Homosexual group made official by SOC FHSU set

Crystal Holdren
Senior copy editor

The Student Organization Council met yesterday to discuss new groups who wished to become Fort Hays State organizations.

Two groups received approved votes to be recognized as student organizations.

One of these groups was the organization at Wooster Hall and the other was the Western Kansas Gay and Lesbian Services organization.

There was controversial discussion on whether or not the WKGLS should be considered a campus organization.

Wayne Rziha, representative of Student Government Association, felt the committee could not vote properly because the by-laws needed to be updated.

The only other question which was asked of the President of WKGLS, Chris Pouppirt, was if the members of the group are students.

The intent was to make sure (WKGLS) was a student organization," Lisa Heath, chairwoman of SOC, said.

More than 50 percent of the members are students, Pouppirt said.

The council then voted with a vote of seven in favor of the organization and three opposed.

President Edward Hammond said this is the first time since 1988 a gay and lesbian has asked to be an organization.

The group in '88 was denied their request because they did not meet the criteria to be an organization, Hammond said.

Heath said, "We couldn't discriminate because of their sexual preference. We were voting on the criteria of the organization anyway."

She said she feels the university benefits from all the organizations on campus. She said this organization is no different.

Pouppirt said, "I was confident (WKGLS) would be approved because of the criteria."

"I'm relieved (the meeting) is over," Craig Rumpel, vice president of WKGLS, said. "Now we can go about being an organization."

He said he was tense about the meeting because the organization has been so publicly debated.

"The university is all about opening your mind," Rose Arnold, sponsor of WKGLS, said.

Hammond said, "The university stands for fairness and equity."

He said the group had a legal right to organize and meet and he would not deny them that right.

Heath said at the present time there is 87 organizations on campus. She said some groups just reformed.

There are 10 requirements a group must meet to be considered an organization, Heath said.

These requirements are: the group must have an official name, a purpose on forming, a constitution the group follows, local and national by-laws, location of funds and a non discrimination statement.

The other requirements are to have officers who submit their names and numbers to the committee, they must maintain a 2.0 grade point average, have a sponsor and have a list of members, most of who must be students.

to host Regents

Bob Gilmore
Editor in chief

It has been three years since the Board of Regents have come to Fort Hays State. On Wednesday they will be back.

"The Board of Regents visits each of the six regent schools over a three-year period. They visit one school in the fall and one school in the spring," Hammond said.

Wednesday, the regents will arrive in Hays for its October meeting.

The schedule will begin with technology demonstrations, a tour of Sternberg Museum and a visit to the Metroplex, the future home of Sternberg.

Thursday at 8 a.m., FHSU faculty members have the opportunity to have breakfast with the regents.

At nine, they will begin their regular meeting, which will continue for most of the day.

Before the group breaks for lunch, it will take part in the ninth birthday celebration of the National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week.

Hammond said there are a number of reasons why the board brings its meetings to regent schools.

"It's so they have a better idea of what is going on and also so that they bring the next meeting to the campuses so it's people who see what goes on at a Board of Regents meeting they can attend a Board of Regents meeting."

"This way, once every three years, there is a board meeting on every campus," he said.

Hammond said although there are no times specifically set up for students to meet with the board, they can attend the regular meeting if they would like to voice a concern.

FHSU will also be hosting the speaker of the regents during the meeting.

Qualified admissions debated by SGA

Bryna Sandstrom
Staff writer

The Student Government Association passed a resolution supporting basic requirements for admission of students to Regents institutions.

The Board of Regents has asked for response to qualified admissions from Associate Students of Kansas and the Students Advisory Committee. The resolution passed last night would be given to these organizations as the position of Fort Hays State students.

The resolution suggests that students under the age of 21 be required to meet one of three requirements.

The first requires the student to have at least a 2.0 grade point average and have completed four units of English, three units of math, three units of science and three units of social studies.

The regents suggested that two units of foreign language also be required. SAC, however, has suggested foreign language be recommended but not a requirement.

