Hammond speaks of possible cuts

Bryna Sandstrom
Staff writer

The results of a university-wide program review that has been in the works for over a year will be released some time next week.

President Edward Hammond addressed student senators last night and advised them of what to expect.

This review has been occurring at all Board of Regents institutions and each will be presented to the regents with proposed changes to university programs, including the addition and elimination of some degree programs.

Eight new programs will be recommended next week including undergraduate social work and speech disorders programs.

Hammond did not say which programs will be targeted for eliminations, but only programs that have very low numbers of students enrolled will be considered.

Any elimination that takes place will not be "instantaneous," Hammond said. Students already enrolled in the degree programs to be cut will be given the opportunity to graduate.

There will also be some changes in the area of administration, Hammond said.

There will be a shift from upper level positions to "firing line service people," he said.

Student Government Association President Andy Addis said he is concerned about the amount of input the students will have in these changes that will occur.

"There are ways for faculty to appeal (the changes), but there's no way for students to appeal," Addis said.

"We've got forum times set up and outreach seminars that we're going to do for students who have complaints."

"Because students do not have an individual right in this, because there's no documentation saying each student has a right to appeal this, we're going to do it through student government for them," Addis said.

Also discussed at the meeting was the upcoming Associated Students of Kansas Legislative Assembly.

The main goal of ASK is to bring the concerns of students in

Members of Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity ride in the "TKE Mobile" during last year's tailgate party at Lewis Field. The tailgate party sponsored by Bank IV and KJLS will kick off the season opener of Tiger football at 4 p.m. Saturday.

Party! Team hopes to break attendance record

Christian Wallingford
Staff writer

With the kick-off of the Tigers' home opener against the University of Central Oklahoma scheduled for 7 tomorrow night, Fort Hays State students, fans and alumni are kicking off the celebration with a tailgate party at 4 p.m. tomorrow.

The tailgate party, sponsored by KJLS and Bank IV, began three years ago as a way to get more people to the stadium.

Bank IV is having a barbecue for its employees and families. KJLS will broadcast live from the parking lot adjacent to Lewis Field. The radio station will sponsor contests and give away prizes throughout the day.

KJLS Promotion Director Jesse Morgan said he sees the party as an important day for the university and the community.

"Most of the time Fort Hays State and the community seem separated. This is a chance for the students and the members of the community to be together and share an afternoon at the ball park.

We encourage everyone to set up barbecues, bring volleyball nets and have a good time," Morgan said.

Several campus organizations are planning activities during the afternoon. At the conclusion of the party the most spirited organization is given an award by Bank IV and KJLS.

Last year the men of the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity walked away with the honors. The TKEs set up a wagon-train type circle with their cars and had a barbecue.

The TKEs will look to defend their title at this year's party. Jack Wagon, Topeka senior, said he likes the TKE's chances to repeat.

"At last year's party we were awarded first place for general rowdiness and spirit. It was a fantastic party," Wagon said. "Last year we were all right. This year we are going to make a lot more noise in the name of glorious old FHSU."

While the party is important, Wagon sees team spirit and fan participation as the most important reason for the event.

"It's a good time to pump up the spirit," Wagon said. "The party is fun for us but more importantly we are there to show our support for the team."

Tiger football Head Coach Bob Cortese agreed that the party and the fans are important to the players.

"Most of the teams we play average two or three thousand fans per game," Cortese said. "It's intimidating to them when they come here and we have seven or eight thousand people yelling and being loud."

The noise level also has a more direct impact on the game. At last year's home opener against Emporia State University, the crowd was so loud that ESU Quarterback Curtis West had trouble communicating signals to the rest of the offense.

"We've been practicing hand signals and silent counts to deal with the noise," Cortese said.

"If the crowd is loud enough, it might cause them problems though."

KJLS and Cortese are hoping to have at least 8,149 at Saturday's game. That is one more than the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division II Kansas record.

KJLS has been running radio spots for the last two weeks to remind people in Hays and the surrounding area about the game.

"Breaking the attendance record is important to the team, the university and the community," Cortese said.

"It would show everyone in the state that Fort Hays State and the Tigers are to be taken seriously."

Morgan also saw the attendance promotion as good publicity for the school.

"By breaking the attendance record, we can show strong community and alumni involvement," Morgan said. "It will make Fort Hays State look more accessible to western Kansas. FHSU will look like a better product."

Event set to promote health with activities

Melissa Chaffin
Copy editor

We all know college life can be quite a juggling act to keep up with, and Fort Hays State wants to help.

FHSU is promoting University Wellness Day today from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. in the Quad.

Booths will be set up to demonstrate how diet, exercise and time management can help reduce stress levels and improve health.

Jim Nugent, coordinator of the event, said, "It's part of an ongoing process to improve lifestyle habits of students, faculty and staff."

"This gives you a chance to evaluate yourself and maybe have some fun," he said.

One of the wellness stations will be provided by the Health and Human Performance Department to assess body composition.

