Talking Tigers nationally ranked

Stephanie Baccus
Staff writer

The national Cross Examination Debate Association recently ranked Fort Hays State's debate team as 32nd in the nation.

"I'm pleased as punch," Chris Crawford, co-director of forensics, said.

"They've worked hard, and I think we have coached them very hard the first couple weeks, and that's why we're off to such a good start."

Although the Talking Tigers were not in the top 50 last year, this ranking was not exactly a surprise.

Marc Nuss, co-director of forensics, said, "We had high expectation for this group, so I wouldn't say that we're surprised, but we didn't know exactly where we stood (before)."

The ranking is a boost for students who have had to make the transition from high school to collegiate competition, Nuss said.

"Debate in high school is different than debate in college.

"So there are some people that feel like they don't know what they're doing, although they've worked very hard," he said.

Crawford said he feels the team is one of the better ones he has seen.

"Out of all my coaching experience, ... I think this is the best group of kids across the board that I've had."

The team has overcome some stressful situations and has coped well with pressure.

"We started our semester very early this year," Crawford said. "The debaters had two weeks to prepare full research on this topic and that's a tremendous burden."

The two coaches compared the young Talking Tigers to the top two ranked teams on the CEDA list.

Crawford said the FHSU students write their own arguments and learn the hard way which are the best to run.

"These two squads (Kansas State and Central Oklahoma) have assistant coaches, and the assistant coaches write the arguments for the students," he said.

"Sure, you get a lot of CEDA points that way, but students don't learn anything," Crawford said.

"Our students learn from the school of hard knocks," Nuss said.