Andy Adams, SAC president, said the SAC proposal is a minimum requirement.

because foreign language is not offered by all Kansas high schools.

Some senators said they believe foreign language is important.

"It's not just the language, it's the culture they're learning," Mike Rader, Mannattan sophomore, said.

An amendment, to include the foreign language requirement, was proposed.

The regents suggested a score of 23 and 800 SAT score of 24.

The first requirement of the resolution is that the student was an admissions requirement and that would consider special cases of unusual circumstances.

The regents and SAC support a 15 you're going to pay for it, everyone in the entire state of Kansas should be able to go to school," Tara King, Hays sophomore, said.

Another concern of senators was improving the quality of higher education.

"To progress we must set basic standards. If we don't set standards, we're going to decline," Pam Norris, Spearville sophomore, said.

"I can't honestly say this education is going to help me compete," she said. "I give 100 percent to my education but my education 100 percent."

The standards set by the resolution were also a matter of concern for some senators.

"If you can't score at least a C average between math, English, social science and science, I don't really see what business you have being in a four-year regents' institution," Nate Halverson, FHSU ASK director, said.

Advis said he is considering a veto of the resolution because of the foreign language issue and the SAT score.

"To progress we must set basic standards. If we don't set standards, we're going to decline."

Pam Norris, Spearville sophomore

major and said it is a minimum requirement for all students who wish to attend a regent school.

"We want to make sure that students who are going to college are prepared to do so," Adams said.

Some senators were against the resolution, saying it was too strict.

"We're not going to set standards that are going to keep students out of college," Adams said.

Recommendation to Commission Parking problems

Stephanie Baccus
Staff writer

Parking a vehicle on your lawn may soon be an ordinance violation if the City Commission implements the Pride In Our Community's recommendation made Wednesday night.

The committee, which met with six members present, discussed committee member replacement and the university's role in dealing with fraternities and sororities.

Also discussed was the problem of noisy students walking through neighborhoods at night and speed bumps in alleys.

Discussion about the parking ordinance centered around whether or not short-term parking for such things as loading and unloading furniture would be illegal.

The first subject discussed was committee member replacement. No student representatives were at the meeting.

"I really feel the need to have student representation," Bill Davis, chair of the committee, said during the meeting.

With Jill Burton, former member, having left, anyone wishing to submit a name for consideration should submit it to Davis, who will forward it to the commissioners for review.

Next, the committee moved to the subject of written notices.

Davis said, "What we are suggesting is that after repeated offenses a proper written notice be given to the landlord or property owner saying that we have a problem and we would like their assistance in dealing with it."

tance in dealing with it.

Fraternities and sororities were also on the agenda for the meeting.

Jim Dawson, president of student affairs, answered questions of committee members about the situation.

"In general, all fraternities and sororities have risk-management programs which prohibit the sale and distribution of alcohol on the property."

"Often, they don't speak of consumption," Dawson said.

However, if Greek members are not in the charter house or on the property, they are "out of the university's jurisdiction," Dawson said.

In addition, Davis gave credit to the Greeks for taking "a responsible approach to the whole situation."

"They've been working hard at trying to control the situation, and I think that's all we can ask," he said.

Bill Bannister brought up the subject of students creating excessive noise while walking home from the bars at night.

Davis said, "These kids are smart enough to stay out of cars when they're drinking, so we have large bands of them going through the neighborhood at that hour."

"While we have some definite positive sides to this, we have some negative sides as well."

Dawson suggested that the increase of about 150 additional on-campus students might explain the large number of students walking through neighborhoods on their way back to the residence halls.

Review

To love one man, but to be bought by another, could cause a little confusion in anyone's life.

The most confusion is for a slave who has to figure out a way for the lovers to be together in order for him to be free.

This is the plot of the musical "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" which opens tonight at 8 p.m.

For those people who want to spend a relaxing evening filled with humor, this is the musical to go see.

The musical consists of two acts with a 12 minute intermission in between.