Greg Kandt, director of the Health and Human Performance department, said they will be demonstrating the bioelectrical impedance device which is a quick and easy way to determine body composition and the spirometer which measures lung capacity.

The Health and Human Performance department will also be administering the National Back Fitness Test to indicate musculo skeletal fitness and the risk of lower back problems.

The Home Economics department will have a booth with information on diet and food selection including information on wise dietary choices.

The University Police will demonstrate the "poorman's convincer" to show the importance of seatbelts. They will also administer field sobriety testing.

Another station will be directed toward non-traditional students and others over 25. It is a lifestyle assessment called the "Life Game," which will determine life expectancies based on current health habits.

Nugent said FHSU held a similar event this summer and had a good response, so he thought, "It's worthwhile trying it while more students are here."

"I hope students will take advantage of it. We have lots of capable students and faculty and this is a chance for departments to show what they have and how they can help," Nugent said.

O'Dell set for challenge with Dole

Scott Legleiter
Staff writer

"Gloria vs. Goliath" is the campaign theme which Gloria O'Dell, Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate, hopes will cause an upset victory against incumbent Senator Bob Dole this November.

O'Dell announced her campaign for the U.S. Senate on June 9 in her hometown of Bogue. The concern that no one credible would run against Dole was her reason for challenging "Goliath."

"We (the Democratic Party) needed someone who wasn't afraid of Bob Dole," O'Dell said. "I didn't think we could take six more years of government gridlock and not coming up with solutions to America's problems. He should be challenged."

According to O'Dell, Dole has abandoned the people of Kansas for special interest groups. His support for the midnight congressional pay raise, sizable increase of the nation's deficit and dealings with Iraq are all reasons O'Dell said she feels Dole should not be re-elected.

"I think that in his last term, he (Dole) has forgotten about Kansas," O'Dell said. "He's talking the people of Kansas for granted."

David Klein, an O'Dell spokesperson, also feels Dole has been in office too long and has not been in touch with Kansas.

Klein said, "Bob Dole has benefited more as a Senator than the state of Kansas has."

In the area of education, Klein said O'Dell endorses the Clinton-Gore plan. This would call for increased funding for education and includes a service proposal where students could repay their college costs by serving communities in their perspective

"I think the Dole generation has failed the student generation. I need to let (students) know that they can make a difference. When they know it, they will vote."

Gloria O'Dell,
Democratic candidate for U.S. Senate

Deficit reduction, job creation and education are the top three issues O'Dell will address throughout the campaign.

Klein said O'Dell supports increased income tax for those who earn over $200,000 a year, public and private investments with a capital gains tax and tax credits and defense cuts.

field. O'Dell said, "I think that we are in a terribly important intersection with so many domestic fronts, we can't bear these unchecked and unexamined problems much longer."

The O'Dell campaign plans to focus on the student vote as a substantial means of support, according to Ken DeLaughter, O'Dell's Collegiate Coordinator.

"Gloria feels that college students are echoing the voice for change. Many times, we are ignored," DeLaughter said.

Dole's response to O'Dell's emphasis on the younger generation was that college students just do not vote, and DeLaughter said he feels Dole's response was "obscene and insulting to college students."

O'Dell said, "I think the Dole generation has failed the student generation. I need to let them (students) know that they can make a difference. When they know it, they will vote."

With '92 deemed as the year for change, O'Dell hopes to capture those voters who are tired of the status quo and are ready for someone to make a difference.

"I'm targeting the people who are rejecting conventional wisdom and bipartisan views. I feel that the mood and need for change will help me win in November," O'Dell said.

According to Klein, early indications show the race should be a close one.

"It's a very competitive race in which Senator Dole has realized he has a challenge this year," Klein said.

Support responsibly

Tomorrow night, Tiger fans will turn out in droves to begin the tailgate festivities two hours before the kick-off.

The empty lot north of Lewis Field will be brimming with various activities and excitement as the anticipation for the game runs high among the "tailgaters."

This ritual of gathering fans together for socializing before the competition is a terrific idea. I think it is a positive way to unite the community and the student body as they prepare to cheer on the team.

However, this annual event must not be taken to the extreme if Fort Hays State students wish to insure their pre-game hype makes a satisfying effect.

It is safe to assume alcoholic beverages will come into the picture along with the bratwursts and chips and the fans may become intoxicated with more than just enthusiasm.

Unfortunately, many of these well-meaning fans will move into the stands tanked and ready to cheer, or more appropriately, jeer.

The Tigers do not need fans who will misrepresent FHSU by rude and boisterous actions. The team needs fans who will cheer them onto victory with enthusiasm that will not penalize the team or embarrass the university. They have worked hard to represent FHSU positively on the field. It's up to the fans to do the same in the stands.

Media influences personal image

Do you ever find yourself looking in the mirror and thinking, "God! Help me?"

I know I do, and on more than one occasion.

I start thinking, "Look at that cellulite on the back of my legs! If only I didn't have those massive thunder thighs."

The only consolation I can find is to turn on my tape player at full volume and pop in Sir-Mix-A-Lot's song "Baby Got Back!"