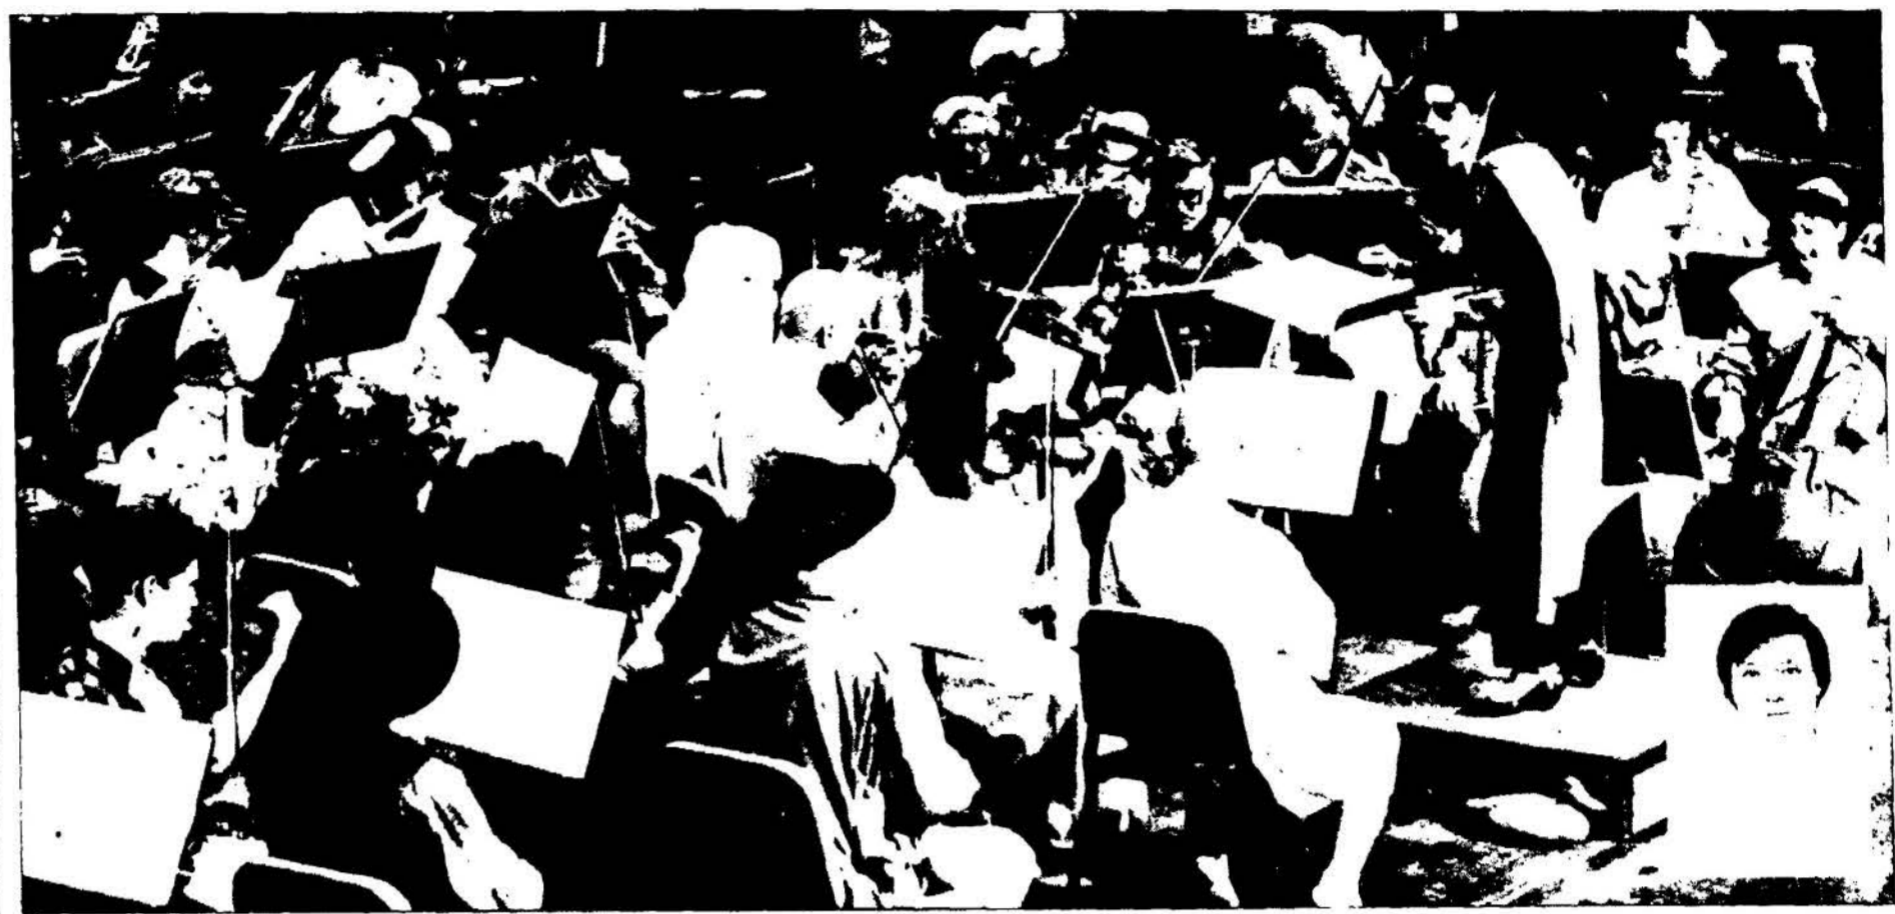

But their schooling is far from over.

"We are by no means slapping ourselves on the back and saying this is the accomplishment of the year, because it isn't. We expect to do better," Nuss said.

Students in debate can put in eight to 16 hours a week researching, Crawford said, although it's up to the students.

Anyone wishing to see the Talking Tigers in action is encouraged to attend the Sunflower Debates. The debate will be at 8 p.m., Thursday at the Pioneer Room in the Memorial Union.

"Everybody knows what the basketball players do and what the football team is, but we want people to know what we do," Nuss said.

Members of the Hays Symphony Orchestra dress in costume during the 1991 Halloween Pops costume party performed at the Beach/Schmidt Performing Arts Center. Former Assistant Professor of Music, Christine Webber, directed last year's Halloween concert. Julian Shew, current assistant professor of music (inset), will take over direction of the Orchestra. The second annual Halloween Concert and Costume contest will begin 8 p.m. Saturday at Beach/Schmidt.

Symphony to make spooky return Saturday

Halloween spooks will be gathering on campus to provide a safe alternative to the usual activities.

The Hays Symphony Orchestra will present the second annual Halloween Concert and Costume Contest at 8 p.m. on Saturday in the Beach/Schmidt Performing Arts Center.

Children and Fort Hays State students with their student identification are admitted free of charge, adults with costumes for $1 and adults without costumes for $2.