The first act is almost twice as long as the second, but the audience will not notice because the first act has continuous action which allows the quick pace of the plot.

Although the pace is kept moving, the plot does not get confusing or even hard to understand. It is just filled with humor which keeps the audience interested.

Another factor which helps keep the audience focused is the way some of the characters mix with the audience, such as at the beginning when the character Pseudolus, played by Robert Martin, Hays senior, welcomes the audience.

Martin said, "It was a challenging role, but enjoyable."

Again, later in the first act, the character Senex, played by Darin Stewart, Scott City sophomore, goes out into the audience to deliver some of his lines.

The characters' diction when they deliver their lines helps the audience to understand each word.

Steve Shapiro, director, said, "(Rehearsals) went very smoothly from the beginning."

He said he had a great cast and crew who were very creative.

It was an added effect to see Bruce Bardwell (playing Miles Gloriosus), the designer of the set, in a performance.

Even though the play is a musical, the songs sung by the characters are still heard and understood thoroughly and the voices harmonize nicely together.

The orchestra blended well to the singers' voices. The orchestra was directed by Rager Moore, instructor of music.

The audience will be astonished by the costumes and set. The contrast of different colors used throughout the costumes and set help to set the mood for the performance.

The performance times are 8 p.m. Oct. 9, 10, 16 and 17 and at 2 p.m. Oct. 11 and 18 in the Felten-Start Theatre.

This week, everybody on campus will be talking about drinking.

Because during National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week, your school will host all kinds of activities and presentations focusing on the safe and responsible consumption of alcohol by students of legal drinking age. Among the activities will be a "Banned Today" poster contest that pays a $2,500 prize for the poster that most effectively promotes responsible drinking. Students participating in NCAAA are about to make a difference in campus drinking situations. And it's all yours to make a difference in campus drinking situations.

It's certainly something worth talking about. So why not get in on the conversation?

National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week is the kind of grass roots program that Anneuser-Busch supports to encourage responsible drinking by adult collegeans. For more information on this and other programs, contact NCAAA, Fort Hays State University, 800 Park Street, Hays, Kansas 67601-4099 or your local Anneuser-Busch distributor.

'Telepower '92 offers variety High tech to touch FHSU

Nob Kuramori
Staff writer

Fort Hays State will sponsor "Telepower '92," a technology fair, in the Memorial Union Black and Gold Room beginning at 8 a.m. Monday.

The "Telepower '92: Information Age Technologies and Rural Kansas" is designed to familiarize small businesses, organizations and educators in rural communities of Kansas with telecommunication technologies through exhibitions and conferences.

The fair focuses on how technologies such as interactive video (ITV) and Kansas Independent Network (KIN), a communication network using ITV, affect the world of small businesses, health care organizations and educators in rural communities.

"These (conferences) are primarily for users of the technology. It's not an engineering fair," Mike Leikam, director of closed circuit television and organizer of the fair, said.

"How we use the technology to make the community better, that's the whole idea (of the fair)," he said.

Leikam said hospitals in rural settings can give their patients better treatment by having teleconferences with experts in larger hospitals.

He also said technology allows firms from urban areas to have businesses in a safer setting of a rural area without relocating the offices to cities.

Larry Gould, dean of art and science, said the purpose of the fair is, first of all, to familiarize the world of Kansas businesses with potential uses and applications of telecommunications technology and services.

And secondly, it is designed to further explore the way in which educators, health care providers and economic development specialists might use the technology.

"Hopefully, through the conference, people will be more aware of these needs, and secondly, the conference will encourage networking among people who know about the telecommunication technology and people who would like to know more about the technology," Gould said.

Booths will be set up at the Union Black and Gold Room for the exhibitors.

The Docking Institution has been taking responsibility for organizing conferences and exhibitions in the fair.

FHSU organizations will also participate in exhibitions and demonstrations in the fair.

The department of Radio/TV/Film will demonstrate ITV and KIN in the fair.

The computing center will demonstrate the Geographic Information System (GIS) in which a computer system draws an image of a particular area with thousands of geographic data, including population, traffic patterns and physical features of the land.