Hey, at least someone likes big butts. I think I could get to like that guy.

Don't tell me I'm the only one who feels this way.

I think it's safe to say that everyone hates some part of their body, whether it be their protruding stomach or undeveloped biceps. Even the skinniest of people have some part of their body.

Well now that we've established that we all feel this way, I'm here to say it isn't healthy.

Joleen Bleker
Staff writer

We all can't have the Julia Roberts or Tom Cruise sex appeal, and we've got to stop letting our self images be destroyed by these unrealistic expectations we have for ourselves.

The best way to get rid of the problem is to focus on the source that fills our minds with all these unrealistic self images.

It doesn't take a genius to realize the culprit is the media. Whether it be the television or the magazines, the images we see are always of thin, petite, beautiful women and gorgeous, well-built men who are virtually flawless.

These images make us look at ourselves and think, "Look at them! How could I possibly measure up to them, looking like this?"

And as if that reality wasn't bad enough, guess who always gets the guy in a love scene.

The love scenes are always between two very attractive people. Rarely do we see a girl who is disproportionately correct playing the part of the lover of a gorgeous, well-built man (and vice versa with less-than-perfect guys).

It just doesn't happen. Being an impressionable teen myself, I know exactly the message that this registers in one's mind.

It's as if the media is holding up a big sign that says "If you are fat or you aren't pretty, then you just as well figure that you're never going to find a guy that loves you for who you are."

You know, all of these messages make me feel like those two little old ladies on the "Pepsi Gotta Have

It" commercial.

They see all the attention that Cindy Crawford gets supposedly because of "The Gotta Have It Card," and they look at each other and say, "We gotta get one of those cards!"

However, when I see all the attention Cindy Crawford gets, I think, "I gotta get one of those bodies!"

Although I feel the media is manipulating our minds into believing this is better and being built is a must, I don't believe this manipulation is going to stop just because I think it's wrong.

I guess it will have to wait until I'm President.

But in the meantime, if you turn on the television and see Julia Roberts making out with Richard Gere in Pretty Woman, just imagine Roseanne Barr in Julia Roberts' place and hum a tune to yourself - preferably something by Sir-Mix-A-Lot.

'Man of Steel' not indestructable?

Will any hero survive these hard times?

First they killed Batman's faithful companion, Robin, and now Superman will die at the hands of a man named Doomsday.

Come on, be a little bit more creative than that!

DC Comics, the company which puts Superman out, confirmed the death of the Man of Steel effective Nov. 18.

DC Comics spokeswoman Martha Thomases said it is not clear if Superman is dead or not.

She said in a story in Saturday's edition of "The Hutchinson News," Kryptonians may not die in the same way as Earthlings do, but one thing is for sure he will be dead through March 1993.

Doomsday, a lunatic from a cosmic asylum, will not come out a winner in the final battle according to the "News."

Instead, he will die alongside Superman, consequently ending the battle in a draw.

Bob Gilmore
Editor in chief

The possible final issues of the book feature Superman's friends grieving the loss of their buddy.

It possibly could be a publicity stunt in order to sell millions of "Superman" comic books to people figuring they will have a collector's item or it could be the all-American hero has burned out on the American way and will now fight for a country that has more economic clout. How do you say Superman in Japanese?

Where does it go from here? Will Spider-Man fall prey when he mates with a black widow?

The fact is it is sad to see one of the world's superheroes die after 54 years, even Mickey Mouse has lasted longer.

Indeed, there are no heroes remaining in this world that one can attach to. Sure, the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles are kind of cute, but it is hard to make some kind of connection with a bunch of reptiles that say "Cowabunga" and "Dude."

It's a sad time to be a child.

When I was a child in day care my friends and I would run around and be our favorite hero. I'm not quite sure which one I always chose, but the list was endless. There was Superman, Batman, the Green Lantern, Spiderman, Flash Gordon, Captain America, Wonder Woman (if you were a girl), Captain Marvel, Shazam, Isis (if you were a girl), the Incredible Hulk, the Wonder Twins and Captain Caveman (if you were weird), just to name a few.

Although I have not kept up on it much in the last 15-17 years, the only heroes I can think of today are the Ninja Turtles and He-Man (maybe).

boys today, have really taken to the reptiles from the sewer.

Eric, my 3-year old nephew, knows exactly what he wants to be when he grows up - Michelangelo.

I can see it now my darling little relative living in the sewer system waiting for the villains of Hoisington to show up, not exactly the old idea of "Truth and justice in the American way." Oh well, times do change.

Although by its box office sales Batman is still very popular, most of today's heroes seem to be too unrealistic. It's not that any of them were when I was young, but at least they took some sort of human form.

The Turtles were always turtles. They just happened to wander into some toxic waste one day, and what do you know, they became heroes. That still does not give a reasonable reason why they can talk.

Please, leave some heroes for tomorrow's children. They definitely need something to look up to in these times.

Bush buys votes

People, wake up! George Bush thinks it is Halloween and he is passing out gifts to anyone with a vote. This is the same man who said "You can't think money at problems."