Lynne Albers, chairperson of the publicity committee for Hays Symphony Guild,

Inel said, "With time change making it get dark so early, we're hoping they will do their trick-or-treating and finish out the night at Beach/Schmidt."

The preliminary judging for the costume contest is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. and the final judging will take place during the concert intermission.

Prizes from local merchants will be awarded in four categories: "Wild Child" for children 12 and under; "Ghoulish Tunes" for children or adults; "Most Gross" and "Weird and Funky" both for adults.

Symphony members will also be in costume and their music will be appropriate to the occasion. Special effects and lighting will also be included in the concert.

Selections include: "March to the Scaffold" from Symphonie Fantastique by Berlioz, "Funeral March of a Marionette" by Gounod, which is Alfred Hitchcock's theme and "Overture to Orpheus in the Underworld" by Offenbach.

The program has been cut back somewhat in order to keep the entertainment at a comfortable length, Albers said.

"Last year it kind of ran long, so this year we're only having three musical numbers," she said.

The evening is a way to mix entertainment with the traditional festivities of the holiday.

"It's a chance to hear some excellent musical talent, yet have some fun."

The concert also helps the organization to offer entertainment that breaks away from the stereotypes of orchestra.

"We want to show people the orchestra doesn't have to be dry and boring," she said.

The idea for the Halloween concert originated last year.

"We were trying to encourage community members and especially Fort Hays students to come listen to the orchestra," she said.

Overall, Albers said it should prove to be an enjoyable time.

"It's a fun, safe way to celebrate Halloween," she said.

'KFHS' begins programming with new staff

Shannon Slaton
Staff writer

KFHS Channel 12, located on the campus of Fort Hays State in Heather Hall, will begin at 6 tonight, on the same channel as "The Learning Channel."

The broadcast can be observed on Tuesday and Thursday evenings throughout the fall semester.

"The live newscast, which is totally run by students, will feature a public affairs program entitled "Our Town," hosted by Ed Jarmer, Cunningham senior, Erin Casebeer, Garden City senior, said.

Tomorrow's broadcast will feature a local campus figure.

"This 15-minute additional segment will interview guest, I.B. Dent, director of student activities, tonight over the MUAB concert series," Promotion and Public Service Director, Kaue Thompson said.

"On Thursday "Our Town" will do a segment over Halloween, which will last 15 minutes as well," Thompson said.

If students miss the regular broadcast time for the news, a taped version is shown at 9 p.m. on the same channel, Thompson said.

The campus station presents local and campus news along with county and state news.

"KFHS is comprehensive as far as Hays goes. We cover two segments on news, one segment on weather and one segment on sports," Thompson said.

Four news anchors along with one alternate and one sports anchor backed by one alternate, were chosen after tryouts earlier this month.

Lia Blanchard, Hays senior, and Casebeer will anchor on Tuesdays and Stacy Barth, Ashland junior, and Greg McFadden, Andale junior, will cast on Thursdays. Agung Laksamana, Batuphat, Calif., senior, is the chosen alternate.

Margie Johnson, Plainville junior, will handle sports, with Steve Chadwick, Vermillion senior, standing by as alternate.

"These students happen to be communications majors, but tryouts are open to any interested FHSU student," Thompson said.

The new anchors will remain in their positions until the end of the fall semester.

Roberts speaks as campaign nears end

Scott Legleiter
Staff writer

First District Representative Pat Roberts, R-Dodge City, spoke eagerly about his agenda for the next session of Congress during the Hays Chamber of Commerce Eggs and Issues Breakfast last Saturday.

Referring to his congressional district as "homogeneous," Roberts said in terms of size, the First District, which includes 66 counties, is the largest district in the Congress.

He also addressed the discontent many voters have about today's politicians.

"This country is becoming more diverse," Roberts said. "This has not been a positive year on the campaign trail, but I campaign for the office rather than against my opponent."

Roberts, who serves as co-chairman for the Rural Health Care Coalition, endorsed Senator Nancy Kassebaum's health care proposal entitled, "Basic Care."

He said, "I know we have to make care affordable and available to everyone."

Controlling health care costs, capping malpractice suits and the standardization of medical forms are all ways Roberts feels the problem can be solved.

"Well, I think we have been part of the answer, not part of the problem," Roberts said.

"We've worked very hard with President Hammond under the budget restrictions we have for funding of

Pat Roberts
First District Representative

the central projects for the university.