Students of Alpha Epsilon Rho, broadcasting honorary, have also participated to organize the fair.

Besides exhibitions, there will be various conferences and lectures with guest speakers from various areas of technology during the fair.

Everybody is welcome to attend the fair free of charge.

Anne & Andy's Reel Review

This week's feature: 'Hero,' Rating : AAAA (worth the ticket price)

"Everybody loves a hero."

America has always been in love with those larger-than-life characters who step outside of their ordinary lives, for just a moment, to do an extraordinary deed.

Unsung or praised, the legends these heroes create go on forever, or at least long enough to make one heck of a news story.

Gale Gayley (Geena Davis) is the non-stop broadcast journalist in the picture who will do anything for another award-winning story to touch lives and keep the public hungry for more.

In the search for another human-interest angle, the focused Gayley crashes, literally, into the story angle of a lifetime.

Dustin Hoffman is Bernie LaPlante, the hero who creates the story for Gayley.

Fate places Bernie in front of a plane that has just crashed, giving him the golden opportunity to be the ultimate "hero."

LaPlante saves Gayley and the entire list of passengers.

However, LaPlante never gets to share his glory with the rest of the world, because no one would believe his incredible act of bravery due to his past record.

LaPlante is the stereotypical lazy con-artist who is ever searching for the easy way out and is a basic low-life.

However, a bum (Andy Garcia) does believe LaPlante's story and uses it to collect on $1 million when the real hero is asked to come forward for an interview with Gayley.

LaPlante is unable to receive credit since he is in jail for stealing credit cards.

Through the story, the audience is treated to the stereotypical view of the media and the search for truth and dignity in a world full of humans, not heroes.

ANNE'S VIEW: It seems as if the decent values and the basic trust in the human race is all but vanished from society these days.

But, who can blame our society for being so disenchanted with the world around us?

We, as members of the human race, have been subjected to violence in our streets, the exploitation of innocent people and the corruption in politics ... all thanks to the evening news.

That's right, no news is news, unless it is bad news it seems.

The picture this week takes a good look at the way the media sometimes tend to exploit stories and is always concerned about the "shock value" of a story instead of the solid core of subject matter.

Anything, it also gives us a hero to relate to. Hoffman is as ordinary as they come, and his attitude brings humor to the screen.

Davis follows up her tremendous summer role in the hit, "A League of Their Own," once again proving the depth she possesses on-screen.

Chevy Chase also has a cameo performance in the film to give it an extra edge and an added flavor to its cast.

Movie buffs will remember the comrade chemistry Chase and Davis shared in another newsroom in the 1985 film, "Fletch." The combination works again and gives the final product a pleasing effect.

This movie offers a question that all of us can relate to: "We all want to have heroes, but do we really have what it takes to be one?"

Rating: AAAA (worth the ticket price)

ANDY'S VIEW: A recipe for this film would contain the simple ingredients with a few gourmet twists.

Take a low-life, stereotypical down-on-his-luck divorced male, add an award-winning, good-looking female broadcast newscaster, mix in a jet which doesn't quite make the airport runway project upon the screen for two hours and you get a decent film.

Stereotyping plays a strong role in this film. We get Hoffman's character, LaPlante, and his problems thrust upon us early. His life is a major mess. Selling stolen credit cards, pawning stolen merchandise to his landlord (this apartment looks like an outlet mall for Wal-Mart) and trying to keep a stable relationship with his 10-year-old son. Oh, one other thing, he has problems keeping his job.

This leads us to Gayley, the perfect TV news reporter.

She will go anywhere for the story to keep her ratings up. After she is rescued from the burning plane wreckage, she still fights with her co-workers to report the story. What a trooper.