Now everyone gets something including a proposed tax cut. Everyone needs to realize that a tax cut will not fix the deficit. The president is using the power of the incumbency to buy some votes. These "gifts" also have negatives to them. If cutting back on military means selling contracts for F-16 planes, we are in trouble.

Domestic Storm is in full force and everybody should buy into it. There are two months until the election, and it's better to have a look of momentum than anything else seeming like doubt.

The president feels the noise getting tighter around his neck. And we should now decide that change is good and change is needed.

The time has come to look to a new leader. Bush cannot run on his record, so let's give someone else a chance.

The candidates are doing a two-step right now. But, let the president sit this dance out, so we can move into a new, fresh partner. The main point is anything is better than Bush and the "cultural elite," whatever that is.

So do as your parents did when you were young and check that Halloween candy before you swallow it.

Services offer job opportunities

Tracy Whitlock

Students looking for jobs have several places to turn at Fort Hays State. The work-study office, located in Custer 307, and Jobs for Tigers, located in Sheridan 214, both offer various opportunities for employment.

Kathy Radke, work-study coordinator, said the people who have already been awarded work-study are not having a problem finding a job.

She said sometimes students have to go to more than one place, but they do usually find employment.

To qualify for work-study, students had to fill out the American Collegiate Testing family financial packet. Radke said some people had the financial need but were not awarded work-study because of a lack of funds.

"Fort Hays only gets so much money for work-study," Radke said.

"It was a first-come, first-serve basis."

The amount of work-study money allocated to each school varies, so if a student applied for jobs for various reasons such as too heavy a course load, finding a better job off-campus or just not having the time for a job.

Radke said there are about the

"We could probably serve everyone at one time or another ... we have such a wide variety of jobs."

Coordinator of Jobs for Tigers work-study at one school and was denied, they might have gotten money at a different school.

For the students who have work-study but cannot find a job, there is a waiting list, Radke said. About 175 people are currently on the list.

She said spaces sometimes open because people will give up their same amount of jobs as last year, but more people are accepting their work-study because it is getting harder to find off-campus jobs.

Inquiries about work-study jobs start in the early summer, Radke said. However, the busiest time is right around enrollment when students arrive on campus.

Air Force Band to perform

Tracy Whitlock
Copy editor

Music lovers will be in for a treat this Sunday. The Air Force Academy Band out of Colorado Springs, Colo., will be performing in the Beach/Schmidt Performing Arts Center at 7:30 p.m.

This event is co-sponsored by the Fort Hays State music department and "The Hays Daily News."

Jeff Hinton, instructor of music, said the free tickets have all been given out, but at 7:15 people will be allowed to take up the empty seats.

"I think there will be a few extra seats, even though we send out more tickets than there are seats."

Hinton said they over-book the hall because they know there will be people with tickets who will not show up.

To obtain tickets, people had to send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and a request for up to four tickets.

"The tickets were gone in the first three days," Hinton said.

"The first half of the performance will be concert band and the second half will be jazz band," Hinton said.

He said the concert band consists of about 50 members and some of this group make up the jazz band.

Last year, the Air Force Band out of Washington, D.C. played at FHSU. "All of the branches (of the armed forces) have several bands. The top bands are based in D.C.," Hinton said.

Plans for this concert began last May and the final plans have come about in the last six weeks, Hinton said.

Kent Steward, managing editor of HDN, said they were contacted by the Air Force Academy Band and were asked if they would be willing to sponsor the concert.

Hinton said FHSU was contacted the same day and the two groups moved on the project together.

Steward said the band spends a lot of their time traveling around to different communities performing.

"I don't think they are limited to playing colleges. They usually play anywhere they can get a hall," Hinton said.

The band cannot be paid for the concert and HDN is not allowed to charge admission.

"We can't pay them, but we do have to get things ready to go," Hinton said.

FHSU is supplying the auditorium and HDN did the advertising, printed the tickets and the programs.

"We are really indebted to them (HDN)," Hinton said. "We are also thankful to the crew at Beach/Schmidt."

"I think the music on the line-up is very good and it should be a good concert," Hinton said.

Issues being considered this year include campus security, non-traditional student issues, demographics, tuition and finance and the re-authorization of the Higher Education Act.

Addis will be presenting the issue of campus security.

"My presentation will cover the 1990 legislation of the Campus Security Act and the Student Right to Know Act, the results of which were just released last August," he said.

The Legislative assembly will also cover an ASK program review and lobby procedures.

Addis and Nate Halverson, FHSU ASK director, will take a delegation of senators to the meeting Sept. 18 and 19 at Emporia State University.

Kansas State Fair opens Fair offers several activities

Kelly Freeman
Staff writer

According to the Encyclopedia Britannica, fairs go back hundreds of years. They were a time for celebrating the crops and livestock produced on the farm. They were also competitions among neighboring producers and an educational event. This is still true about the fairs today.