Roberts also believes in the concept of a "medical savings account," where all citizens would pay a premium in which the unused money would be rolled over to the next year.

According to Roberts, he has been working hard to obtain federal funds for First District's educational instituations.

Roberts said he hopes restoration of "integrity to the Congress" will alleviate problems such as the national debt and America's fiscal policies which are currently "mortgaging our future."

"The main problem I feel is how do we set out nation's fiscal policy in order so that your generation will have the same kind of America that my generation has enjoyed," Roberts said.

On education reform, Roberts supports President Bush's plan, "America 2000."

He said, "I think there are a number of policies outlined by the President, and I agree with them. The biggest thing I think is to try to achieve these goals on a national scale, but keep control of the schools on the local level."

With election day only a week away, Roberts hopes people will do their "homework" before going to the polls.

"Change, for the sake of change, doesn't make any sense until you know what kind of change you're trying to affect," Roberts said. "I would hope people would do their homework to the extent they can distinguish between those who have been really fighting for their interests and those who have not."

Election coming

One week from today, Americans will know who will be the next President.

No matter which side one chooses to vote for, one thing is for sure, this may be one of the most important elections in this century.

No matter who wins he must find the answers to solve the United States' ills.

Number one on the list is the most immediate problem, the economy. There are also other ailments such as the national debt, abortion, the environment and education.

Today, we look at those five issues from the points of view of the three candidates (page 4).

Is it really that bad or is the country full of pessimists?

Does anyone have the answers?

That question is up to the voters next week.

Will the winning candidate do everything he promised to the voters?

It never seems to happen, but maybe just this once someone will do something to make our country strong again.

Guest Columns

The University Leader encourages readers to submit editorials and/or columns on their views.

Editorials run 150 to 250 words and columns run 500 to 700 words.

The editorial staff reserves the right to condense and edit articles according to available space and Leader style. Publication of the articles is not guaranteed.

College lifestyle stressful

I don't know about all of you, but I'm feeling a tad bit stressed! I can't imagine why. It's not as if we've been right in the middle of mid-terms, while also trying to meet every deadline imaginable.

I remember the days when I might have stressed over what fingernail polish I would wear to match an outfit for the next day.

Now, I do good just getting out of bed to find an outfit to wear, much less even worrying about polishing my nails.

Just what is stress? Could it be anything that gives you those awful, throbbing headaches that will not stop regardless of how many pain killers you've swallowed, or the urge to jump right back in bed, throwing the covers over your head and yelling, "FORGET IT!"

Stress gives me the wild sensation of taking off to that great getaway spot, while being wailed on hand and foot, not doing one single thing, except enjoying life.

We encounter stress in everything we do. But, good grief, this is getting ridiculous.

For those of us who don't believe in reincarnation, "we only live once," right? This is not the way I want to be living my "one" life... STRESSED!

To overcome or even prevent stress, one needs adequate sleep, nourishing meals, proper exercise and a positive outlook on life.

Where does sleep come in when you're up till the wee hours of the night studying, or could that be partying? (Ha! I wish).

Then just when you are falling into a deep sleep, the alarm goes off sending you into a frenzy in a race against time.

As for nourishing meals... just what is a "meal?"

Then, we come to that part about "proper" exercise. It may not be proper, but running up and down the stairs or clear across campus to beat the ticking clock should count for something.

What about the "positive" outlook on life? I'm positive I need a break.

As a young girl, I thought I had it rough when I had been sent to my room full of toys, mind you, for the rest of the afternoon.

I'd pretend I was dead, hoping my mother would feel sad and regret her decision. After about 10 minutes, I'd usually fall asleep.

These days, I'd give anything for someone to send me to my room where I could catch up on "hours" of sleep.

It's inevitable to totally avoid stress. So in the meantime, there are ways to lighten the weight of our hectic lives. A good healthy laugh can do the trick for most, which is what I usually resort to in the end out of sheer madness.

That brings to mind one of my favorite scenes in the movie "Money Pit," starring Tom Hanks.

