, and their work shows the research they have done."

"They Call It Paradise," a painting and sculpture art piece by Michael Jilg, associate professor of art, sits on display at the Faculty Art Exhibit in Moss-Thorn Gallery. The show, which runs through Nov. 26, showcases some works of the Fort Hays State art professors.

Some of the pieces, however, do not seem to reflect the tradition of quality associated with the FHSU art department.

"There are professors that have been doing their homework and their inspirations are growing," Knedler said.

"However, there are certain teachers who have displayed the same stuff for three years or more. It's as if they quit or they think they've already made it," he said.

Lenz said he believes that a person's own aesthetics will determine what he or she likes and dislikes in the exhibit.

"In every group show there are going to be elements that are stronger than some and elements that are weaker," he said. "A lot of that has to do with my own personal taste."

"One of the exciting things about our art department and faculty is that they're expected to be working artists."

"I think it is important for an art faculty to set an example for students," Lenz said.

Auto accident injures students

A Tuesday morning automobile accident sent two Fort Hays State students to the hospital, where one remained under observation until yesterday morning.

Amanda Pfeifer, Hays freshman, was released yesterday from the Hadley Campus of the Hays Regional Medical Center.

Pfeifer was kept for observation due to injuries sustained in the accident at the intersection of Seventh and Elm streets. She received lacerations to her face and a broken collar bone.

Christopher Girvan, Westminster, Colo., freshman, was westbound on Seventh Street when he struck Pfeifer in the intersection.

Girvan told police he was driving down Seventh Street and only knew he hit something before blacking out, according to the police record. Girvan received abrasions and was released after being treated at Hadley.

A witness at the scene told police Pfeifer was behind another car while traveling south on Elm Street. The other car stopped at the stop sign, but Pfeifer continued into the intersection without stopping and was broadsided by Girvan.

The impact pushed both cars into a retaining wall at 500 W. Seventh Street.

No identification or description of the third car was given in the police report.

Tickets are expected to be issued to Pfeifer for failure to stop at a stop sign, but are pending the results of tests, the Hays Police said yesterday.

Pfeifer told police Tuesday morning she could not remember what happened. Friends say she is suffering slight amnesia due to the shock of the accident. Pfeifer is staying at her parents' home in

Top teams to battle

The top two teams in college football will battle for the number one spot in the National Collegiate Athletics Association tomorrow.

Florida State, the number one team in the nation, will play host to Miami, the number two team in the nation.

Both teams enter the game undefeated, and the victor of the contest could be well on their way to winning a national championship.

Florida State has yet to win a national title while Miami won three in the '80s.

Much of the hype around the game will be centered around Heisman Trophy candidate Casey Weldon, quarterback for the Seminoles.

Weldon has thrown for 2,013 yards and 21 touchdowns. Weldon's counterpart, Gino Torretta, has thrown for 2,214 yards and hit the endzone 16 times.

Clemens receives award

Roger Clemens, pitcher for the Boston Red Sox, became the fifth pitcher in major league history to claim three Cy Young Awards for his career.

Clemens was second in the league in victories with 18, two behind Minnesota's Craig Erickson. Clemens led the league in four other categories.

Clemens led the league with 271 and one third innings pitched, a 2.62 earned run average, 241 strikeouts and four shutouts.

The only other pitchers to claim three Cy Young awards in their careers was Sandy Koufax, Tom Seaver, Jim Palmer, and Steve Carlton. Carlton has won the award four times.

Colts reduce suspension

The National Football League ruled Wednesday that the Indianapolis Colts were too harsh on running back Eric Dickerson with their suspension and fine.

Dickerson was suspended for four games and fined an estimated $400,000 after he refused to practice with the team because he said he was unhappy with the positions that he was playing.

Along with the $400,000 fine, Dickerson was also going to lose $617,000 in lost pay.

The NFL told the Colts to reduce the suspension. It was reduced to only three games and the fine was cut to $225,000 dollars.

Dickerson has already sat out one game of the suspension.

Intramural deadlines

The Fort Hays State Intramural office has announced upcoming deadlines and events.

Entries are due in the Intramural Office for Sunday evening basketball by 4:30 p.m. tomorrow. Play is scheduled to begin Sunday.

Table tennis doubles will be played Nov. 18 while a co-ed table tennis will be played Nov. 20.

Entries for co-ed volleyball are due in the Intramural Office Nov. 22, with play beginning Dec. 2.

Any questions can be answered by contacting the Intramural Office in Gross Memorial Coliseum.

Semi-finals

Lady Tigers advance to District 10 final 4

Claudette Humphrey
Sports writer

The Fort Hays State women's volleyball squad defeated Ottawa University Tuesday evening to advance to the District 10 volleyball Final Four.

FHSU had played Ottawa earlier this season in Ottawa and came away with a victory, 15-11, 15-6 and 15-5. Tuesday the Lady Tigers once again came away with the victory.

The Lady Tigers came away with a quick victory in the first game of the match winning easily, 15-1.