This year, the Kansas State Fair will be held Sept. 11 - 20 in Hutchinson and will offer a wide variety of free entertainment and attractions in addition to the usual food booths, rides, 4-H and livestock competition and exhibits. This year the fair also has many high points with several new attractions.

According to Bob Gottschalk, general manager for the fair, there are approximately 170 performances on the free stages at Lake Talbot, Farm Bureau Arena, Poplar Park and in the Pride of Kansas building.

There are musical shows or special events at each of the stages continuously featuring several comedy and country acts including Riders in the Sky, Danny Davis and the Nashville Brass and Sammy Kershaw.

Gottschalk said this year bungee jumping will undoubtedly attract a lot of attention. Located just east of the fine arts/floriculture building, there will be a charge to actually bungee jump, but fairgoers are invited to watch for free.

One of the most popular free attractions year after year is the pig races. There are goat and duck races, too.

The exotic animal petting zoo will also be back with more than 75 animals to feed and pet.

There will be a contest where visitors will be able to watch while farriers make horseshoes and place them on the horses.

The Future Farmers of America kiddie barnyard will feature a wide array of farm animals with their young.

Gottschalk said the fair is a fun-filled learning experience for people of all ages. From youngsters to the elderly, the fair has something for everyone.

These are just a few ways to have fun at the fair and they are all free!

There will, however, be a fee for all grandstand events including country music concerts and the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association Rodeo.

Country music stars include: Ricky Van Shelton and Lorrie Morgan on Friday, Sept. 11, Clint Black and Aaron Tippin on Tuesday, Sept. 15, Barbara Mandrell on Saturday Sept. 19, and Tanya Tucker and Mark Chesnutt, Sunday, Sept. 20.

For the rodeo fans out there, the PRCA Rodeo is 7:30 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 16 & 17 with a $7 general admission fee.

Admission to the 1992 Kansas State Fair is $3.25.

Anne & Andy's Reel Review

This week's feature: 'Unlawful Entry,' Rating: AAA (wait for the video)

Once again, Hollywood offers a brand-new, psychotic twist on an old notion.

In "Unlawful Entry," a well-to-do suburban couple experiences a break-in and a life or death situation.

Shaken by the incident, Mike (Kurt Russell) calls the police to investigate and to hopefully catch the criminal who threatened his wife, Karen's (Madeline Stowe) life.

The local law upholders arrive on the scene, but one of the officers seems to be more taken with Karen than with actually checking out the scene of the crime.

Pete (Roy Liotta) obsessed with possessing Karen, begins to weave a web of trouble in order to eliminate Mike, thus making Karen a free woman.

This is not just an everyday cop with a little stress. Pete will stop at nothing to make sure he can spend the rest of his life with Karen.

His ploys involve "little" actions, such as making a few changes on Mike's parking ticket records to going as far as planting illegal drugs in Mike's possession.

The film gives the audience an insight into just how far an obsession can take someone and it also looks at the high price of security and safety in the big city today.

ANNE'S VIEW: It all began with "Fatal Attraction" in 1987 and has since snowballed into a box-office bonanza on the subject of psychoses.

Yes, folks, this is just another one of those movies about an obsessed lover who is just one taco short of a combination plate.

The film is extremely intense and will have you on the edge of your seat for a good portion of the time. However, I think you will be in suspense because you are waiting for the predictable plot to play out, not because you have no idea what will happen next.

Although I would say the plot is somewhat predictable, the directing in this flick varies from what you are currently used to seeing.

Different angles and the variation of placement of the cameras give the audience a closer view and at times, they felt as if they were right on top of the action.

Russell, as expected, executes his role with ease and wins the audience's sympathy over as he comes up against the twists and turns that Liotta has set so carefully for him.

As for the resident psycho of the movie, Liotta is just another carbon copy of the many neurotics we've seen at the theaters in recent years.

However, the audience does not get the chance to delve into his twisted mind, because we are only given bits and pieces of his torrid past and then expected to fill in the missing links.

I was looking forward to viewing this release, but it was definitely not worth the wait.

Go ahead and wait for the video on this one, you can do without another psycho this week.

Rating: AAA (wait for the video)

ANDY'S VIEW: Intensity is the key word for this film. A typical story is also a key factor.

After giving us a basic plot, the director cranks up the stress factor in the suburban lives of our main characters, Russell and Stowe.

The moviegoer can see where the plot is going after the first sequence of the story takes place. The helpless homeowners are forced to face the dilemma of violence in the suburbs. They call the police after a break-in and the good cops of Los Angeles are there "to protect and serve."

After the typical police investigation, the homeowners try to get on with their daily lives, but decide to install a security system for their home. Their loyal and trustworthy police friend, Liotta, gets the ball rolling for them and has the security system installed at the house the next afternoon. What a nice guy.

Liotta even helps the violated homeowners with their security password. This is way above and beyond the call of duty.

We watch as Liotta is befriended by Russell and Stowe and he becomes a part of their social lives and the intensity begins.

Although the plot is predictable, be prepared to grab the person next to you for support.