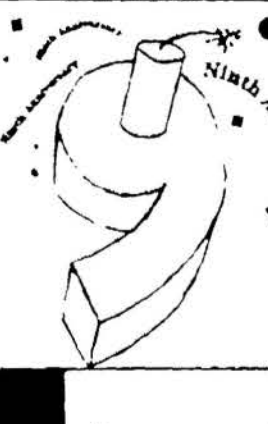

Hoffman and Davis work well together, along with Garcia and Chase. The mixture of talent gives a good balance of humor and drama throughout the film. If you liked Hoffman and Davis in "Tootsie," you shouldn't be disappointed by this flick.

After combining the ingredients of this film, you should get a light, laughable dessert to digest for the evening.

Rating: AAAA (worth the ticket price)

FHSU spikers win non-conference Kearney match

The Fort Hays State women's volleyball team traveled to the University of Nebraska at Kearney, Tuesday, Oct. 6. The non-conference match took place at 7:30 p.m.

The Lady Tigers defeated Nebraska in the best of five games, 15-10, 4-15, 15-9, 15-12.

On the offensive side, Celeste Perkins, senior led the team with 31 assists.

On the defensive side, Lynn Eischen, sophomore, had 26 digs and Niki Mack, junior, had 35.

After performing poorly at the Missouri Western Invitational on Oct. 2-3, Head Coach Jody Wise was happy about the win. "It's always tough to beat the team on their home court, but we played good volleyball."

The Lady Tigers travel to Lakewood, Colo., today to participate in the Colorado Christian University tournament which will continue on through tomorrow.

Teams present include Colorado Christian University, Slippery Rock Pennsylvania University, South Dakota Tech and Chadron State University (Nebraska).

Amateurs get a taste of rodeo

Linette Schaller

Several Fort Hays State students got a taste of rodeo, or rather a mouthful of the rodeo arena, Tuesday night at the Rodeo Club's second annual Amateur Intramural Rodeo.

The rodeo was designed just for amateurs, and all competition took place on the ground.

"I had absolutely no experience. I have viewed a lot of rodeo but never participated. We got a little coaching before our events," Bret Frerichs, senior, said.

Eleven teams took part in the rodeo, resulting in 60 competitors. The teams were made up of four men and two women.

"We had an outstanding number of teams and spectators," Garry Brower, associate professor of agriculture, said.

The six featured events included calf tying, steer wrestling, goat tail tying, team roping, stick-horse barrel racing and steer riding.

For the calf tying event, a calf was tied to a rope staked in the middle of the arena. The participants then proceeded to throw the steer on its side and tie three of its legs together.

"I did really well. I got the calf down right away, but tying it was the difficult part," Frerichs said.

The steer wrestling event was the same as in normal rodeo competition, except the wrestler started on the ground rather than on a horse.

The stick-horse barrel race was also done the same as the normal barrel race except on foot and riding a broom.

Goat-tail tying consisted of running toward a staked-out goat, and tying a ribbon on its tail.

In the team roping competition, all the steers were let into the arena all at once, and the ropers, on foot, attempted to rope both the back legs and the horns.

The last event, steer riding, was done similar to the bull riding event in rodeo. The only differences were that the "bull" was a steer and the participants rode facing the back instead of the front of the steer.

"It was rough. You had to pay attention to what you were doing, but it was fun," Curtis Ohlde, junior, participant in the steer riding event and member of the winning team, The Hands.

The winners were determined by a point system. After each event, the winner of the event was given 11 points, second place was given 10 points, etc.

After all events were completed the team with the most points won. Winners were presented with T-shirts and a traveling trophy. The trophy is a horned cow skull mounted on a board.

Following the rodeo, a dance was held at the Peanut House, featuring the band No Boots Required.

"I feel the whole evening was very successful," Brower said. "Not only did everyone have some good fun and laughs, but it also hopefully promoted rodeo."

Tigers favorite at Grand Junction

Christian Wallingford
Staff writer

If football games were as cut and dried as mathematics, the Tigers would be the easy favorites in Saturday's game against Mesa State College in Grand Junction, Colo.