Game two was again an easy win for the Tiger women as they took the game, 15-4, but Ottawa was not going to go down without a fight and put the Lady Tigers to the test in game three.

Despite strong performances by the Ottawa University players, the Lady Tigers proved to be too tough and came away victorious from a hard-fought third game to take the victory and the match.

Prior to the Lady Tigers' win over Ottawa, FHSU took 3rd place when the Tiger women hosted the Wendy's Invitational tournament last weekend.

The Lady Tigers placed two members on the All-tournament team.

Angel Sharman, Lodge Pole, Neb., senior, and Celeste Perkins, Rock Springs, Wyo., junior, each recieved all-tournament team honors, with Perkins also being named Rocky Mountain Athletic player of the week and District 10 player of the week for her efforts.

Emporia State came away with the top honor in the Wendy's Invitational and is looking to be the team to beat for the title of District 10 champions.

Head Coach Jody Wise said Emporia State, currently ranked 1st in District 10 play, is possibly going to be the strongest squad in the district.

Wise said she believes it is going to be difficult for any squad to defeat this season's Emporia State team, but is confident the Lady Tigers may have the best chance to upset the Lady Hornets.

"They (Emporia) are a good quality team with a lot of different weapons," Wise said.

The Lady Tigers are hoping that having the opportunity to play in front of their home crowd will give the Tiger women the extra advantage needed to take the District 10 title.

In addition to FHSU, seeded 2nd, and Emporia State, who defeated Kansas Wesleyan

University to advance to the Final Four, the other squads slated to compete in tomorrow's tournament are Baker University and St. Mary of the Plains.

Baker University defeated Bethany College, and St. Mary of the Plains knocked off Tabor College to continue play tomorrow.

There will be a total of three matches played throughout the course of the day, with Baker University and Emporia State scheduled to play each other. The Lady Tigers will take on St. Mary of the Plains at 1 p.m.

The winners of those matches will advance to the final match at 3 p.m., which will determine which team will go on to play Southern Nazarene University next week.

After posting a 5-1 for the week the Lady Tigers improved their overall record to 38-23 and 18-3 in district play on the season.

Gridders to conclude regular season

FHSU to play Panhandle State

Christian D Orr
Sports editor

The Fort Hays State football squad will conclude its regular season tomorrow night when they take on the Aggies from Panhandle State of Oklahoma.

The Tigers' only chance to make the playoffs this year is if they receive one of the two at-large berths in the playoffs. Eight teams go to post season play — six conference champions and two at-large teams.

The conference champions must be ranked at least in the top 10 at the end of the season, while the two at-large berths are then given to the two teams that are ranked the highest at the end of the season but did not win a conference championship.

The Tigers are currently ranked 13th in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics national poll, and for them to make the playoffs they must move up at least five spots and hope that other teams ranked ahead of them drop in the rankings.

Last season the Tigers made the playoffs after a third at-large berth was created when a conference champion failed to finish the season in the top 10.

Ironically, last season the Tigers entered their last game of the season needing a victory against Panhandle State, which is the same team that they will need to beat tomorrow night.

At this point Central State of Ohio, who knocked the Tigers out of the first round of the playoffs last season and then went on to win the national championship, appears to have one of the at-large berths wrapped up due to the fact that they are currently ranked second in the NAIA poll.

Southwest State of Minnesota appears to have the second at-large berth with a current ranking of seven, but a loss this weekend could knock them out of the playoff picture.

Currently all six of the conference champions are ranked in the top 10, and five schools are ahead of the Tigers in the rankings.

Last year the Tigers had to rely on several key losses during the last week of the season in order to make the playoffs, but the Tigers were also ranked higher at this time last season.

The most important thing going into this week's game, Head Coach Bob Cortese said, is simply to win the football game against Panhandle State.

"Most importantly, we need to make sure we win the ball game and finish the regular season on a positive note," Cortese said.

Cortese said he would be satisfied with an 8-3 season, but he would just like to win tomorrow's game and sit back and see what happens with the playoffs.

"If I could go 8-3 every season, I would be a happy person. I think our players know that we could've won more games, but we battled to win some close ones."

"We would like to win and then sit back and see what develops concerning post-season play," Cortese said.

Panhandle State has struggled to a 1-9 record this season and has lost its last seven games.

The Aggies' only victory this year came in the third week of the season when they beat Langston College 22-18.

The only team that Panhandle State and FHSU have both played this year is Fort Lewis College of Colorado. Panhandle State lost to the Raiders, who, like the Tigers, is a member of the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference. The Tigers beat Fort Lewis two weeks ago.

Last week Panhandle State lost its ninth game of the year to East Central University of Oklahoma.

The Tigers are coming off their seventh victory of the year, against the Indians of Adams State, 21-20, last week.

FHSU got out to an early lead in the contest and had a 21-7 lead midway through the fourth quarter, but the Indians mounted a comeback and pulled the score to 21-20 before falling short and losing the contest.