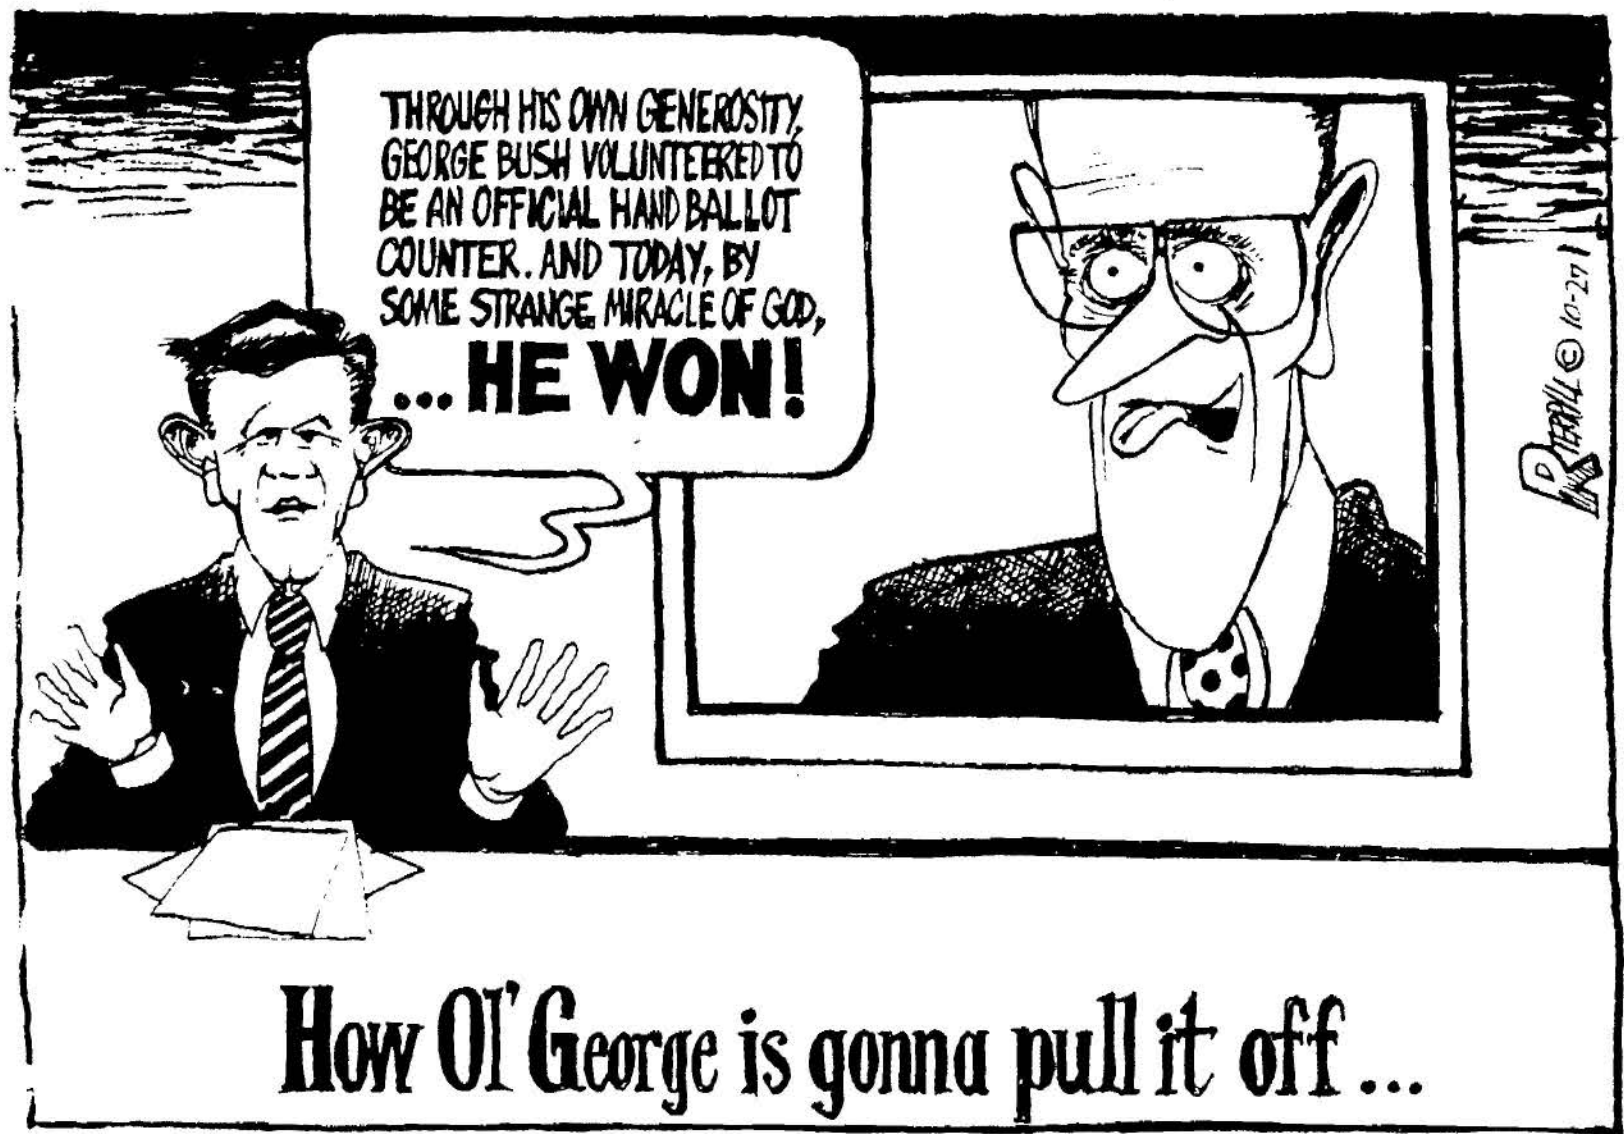

The scene is where the bathtub falls through the upstairs floor, causing a major mess, in addition to the already existing catastrophe.

Hanks just stands there on the second floor, looking at the tub lying on the first floor, wanting to cry but laughing instead.

Laughter is a great reliever of stress. This comedic movie ends in a positive way, with all living happily ever after. That is until stress sets in again.

Keep in mind that things can and will get better, maybe even slow down.

For the time being, taking a deep breath and putting a smile on your face should suffice.

How Ol' George is gonna pull it off ...

Letters to the editor

Response to Oakley

Dear editor:

This is in response to Wec Oakley's letter in the Oct. 15 paper. First off, I cannot believe Reverend Oakley would discredit Marion Shapiro's statements when she is a sex educator and has access to current information on issues pertaining to sexual orientation. The report by the Kinsey Institute that Oakley used is close to 50 years old.

Who is Dr. Judith Marmor? I am a student of psychology and to my knowledge and the knowledge of some psychology professors on campus, this man has never been a past president of the American Psychological Association.

Possibly, a past president of the American Psychiatric Association. There are two different organizations.

Maybe, this Dr. Marmor was a president of the American Psychological Association in the 1940's.

Well, then maybe he would have said such a statement, but anyone that has thoroughly researched the area of homosexuality would know that current studies have found that there possibly is a genetic determinant of homosexuality.

Maybe Oakley needs to research this topic more thoroughly with more current information.

As of Dec. 14, 1973, the American Psychiatric Association no longer considered homosexuality a mental disorder.

