Pride discusses lighting, Oktoberfest at meeting

Stephanie Baccus
Staff writer

The Pride In Our Community Committee had a full agenda Wednesday night when they met at City Hall.

The committee was formed last year by the city commission to help improve community conditions in Hays, particularly in the southwest area.

Items discussed include inadequate lighting in the southwest part of Hays, the Ellis County Community Partnership and concerns surrounding the annual Oktoberfest celebration.

The first item on the agenda was a discussion with Charles Reese, Midwest Energy representative.

"The subject has come up more than once with this committee, about inadequate lighting," Bill Davis, committee chairman, said.

Earlier this year, the committee asked Reese to look at and discuss recommendation for more lighting.

"It's my understanding that our recommendations have been approved for the 1993 budget," Reese said, concluding that the new lights should be going up sometime in 1993.

Next, Davis introduced Cindi Geist, Prevention Coordinator from the Smokey Hill Foundation, Regional Prevention Center.

Geist spoke on behalf of the Ellis County Community Partnership, a group formed by the Regional Prevention Center.

The goal of the ECCP is to bring together all the different segments of the community to work towards alcohol and drug abuse prevention.

"There is no way we can solve this problem alone. This community knows what the problems are. We know what is causing it," Geist said.

Finally, the committee spent the last half of the meeting on the issue of Oktoberfest and Homecoming weekend. Davis began the discussion by asking if Fort Hays State acknowledged a problem of student underage drinking.

Lisa Heath, director of student development, responded by noting if the university did not see a problem, they would not have sent representatives to the Pride meeting.

FHSU has been "turning away from those (drinking) activities for years now," Heath said.

Brett Frerichs, Goodland senior, said, "It's just one weekend. If we get rid of Oktoberfest, we're not going to alleviate this problem at all. The signals you get say it is centered around drinking, even from the community."

Suggestions were offered on the subject at more limited times or later in the day, separating beer booths from craft booths, and even to serve non-alcoholic beer or no beer at all.

The next meeting date will be posted at city hall.

President Edward Hammond presents Raymond Wilson, professor of history, a medallion to honor him as the 1992 Presidents Distinguished Scholar Thursday afternoon. Wilson was also presented with a plaque and a $1000 check from the University at the honors convocation held in the Black and Gold Ballroom of the Memorial Union.

History professor receives faculty award

Stephanie Baccus
Staff writer

Fort Hays State recently recognized Raymond Wilson, professor of history, with the highest honor given to faculty members at FHSU.

At the Honors Convocation last Thursday, Wilson was presented with the fourth Presidents Distinguished Scholar Award by President's Edward Hammond.

The award began in 1988 when the FHSU Faculty Senate recommended to Hammond that "an award be given to recognize instruction, research, creative activities and service performance of faculty," according to a brochure distributed at the presentation.

"Dr. Jim Murphy, (professor of administration, counseling and education services) who was provost at that time was really one of the driving forces behind this, and I do want to recognize him and give him credit for it," Hammond said during the program.

"It's a great honor and I'm really pleased to receive it. I'll treasure it forever," Wilson said.

Wilson received his bachelor of arts degree from Fort Lewis College, Durango, Colo., his master's degree from the University of Nebraska-Omaha and his Ph.D. from the University of New Mexico, Albuquerque.

He joined FHSU in 1979.

According to the brochure, Wilson is a well known author, including five books, one of which has been chosen by a Hollywood company for a "possible movie project."

He is listed in "The International Directory of Distinguished Leadership," and in the "Who's Who Reference Encyclopedia of the American Indian."

Wilson is also a member of the Education Committee of the Kansas Commission for the 125th.

Two past recipients of the award were at the ceremony.

Eugene Fleharty, professor of biological sciences and allied health, 1990 recipient, and last year's reipient, Lewis Miller, professor of music, attended.

Gary Hulett, acting vice president of academic affairs, was host of the event and Richard Hugen, president of Faculty Senate, provided the welcoming speech.

Sharon Wilson, instructor of English, and his wife, introduced Wilson for his scholarly address.

The speech, entitled "Heads You Win, Tails You Lose: Kansas Indian Casino Gambling," was followed by Hammond's presentation of the award to Wilson.

The recipient of the award is given a $1,000 check, a plaque and an artifact designed for the occasion by Jim Hinkhouse, professor of art.

Halls sponsor sex talk

Tracy Whitlock
Copy editor

"Let's talk about sex, baby." That is what about 25 residence hall members did last night at McMindes Hall.

The hall councils of Wiest Hall, McGrath Hall, McMindes Hall and Custer Hall sponsored a sex talk by Marian Shapiro, director of education at Planned Parenthood.

Eric Grosz, program coordinator for Wiest, said he was happy with the turnout, although he wished more men had attended.

Grosz said the council wanted to have the program to provide people with a "basic knowledge" of sex.

"With the new group Western Kansas Gay and Lesbian Society (there are a lot of misconceptions)," Grosz said.

Shapiro gave participants a questionnaire about myths about gay and lesbians and their attitudes toward them.