Adams State scored its final touchdown with less than one minute left in the contest. They then went for the two-point conversion. The Indians were unsuccessful on the conversion and the Tigers escaped with a one-point victory.

FHSU's victory over Adams State clinched second place in the RMAC with a 4-2 record. Western

Chiefs, Broncos to battle for 1st place

Christian D Orr
Sports editor

Well after a two week layoff, I'm back with my ever-enlightening picks for the upcoming weekend of professional football.

This past weekend was once again a good one for God's team, the Kansas City Chiefs. Yes, they emerged victorious once again, this time tearing apart the Los Angeles Rams. What a beautiful thing.

Not only did the Chiefs win, but they once again stand as co-kings of the American Football Conference Western Division mountain. Not only are they tied for the lead, but it's with the Denver Broncos, and the Chiefs and "Donkeys" play this week.

After Sunday, the Chiefs will lead the AFC West all by themselves. Life is a beautiful thing.

Well, anyway on with the predictions for the upcoming week.

First of all, in my eyes the most important is undoubtedly the Chiefs-Broncos game.

First place in the AFC West is on the line and will go to the winner of the contest. The two teams have already met once before this season, in which Denver won, but this time the game will be played at Arrowhead Stadium in Kansas City.

The last time Denver and Kansas City played, the Chiefs held a half game lead over the Broncos, but the Broncos dethroned the Chiefs and have stood atop the division all by themselves until this past week.

Last week Kansas City knocked off the Rams, and the Broncos had a last second field goal blocked by the Los Angeles Raiders giving the Raiders a 17-16 victory over the Broncos on their home field.

The Broncos will be looking to bounce back after last week's loss, and to do that they must stop the Chiefs' talented running attack. But that is much easier said than done.

In the two teams' last meeting, the Broncos appeared to stop the running attack in the first half but the Chiefs displayed the talents of Harvey Williams in the second half and made a comeback, just to see it taken away by the talents of John Elway.

The Chiefs will run all over the Broncos this Sunday, whether it be the talents of Christian Okoye, Harvey Williams or Barry Word, but regardless, one of them and possibly more will have an impressive game.

John Elway won't have a chance to make a comeback, as the Chiefs will walk away with 35-14 victory in the game and sole possession of the AFC Western Division lead.

The second big game of the weekend will be played in New York when the Dallas Cowboys take on the New York Giants.

Currently, the Cowboys hold a one game lead over the Giants in the National Football Conference Eastern Division. The Cowboys are second place in the division.

Dallas suffered a disappointing loss to intra-state rival Houston last week, 26-23, in overtime. The Cowboys appeared to have the game won late in the overtime period, when they were well within field goal range but a fumble by Emmitt Smith deep in Oiler territory turned the game around.

New York pulled out a 21-14 victory over Phoenix last week, but it could be a different story this week.

The Cowboys haven't been to the playoffs since 1985 when they were beat out by the Los Angeles Rams. For the first time since 1985 they have a very good shot at making post-season play. While Washington has the NFC East wrapped up, the Cowboys will probably receive one of three wildcard spots open in the NFC.

New York has yet to find a rhythm this year, and it could be a very long day for the Giants and Jeff Hostetler. The Cowboys will walk away with the victory, 28-7.

Well that's all for now, so until next time take care, stay alive, and God bless the Chiefs.

RMAC with a 4-2 record. Western State captured first place in the RMAC with a perfect 6-0 record.

Western State clinched a playoff berth with the RMAC championship. The Mountaineers finished their season last week, and are currently ranked fifth in the NAIA poll.

Cortese said he thought both Adams State and FHSU are equal football teams but the Tigers just came out with the best end at the finish of the game.

"The closeness of the two games each of the last two years when Adams State is a tribute to their program."

"They never give up and that's a reflection of their coach. They are a good enough team to pass when they need to and that put them in a position to win the game. It was two equal teams playing and we just came out on the best end of it with a win," Cortese said.

Along with the slim hopes of a possible playoff spot, the Tigers will also have two other milestones well within their reach when they take the field tomorrow night.

With a victory over the Aggies Cortese will earn the 100th victory of his college coaching career. Cortese's current coaching record stands at 99-29-3.

The other milestone within the Tiger's grasp will be the 1,000 yard rushing mark for tailback Alfredo Hylton, Brooklyn, N.Y., senior. Hylton enters tomorrow night's game with 988 yards on 146 rushing attempts.

If Hylton should get the 12 yards needed, he will be the first Tiger running back to run for 1,000 yards since 1985 when Terry Thomas ran for 1,170 yards. FHSU posted a 7-2-1 record in 1985.

Cortese said he is more concerned with Hylton's 1,000 yard rushing mark going into tomorrow night's game than he is about reaching the 100 win mark.

"I think Alfredo Hylton deserves an opportunity to reach a milestone like 1,000 yards rushing. He has been a great player for us all year and has helped us win a lot of football games. We need to concentrate on the fact that he only needs 12 yards and make sure he gets those," Cortese said.

The game is scheduled to kick off at 7 p.m. Saturday at Lewis Field.