They deleted it from the Diagnostic and Statistical Manual of Mental Disorders which is used by psychiatrists and psychologists for making a mental disorder diagnosis.

Psychiatrists and psychologists after this date have no longer attempted to change a person's sexual orientation.

Instead, they attempt to create a supportive environment for people that may be having difficulty adjusting, accepting or coping with their homosexuality.

However, they do not tell that person they can change their sexual orientation to that of a heterosexual. Therefore, what right does Oakley have in saying homosexuals can change their lifestyles?

Furthermore, those people that say they have left their homosexual lifestyle, probably say so because of people like Oakley who does not allow them to ever become comfortable with their sexual orientation.

They may see it easier to pretend to be heterosexual, so they aren't ostracized by people like Oakley. Has Oakley read any current information on AIDS?

The current fastest growing cases of AIDS are those of heterosexual women.

Obviously, they did not get the disease from a homosexual male.

These women that contract AIDS and may also be pregnant have a great chance of passing the AIDS virus onto their newborn. Wake up, Oakley!

AIDS affects everyone! It is no longer strictly a homosexual disease. I am really surprised Oakley would promote less research funding for AIDS when the disease has the potential of affecting his family also.

In conclusion, I think we all should go on with our lives and quit the big fuss over the establishment of a gay and lesbian organization on campus.

The only difference of a homosexual is what they do in the privacy of their bedroom. They are productive members of our society just like heterosexuals. My hope is that more people would realize this fact.

However, Oakley seems to be a hopeless case.