Most participants realized people do not choose to be gay, homosexuality is no longer considered a mental disorder, and anal intercourse is one of the highest risk behaviors for HIV transmission.

On the opinion portion of the questionnaire, more people were uncomfortable with gays because they thought it was morally wrong rather than that they were afraid of the gay person "coming on to them."

Shapiro said people should not be afraid of gay friends coming on to them. "Let them know your sexual orientation."

Opinions of the group showed most people thought oral sex is an acceptable sex practice, but anal sex is not normal.

Shapiro said in a relationship no one should feel as though they have to do something they are not comfortable with. "Stick up for your values," she said.

Shapiro also offered some tips to avoid date rape. She said stay in a group, drink only in a group of friends of the same sex and do not drink on dates.

Shapiro said she thinks it has become more acceptable to say no to sex with the AIDS situation.

Commencement changes considered

Anne Zohner
Managing editor

Although the question has been discussed in length by the Student Government Association, the issue is far from over.

At yesterday's Faculty Senate meeting, the topic of commencement ceremonies was debated following a motion from the executive committee.

The motion stated the future Fort Hays State commencement ceremonies "take place at Lewis Field on the Saturday morning after final examination week and scheduled such that the ceremony lasts no more than 90 minutes and is over by noon."

In addition, the motion also stated the ceremony would be conducted at Gross Memorial Coliseum in the case of inclement weather or "other unusual circumstances."

One of the obvious circumstances which would not allow the ceremonies to be at Lewis Field would be the renovation of the stadium, Richard Hugen, faculty senate president, said.

"Lewis Field would not be available this spring due to the renovation," he said.

The Senate questioned the need to move the ceremony to Lewis Field and offered alternative suggestions.

"I think we should think about having the graduation in a small series of ceremonies and award diplomas school by school," Albert Geritz, professor of English, said.

"It would allow FHSU to showcase the fine facility we have over here (Beach/Schmidt Performing Arts Center). I think the only difference you are going to have by having it over at Lewis Field is the horrible noise will be out in the open," he said.

Last May's ceremony is something that the whole "university" should be ashamed of what happened," Geritz said.

Hugen said several possibilities had been discussed with the students and highlighted the fact that Andy Addis, student body president, had written him a letter stating the students preferred only one ceremony as opposed to several small ones.

Other preferences were also made known to Hugen.

"One proposal was not to read names and students preferred not to do that and some faculty members also opposed this," he said. "Students said they would rather have other things cut back."

Geritz said he still felt in order for the ceremony to be meaningful, it would need to be smaller.

"If students want to walk across the

Clinton favored as candidate to take election

Committee releases poll results

Melissa Chaffin
Copy editor

Polls have been trying to predict who will be chosen as president and today's voters will determine the outcome of the 1992 presidential race.

The Fort Hays State Political Education Committee has released the results of their presidential election survey.

A random 227 students were surveyed over the phone, giving a 7 percent margin of error. The survey was completed from Oct. 19 to Nov. 27 by the committee in order to reveal student views on the presidential election.

Jay Ossio, assistant professor of political science, headed the study.

Bethanie Popejoy, committee member, said, "Ossio chose the questions in order to have a non-biased poll and to vary the answers we could get a wide range of data."

According to a press release, 33 percent of those surveyed indicated they would like to see Bill Clinton, Arkansas Governor, win the election, 22 percent chose Ross Perot, independent candidate, and 26 percent would like to see President Bush re-elected. Twelve percent were undecided.

"The university was an indicator of what was going on in the national polls. It was surprising."

Popejoy said, "The university was an indicator of what was going on in the national polls. It was surprising."

She said, "I was surprised at how many students are registered to vote (75 percent) and that is way above the national average."

The national economic was the student body's No. 1 concern indicated by the survey.

The press release stated over 70 percent of the respondents identified either the economy or the budget deficit as the most important issue concerning the nation.

Popejoy said what she learned most from the survey is the interest and involvement students are taking in politics. "It's not true that people don't care anymore."

Perot was selected as the best presidential candidate to handle the economic problems facing the country by 43 percent of the respondents, according to the press release.

Thirty percent of the respondents thought Clinton would tackle the economic problems best, whereas only 17 percent selected Bush.

When asked whether or not they approved of the way President Bush handled his job as president, only 36 percent of the sample approved of his performance.

The FHSU Political Education Committee is a bi-partisan group made up of Collegiate Republicans and the Young Democrats and the political science department.

No place like home

After spending five days in Chicago, it's funny how nice home can actually be.

After being overwhelmed by the beauty of the Chicago skyline at night, reality quickly hit home as to why people choose to live in northwest Kansas.

Prices were beyond belief. Between cab fares and restaurants, I thought I would come home broke.

Then there were the people begging for money on street corners even though some of them were wearing nicer clothes than I was. Of course, there were the homeless people, and although I felt sorry for them, I finally understood why people in the big cities become heartless towards them. Few people have enough money for all those handouts.