Varied camera angles give the feeling of actually being in the scenes and offer a new twist on the psychological thriller.

When I went into the theater for this film, I was expecting the basic thriller film with good guy turned bad guy haunting nice couple. That is what I got, but it gave some surprises, since not much background information on the psycho was given.

I was on the edge of my seat for some parts of the film and almost on my partner's lap for others. The intense suspense is worth it if you can oversee the basic plot, but I would wait until its video release to see it again.

Pioneer Days happens this weekend

Shannon Slaton
Staff writer

The area will be able to relive the days of the Old West during the 10th annual Fort Hays Pioneer Days today through Sunday at Historic Fort Hays, 1472 Hwy 183 Alt.

"This will be the largest Pioneer Days the area has ever held," Betty Roberts, assistant superintendent at Historic Fort Hays said.

"Because of the number of attractions this year, parking will be in the parking lot at Gross Memorial Coliseum on the Fort Hays State University campus. Shuttle buses, operated by the Hays Convention and Visitors Bureau, will provide transportation to and from the museum all day long," Roberts said.

There is no admission fee to attend Pioneer Days and all the festivities.

To celebrate the 125th anniversary of the founding of Fort Hays in 1867, the 1st Cavalry Horse Platoon from Fort Hood, Tex., will be the featured attraction. Senator Bob Dole made the arrangements for the Cavalry to attend both days of the celebration. Performances will be at 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. tomorrow and Sunday.

The festivities will begin under the big tent tonight with a program entitled "From the Pulpits to the Pulpiters: The American West in Popular Fiction."

Don Coldsmith of Emporia State University, an author of many historical novels, will present this information about the larger-than-life characters known as Calamity Jane and Deadeye Dick who were described in the dime store novels of the 1850s.

"While some bleachers and chairs will be available, the public is requested to bring their own folding chairs or blankets," Roberts said.

This year also marks the first appearance of the three-piece bluegrass/gospel band, called the "New Old-Timers," who will perform twice, at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.

The band, sponsored by the Kansas Rural Arts Commission and the Society of Friends of Historic Fort Hays, will roam the grounds playing music between their concerts.

The High Plains Barbershop

Chorus will also be performing Sunday at 2 p.m., while the Hays Sweet Adelines will sing at 4 p.m.

Harpisichord, dulcimer and harp music will be offered by 8th year volunteer Sharon McWilliams, 527 W. 23rd, all weekend long in the Blockhouse.

"The visitors want to hear more music from the 1840s. I enjoy bringing this classical music to the listeners along with a great deal of fun," McWilliams said.

Woodburning art, wood-framed candle lanterns, quilts, fur coats and hats will be on display. Several hand-made crafts will be for sale including handmade ropes and brooms, wagon wheel rugs, wheat weavings and more.

Special demonstrations of woodburning, quilting and spinning will be held Sunday at 11:30 a.m., 1:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m.

The Boy Scouts from surrounding areas will be holding their fall camporee at the museum site.

Dressed in 1800s attire, the Scouts will be presenting Indian lore and pioneering demonstrations as well as setting up four teepees on the grounds.

Food concessions, consisting of Buffalo burgers, Indian tacos, snow cones and funnel cakes will be available to satisfy all the hungry onlookers.

An all-you-can-eat pancake breakfast will be held by the Calvary Lions Club on Sunday, 7-10 a.m. with a $3 charge for adults and a $2 charge for children 12 and under.

FHSU netters optimistic about season despite 1-6 record

Sean Ummel
Staff writer

With the first seven matches of the season in the books, Fort Hays State Head Volleyball Coach Jody Wise remains optimistic about the remainder of the season, despite her team's 1-6 start.

"It's tough to say that we did well," said Wise. "We would always rather have a better record."

The Tigers spent last week in California, where they faced several tough opponents, beginning last Wednesday with a dual match with California State at Los Angeles.

The Tigers dropped the first match of the season by scores of 13-15, 9-15, 2-15.

On Friday, FHSU and Cal State met again in a qualifying match at the Christ College Invitational tournament in Irvine, Calif.

This time the Tigers lost the match, which was the best of three games, by scores of 9-15 and 4-15.

The squad picked up its lone victory against the host team, Christ College, in its second qualifying match, 15-9, 15-10.

In their next match against Montana Tech, the Tigers split the first two games of the match, narrowly losing the first 13-15 and winning the second 15-6.

In the tie-breaking third game, the Tigers battled hard, but came up short, losing by a score of 13-15 and finishing the match having actually scored more points than Montana Tech, despite losing.

In its fourth and final qualifying match on Saturday, the team lost in two straight, 0-15, 6-15, to Carroll College.

In tournament play, where the matches were decided by the best of five games, the Tigers opened up against Doane College in the first round.

FHSU lost in four games, 10-15, 9-15, 16-14, 4-15.

The Tigers were eliminated from the tournament with a three game loss to Hawaii Pacific, 8-15, 13-15, 10-15.

"It was a tough field, but with all the new people we have this year we did all right," Wise said.