Campus/Community Briefs

Donors requested

All community and campus members are encouraged to become a volunteer blood donor when the Red Cross Bloodmobile visits Fort Hays State tomorrow.

The bloodmobile will be set up from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

No Leader Friday

The staffs of student publications will be attending the annual Collegiate Media Advisers and American Collegiate Press National Convention in Chicago tomorrow through Sunday, so there will be no University Leader published on Friday.

The Leader will resume its regular schedule with publication on Tuesday, Nov. 3.

Health career fair

The nursing and allied health career fair will be conducted from 9 a.m. to noon on Monday in the Fort Hays Ballroom in the Memorial Union.

Currently, there will be approximately 30 organizations participating.

The fair will inform students and former graduates of the career opportunities available to them in the health profession.

All undergraduates, as well as graduates and alumni, are welcome to attend.

For more information, call 628-4260.

Books on sale

The Phi Alpha Theta organization will be conducting a book sale from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. tomorrow on the third floor of Rarick Hall.

Selections range from academic to leisure.

If anyone is interested in donating books, please contact Tracy Holst at 628-4236 or the history office.

Debates begin

Two Fort Hays State students will argue the topic of the welfare system at the first Sunflower debate of the year at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Pioneer Room of the Memorial Union.

The public is invited to attend.

For more information, call Chris Crawford at 628-4337.

Tickets still on sale

Tickets are still on sale for the upcoming Sunday, Nov. 8 concert of the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band and Hal Ketchum.

Tickets are available at the Student Service Center in the Memorial Union.

Open house

The opportunity to view Saturn and the Andromeda Galaxy is offered to area skygazers 7:30 to 10:30 Thursday night.

The event is sponsored by the Astronomy Club and the evening will begin with a short meeting in Albertson 109.

Members and guests will then adjourn to the observatory for a look at the sky through mounted telescopes.

For more information, call 628-3532.

Spring schedules in

The 1993 Spring semester class schedules have been prepared and may be picked up in the Registrar's office or in the north entrance of the Memorial Union.

Group to offer relief, support from anxiety

Tracy Whitlock
Copy editor

All of us feel anxious at one time or another.

However, for some people this anxiety is so overwhelming it interferes with their daily lives.

If you have chronic anxiety that is keeping you from leading the life you want, there is a new group forming on campus that can help.

Shantel Randolph, psychology graduate assistant at Kelly Center, will be leading the group for people who need to learn ways to cope with chronic anxiety.

People with chronic anxiety suffer from panic attacks that keep them from leading a normal life. To be labeled as chronic, the condition must have lasted for at least six months, she said.

The group will meet on Wednesday nights from 6:30 to 8:30 and is scheduled to start this week.

The group's meetings will continue for eight to 10 weeks, Randolph said.

There is no fee, and the group is open to students, faculty and community members.

Randolph said the group will direct what kind of activities and methods they use.

"It depends on what they want," she said.

Some different aspects will include mass discussions.

"There will be a lot of group sharing."

Randolph said she does not want the group to be too structured.

The first step to joining the group is to contact Randolph, who will then set up a time to talk with the person and decide if this group would be helpful to the person.

If not, Randolph can refer the person to someone else for treatment.

All calls are confidential so people should not be afraid to call and discuss their problem.

"I'm willing to talk to anybody."

Randolph said she has four possible members. She said this is a pretty good number because she was aiming for six to eight.

The book Randolph will be using for the group is "Coping with Panic" by George Klum.

"It has excellent techniques to overcome panic and fears," Randolph said.

The idea for the group came from Randolph.

Frerer to stage production in Russell Branching out

Kathy Swigart
Staff writer

Everyone enjoys being entertained, whether by music or drama. Few people, however, have the chance to make both areas part of their daily life.

Lloyd Frerer, professor of communication, has had the opportunity to make the art of entertainment his passion. In fact, he has avidly devoted 22-23 years of his career to the students of Fort Hays State.

Frerer

Now he is going to devote his experience to the community of Russell, where he will direct his first off-campus play.

He has previously had experience with the community based amateur theater in Russell as an actor. Frerer acted in the play, "The Fantastics," about five years ago, he said.

The company asked Frerer this fall to direct the play "The Good Doctor," by Neil Simon. Simon was generally a comedy writer, having produced "The Odd Couple," which aired on television in the '70s.

"The Good Doctor" is based on the stories of the Russian, Antov Chekov. Each scene portrays a different topic.