The two teams have identical records at 1-4-0. The apparent advantage the Tigers have is that they beat New Mexico Highlands 51-28 while NMHU trounced MSC 52-3. But Fort Hays State Head Coach Bob Cortese is quick to point out that looking at numbers like those can often be misleading when it comes to football.

"Mesa has nine turnovers in the Highlands game. When you have that many turnovers, it's hard to win games," Cortese said. "But the chances are they won't turn the ball over that many times against us, so we can't just count on the numbers."

Cortese certainly knows of which he speaks because he spent 10 years as the head coach at Mesa before coming to FHSU two and a half years ago.

"They have good players there," Cortese said. "I should know because I recruited most of them."

The Tiger offense will be without freshman running back Clint Bedore who suffered bruised ribs last week in the NMHU game. Bedore is expected to be back next week, but the exact time of his return will depend on how he feels.

Cortese said that he wishes his old team well, but on Saturday they will be just another opponent.

"When we went there last year it might have been an issue. After all, I was there for ten years," Cortese said. "This year it's just another game that we need to win. I still like the school and the players, but on Saturday night it will be business as usual."

Different source wanted for summer raises

Faculty Senate opposes motion

Anne Zohner
Managing editor

Although the Faculty Senate is in favor of restoring summer faculty salaries, they do not want to compromise possible future merit raises for it.

At their regular meeting yesterday, the Senate voted against a motion which read the remuneration for teaching summer courses should be adjusted to the level of 90 percent of 1/24 of a faculty member's nine-month salary for each month taught. The funds for the restoration of summer faculty salaries should come from future merit raises, the motion read.

"The motion was turned down and will now go back to the university affairs committee and they will try to bring one back that's more palatable to the faculty," Rich Huguen, Faculty Senate president, said.

One of the major problems is the funding for the increase for summer salaries.

"(The faculty wants) a way to raise the summer salary pool, but they want some other resources to get the funds from (instead of) the merit raise fund," he said.

The opposition was voiced by the faculty members concerned about tapping of the merit fund for the increase of summer salaries.

"I would have to vote against this motion and the main reason is funding," Ralph Gamble, associate professor of economics and finance, said.

Gamble said it was "not proper to make up for past abuses by implementing future abuses."

In other business, the Senate unanimously moved to oppose the entrance of the admittance of Washburn into the Board of Regents' system until it can be proven by the State Legislature that this action is feasible.

The motion read the Fort Hays State Faculty Senate would oppose the entrance until the Legislature could demonstrate "it is able to do so without diluting our scarce academic resources."

The next regular meeting of the Faculty Senate will be at 3:30 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 2.

BAACHUS sponsors week to provide awareness

Lisa Goetz

Celebration and education - that is what it is all about. Monday through Sunday, Oct. 18 Fort Hays State will join with other colleges and universities across the nation to celebrate National Collegiate Alcohol Awareness Week.

"NCAAW is a celebration of past success and a continuation in the fight against drunk drivers and alcohol abuse," Shannon Berland, BACCHUS president, said.

BACCHUS stands for Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students. BACCHUS is planning a wide variety of activities for the week starting with alcohol related displays and posters on campus Monday.

The Teaching Others Alcohol Safety Tactics program will also be emphasized throughout the week. TOAST is a designated driver program sponsored by Kansas colleges and universities and the Office of Traffic Safety in the Kansas Department of Transportation.

Tuesday is "White Faces" day. Student volunteers will paint their faces white for the day to represent one of the 37 people ages 18 through 25 killed on a Kansas highway in '91 due to drunk driving.

The Ritzy Breakfast will be in McMindes Hall Cafeteria from 9 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Wednesday. It is free to students on the meal plan and is $2.50 for anyone else.

In conjunction with the Kansas Board of Regents meeting on Thursday an anniversary "blowout" will take place at 11:50 a.m. in the Memorial Union Black and Gold Ballroom. There will be a cake ceremony with nine candles to commemorate the ninth anniversary of NCAAW.

On the final day, Sunday, BACCHUS will sponsor a campus clean-up to get rid of trash accumulated during Oktoberfest weekend.