"Every single person on the team played, and we tried a lot of different combinations."

Two of the teams the Tigers faced in the qualifying round ended up earning the top three places in the tournament.

Carroll College finished in second place and Cal State finished third.

Doane College, another team the Tigers faced, won the consolation tournament.

Leading the team offensively early in the season is Jennifer Brandes, Wichita sophomore.

Brandes, who was second in kills last season, recorded a team-high 46 kills last week, as well as 15 blocks to lead the team.

Niki Mock, Plainville junior, came up with 30 kills after leading the Tigers in that statistic last season.

Mock, who was third in the nation in digs last season, recorded 105 digs in the first seven matches of the '92 season.

At the setting position, Celeste Perkins, Cokeville, Wyo., senior, picked up where she left off last season, leading the team with 128 assists so far.

The Tigers will play at home this weekend with three matches in Gross Memorial Coliseum.

Women's Tennis

Assistant coach added to team

Amy R. Story
Sports editor

"There never seems to be enough time," Annette Wiles, Fort Hays State tennis coach, said.

Since FHSU is now a National Collegiate Athletic Association Division II team, they were not allowed by the association to begin practice until Sept. 7, only leaving them five days to practice before their first match.

Wiles is not worried though. She has confidence in her team and her new assistant coach Penny Sobba.

"She (Sobba) will help lift us up another step," Wiles said.

Sobba played for two years at Dodge City Community College and went on to play two more years at Emporia State.

"She's got a lot of match experience," Wiles said.

Sobba said the strength she can offer the team most is her experience.

Being a player I can understand what they're going through," Sobba said. "I know exactly how they feel."

Tami Atteberry, senior, said Sobba's experience has already helped her.

"It's really neat to have her out there too," Atteberry said. "She watched me practice my serve and something wasn't right, and she picked it out. Her college experience is great."

Sobba said the combination of their skills with Wiles' skills will make them an effective coaching team.

With the combination of their knowledge and experience, the team hopes to make a great team this year.

Wiles said that she is excited to have Sobba on the team.

Tiger football

Tigers welcome broncos at home

Christian Wallingford
Staff writer

"They're better than Emporia State!" That is what Tiger Head Football Coach Bob Cortese said about the University of Central Oklahoma Broncos.

Cortese and his Tigers (0-1) will meet the Broncos (1-0) in their home opener at Lewis Field at 7 Saturday night.

The Tigers are coming off a tough loss to Emporia State University last Saturday at Emporia. Fort Hays State jumped out to an early 17 point lead only to lose 24-17.

The Tigers, trailing 24-17, drove to the ESU 16-yard line when rain delayed the game for 25 minutes. When play resumed with 2:09 left in the third period, the Tigers faced third down and four yards to go. After two consecutive encroachment penalties on the Hornet the Tigers had the ball on the ESU 4-yard line.

On the fourth down, Clint Bedore, freshman tailback, was stuffed behind the line and the Tigers lost the ball on downs.

UCO beat the Northwest Missouri Bearcats 27-9 in Marysville Mo. last Saturday.

Senior tailback Tyrone Jones highlighted the Bronco offense, running for 173 yards on 32 carries. The Bronco defense forced seven NWMSU turnovers, returning two interceptions for touchdowns.

Cortese said the Broncos as a whole are a better team than ESU.

"They don't have an (Alfredo) Hylton, but they are bigger and have more team than the Hornets."

"They run the same offense ESU does, but they have a better balance of talent. We can't put 12 players on Jackson because then someone else will burn us."

The Broncos run the zone running game made popular by the Kansas City Chiefs over the past five years. Instead of having only one hole to run through, the backs run to a zone in the line and then pick an avenue depending on where holes have developed.

Cortese said the zone makes it harder to stop the running game.

"We have to fill more holes in the line. When we have to pull people from the secondary we lose coverage," Cortese said.

Another big concern for the Tiger defense is third down conversions.

"ESU had third-and-long seven times and converted five times. At the end of the first half it was third-and-16. They completed a 40 yard pass and went on to score. That gave them momentum going into the locker room and they just never lost it. To be successful we have to stop them on big downs."

On the other side of the ball the Tigers are still feeling the loss of senior running back Alfredo Hylton.

"Dustin (McEwen) threw the ball well and we did some good things in the air. But Clint Bedore had some trouble running the ball. If we can run the ball better we can generate enough offense to beat just about anyone," Cortese said.

Tyrone Jackson will get the call at tailback against USO after seeing limited action against ESU.

"He (Jackson) is learning the offense and is running well in practice. He didn't play much last week because he didn't fully understand what we were trying to do," Cortese said.

With another week of practice under his belt, Cortese said he expects a completely different game from his Tigers.

"We've worked on problem areas in practice," Cortese said. "We can win. We just can't make the same mistakes."

Tigers compete in HMC stampede '92

Amy R. Story
Sports editor

The Fort Hays State cross country team will participate in the Hays Medical Center Invitational Stampede Run at 9:30 tomorrow morning.