Frerer said normally he would not have had the time because of directing the fall production on campus at FHSC. This year, however, he was free to direct somewhere else, so Frerer jumped at the chance to direct the Russell company.

The cast of "The Good Doctor," has been under the direction of Frerer since Labor Day. The cast consists of middle-aged community people, ranging from teachers to lawyers to city council members.

There are approximately 11 cast members all together, and each person plays at least two different parts. After a month and a half, the production is ready to hit the stage beginning early next week, Frerer said.

He said "The Good Doctor" is a dinner theater although, "dinner at tendance isn't required to see the play."

The dinner begins at 6:30 p.m., while the play is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m.

It opens tonight and runs through Saturday. The production will be shown at the Elks Lodge in Russell.

Since it is a dinner production, there is only one price for all ages, Frerer said. The price for the dinner and show is $13, while the play itself is $5.

Frerer said he has always preferred to watch action-adventure shows for entertainment, but his personal preferences aide him in choosing a play to produce. He said he loves to direct sit-coms just to watch the reaction of audience members.

Ehr to be consultant

Kelly Freeman
Staff writer

Carolyn Ehr, professor of mathematics and computer science, has been chosen to be a consultant for a pilot project on using interactive two-way television to teach mathematics.

Ehr was chosen to represent Fort Hays State because of her experience in working with teachers kindergarten through twelfth grades, her knowledge of two-way interactive television and her membership on the Kansas Mathematical Sciences Education Board.

Ehr said the main goal is to upgrade the background for kindergarten through twelfth grades mathematics teachers in three areas.

"We should be able to provide more mathematics, to implement new mathematics instruction methods and to use the appropriate technology in teaching the mathematics," Ehr said.

Ehr said this year she will be working with representatives from other regents' institutions to help plan the experimental program.

"I am really excited because working cooperatively is a big plus," Ehr said.

"This project is marvelous. It is for the good of all the teachers in the entire state," Ehr said.

Decision '92		Where do they stand?
		George Bush Republican	Bill Clinton Democrat	Ross Perot Independent
The issues
The National Debt	No set plan, but would freeze domestic discretionary spending while using defense savings to reduce the deficit.	Tax increase on high income Americans, along with reduction in defense spending and the reorder of domestic priorities.	His No. 1 priority. Would use a series of measures, such as raise gas and tobacco taxes, cut defense spending and enact a deficit reduction law.
The Economy	Committed to maintaining a tax system that will encourage investment and proposes tax cuts to "spur economic growth and jobs."	Investing over $50 billion annually to put America back to work. This would include the conversion of defense jobs to civilian ones.	Expand the number of tax payers by putting people back to work. Stimulate growth of small businesses and target future industries.
Abortion	Opposed to abortion except when mother's life is threatened or in cases of rape or incest.	Supports a woman's right to choose.	Favors a woman's right to an abortion, but has reservations on its use for birth control. He supports parental notice.
Education	His "America 2000" program calls for teacher incentives, school choice for parents, and creation of world class standards for America's schools.	Overhaul public schools with tough standards, national exams and provide public school choice. Supports a "Safe Schools Initiative."	Recommends "no pass, no play" for student athletes. Smaller class sizes, competency tests and equal funding for all school districts.
The Environment	Initiate a number of new programs that would reduce toxic waste and pursue new technologies.	Ensure that environmental decisions are based on scientific data, not politics.	Supports incentives over regulations to achieve environmental goals.

IRONICALLY, THE TIME TO START SAVING FOR RETIREMENT IS WHEN IT LOOKS LIKE YOU CAN LEAST AFFORD IT.

Can't afford to save for retirement? The truth is, you can't afford not to. Not when you realize that your retirement can assure you a secure income. You want to work longer, you need more money.

By starting to save for retirement now, you can take advantage of tax-deferred growth. You can benefit from the power of compounding. You can accumulate over $1 million to the time you reach age 65. But you must start now. The longer you wait, the less you can accumulate.

Even if you're not counting the years to retirement, you can count on TIAA-CREF to help you build the future. In defense with flexible retirement and tax-deferred growth, you can secure your future. You can plan for the future.

Call today and learn how simple it is to begin your retirement plan. Call us now. TIAA-CREF is working to make it easier.

Start planning your future. Call our Enrollment Hotline 1-800-842-3888.