Also competing will be University of Nebraska at Kearney, Bethany College, Cloud County Community College and Colby Community College. All the teams combined have registered 94 runners.

Coach Jim Krob said it is not a true cross country race because it will be run on a downtown course and is longer than the average cross country course. The men will run 6 miles instead of the usual 5 miles, and the women will run 4 miles instead of the usual 3.1 miles.

"The Kearney men and women won last year," Krob said. "They're very strong."

Krob said the race tomorrow will be scored as multiple duals instead of a regular meet. All five teams will be competing with each other.

"The runners will all run together and then we'll just compare their times," Krob said. "It's a lot of paperwork."

The HMC is also having its 10th annual Stampede for the general public, Susan George, director of health promotions at HMC, said.

The festivities begin tonight with a pasta dinner and fitness seminar, but George said the registration for the dinner had to be closed early so the cooks would know how many people to expect.

The registration for the events Saturday is open until 7:30 a.m.

The first event is the junior stampede beginning at 7:45 a.m. George said that 50 kids are involved in the junior race this year ranging in age from 14-months-old to 12-years-old.

"I have a feeling the 14-month-old will be in a stroller," George said.

The second event is the two-mile predict beginning at 8:15 a.m. George said the runners will predict the time it will take for them to complete the two-mile run and the person who can guess most accurately will be the winner.

The 10k is the third event beginning at 8:20 a.m. There are people running this year that have ran every year and some of them had been winners already George said.

The last open event is the wellness walk beginning at 8:30 a.m. George said the walkers will have the choice of walking one or two miles.

"It's just a walk for fun," George said.

The invitational will begin at 9:30 tomorrow morning. George said the 10k run should be over by that time so the races will not overlap.

Cortese coaches younger generation

Christian Wallingford
Staff Writer

Last Wednesday afternoon was business as usual at Lewis Field. Linemen were practicing firing out and reacting to the ball. Receivers were running passing routes and quarterbacks were barking out cadences.

But instead of 250 lb. linemen and strong-armed quarterbacks, the players were third, fourth and fifth graders from Lincoln Elementary School.

The half-day mini-camp was conducted by Tiger Head Coach Bob Cortese and several of his coaches and players.

The future all-stars received instruction in offensive and defensive line techniques, throwing and catching, playing linebacker and receiving from Tiger players who play those positions.

The camp was the brainchild of Nancy Stramel, the physical education teacher at Lincoln. Stramel is preparing to teach a section on football and decided Cortese and his Tigers could provide the ultimate training aid.

"I, as their P.E. teacher, am responsible for teaching them to keep themselves in good physical condition," Stramel said.

When I began the unit on football I asked myself who in the community would know more about football than myself. I thought of Coach Cortese."

Stramel said the children were getting much more from spending time with the players than just knowledge about football.

"The players have the opportunity to be positive role models to the kids," Stramel said. "If the players portray the right things to the kids, they can learn more than just how to throw a football."

Most of the future Tigers saw the day as a lot more than just a way to get out of math class.

"I didn't know much about football before today," fifth-grader Kelly Steadman said. "This way if I watch a game with my dad or something, I'll be able to understand what's going on. I also like to play sometimes."

The camp was not only beneficial to the children, the players said they also gained a great deal from the experience.

"It was fun to be with the kids," Mike Gordon Atlanta, Ga., junior said. "It gave me a chance to show the kids what I do and teach them a lot about football."

Gordon said teaching the kids skills at an early age is important.

"I wish I had had something like this when I was this age," he said. "I think it's fun for the kids to learn about football and meet the players."

The Tiger players also experienced the difficulties of being a coach.

"Being a coach is a lot harder than I thought it would be," Gordon said. "The kids all wanted to be doing something all the time."

It's hard to keep them all busy constantly. It was also hard to find a place to start teaching them. Now that I've been a coach for a day, I see some of the things our coaches go through every day."

IRONICALLY, THE TIME TO START
SAVING FOR RETIREMENT IS WHEN IT LOOKS LIKE YOU CAN LEAST AFFORD IT.

Can't afford to save for retirement?
The truth is, you can't afford not to. Not when you realize that your retirement can last 20 to 30 years or more. You'll want to live at least as comfortably then as you do now. And that takes planning.

By starting to save now, you can take advantage of tax deferral and give your money time to compound and grow. Consider this: set aside just $100 each month beginning at age 30 and you can accumulate over $194,000* by the time you reach age 65. But wait ten years and you'll have to budget $227 each month to reach the same goal.

Even if you're not counting the years to retirement, you can count on TIAA CREF to help you fund the future you deserve — with flexible retirement and tax-deferred annuity plans, a diverse portfolio of investment choices, and a record of personal service that spans 75 years.

Over a million people in education and research put TIAA CREF at the top of their list for retirement planning. Why not join them?

Call today, and make how simple it is to fund a secure tomorrow when you have time and TIAA CREF working on your side.

Alright, so my calling card and I head down to the local pool hall. (Which I happen to know has a payphone.) And I tell the folks the Martians send their best."