No, there are no great ball parks such as Wrigley Field, no Sears Tower, no Michael Jordan and no big shopping areas such as the Magnificent Mile on Michigan Avenue in Hays, but we can walk the streets feeling safe and we can drive our cars without spending $1.40 per gallon on gas.

Chicago was a nice place to visit, but no matter where you go or what you do, there is no place like home.

Television: What is real and what is set up?

A person spends their time doing a variety of things throughout the day, one of which is watching many hours of television.

A 1986 study from the book "Mass Communications" by Ronald Farrer showed that a typical household spends approximately seven hours and seven minutes a day watching television.

There was a 14 percent increase from the seven years before that and is still continuing to rise.

The astonishing part is not how much television we watch, but how much of it is just staged.

Last Wednesday through Sunday, members of the University Leader and Reveille staffs attended the Collegiate Media Advisers and American Collegiate Press national convention in Chicago.

While in Chicago, the majority of the members were given the chance to be a part of the audience of the Oprah Winfrey Show.

I am an Oprah fan. Practically every day I have a chance, I watch

Crystal Holdren

Senior copy editor

her show, until now. From the time I knew I would get to be in the audience to the time I sat in one of the chairs, I thought this would be 100 times better than sitting in my living room and watching it.

I was mistaken. I will never watch Oprah in the same way again.

Everything about the show was staged: the topic, the guests, the audience and even Oprah.

Of course, the show needs to have some organization to be successfully aired. The part which amazed me was the way the audience was treated.

I had always presumed the audience could up and ask a question just because they wanted to.

But in reality, the personnel of the Oprah Show placed everyone they thought should speak in certain areas and told Oprah which people to go to, during a commercial break.

The other thing I was disappointed in was Oprah herself. On television, she seems to be very personable, watching the audience and responding.

Oprah didn't seem to me to have very good interpersonal communication skills when it came to the audience. She does have good presentation skills, however.

When watching the show at home, she looked like she was looking around the audience to see if anyone had a question. In actuality she was just looking at a cameraman who told her how much time she had left.

I don't have a problem with setting things up to be prepared, but it is the fact that something on television which seemed so real is fake.

How many other shows which appear real are fake also?

This is what concerns me about television. Children are the most susceptible to this. Most of what children learn now is from television.

If children are going to learn, they need to learn factual information and not information that is shown on television to just get a good rating.

This could be a reason why the values of our society are decreasing because people cannot make a distinction between what is truth and what is staged on television.

If the television is a learning tool, then there needs to be more attention being focused on getting the truth on the air.

Maybe the television networks and individual production companies should get together and improve the quality of the material being aired over the wires. In the long run, it may just help out society.

Letter Policy

The University Leader encourages reader response. Letters to the editor should not exceed 300 words in length.

All letters must be signed, no exceptions. Letters must include addresses and telephone numbers. Students are asked to include their hometown and classifications, and faculty and staff are asked to include their titles.

Letters must be turned into the Leader two days before the next publication or they may be held over until the next issue.

Letters to the editor

Medical care sought

Dear editor:

I would like to express my concerns regarding the present medical conditions in the city of Hays. I am very upset, to say the least. I am a single mother of two boys, ages 7 and 3.

As a new resident of Hays, I have had a difficult, actually impossible, time trying to get family medical care for my children. The Student Health Center at FHSU was super, but they only take students and their spouses. NO CHILDREN ALLOWED!

I went to a nurse practitioner for my oldest son, but she wouldn't see my 3-year old. NO CHILDREN UNDER 4 ALLOWED!

I also found this situation at another clinic. The other places that I found wouldn't see us because we haven't been there before. NO NEW PATIENTS ALLOWED!

What is a mother to do with a child under 4 who gets sick in Hays, or are they not supposed to get sick until they are 4? I'm open for suggestions.

I am a full time student who lives on a limited income. I can't afford the emergency room charges for strep throat, etc.

I was forced to drive out of town to get appointments for my sick children.

Family practices are becoming obsolete; everyone is a specialist of some kind.

I know several mothers who are in the same situation of trying to find quality care for their children.

What is going to happen to all of the children if the pediatrician's clinic closes down this spring?

More people will be forced to drive out-of-town for needed services, until these rural areas stop taking new patients. Then what?

I'm sure that this problem affects many non-traditional students and their families who moved here.

I am a social work major who would like to see the accessibility to these needed resources. It's funny how people don't get involved with an issue until it "hits at home."

I think this has made me more aware of my environment and more apt to put my two-cents worth in on an issue, whether or not it directly affects me. I just hope others will do the same and get involved.

I don't think that people realize the extent of the present medical situation.

Julie Black
Hays senior

Program developing

Dear editor:

This past Monday evening, Oct. 26, Ellis County Environmental Awareness presented a very informative public forum for our Ellis County Commissioner candidates. This gave the candidates the opportunity to express their views on environmental issues which are and will be facing Ellis County.

As the subject of recycling came up, an individual from Students Acting for a Greener Earth present at the forum made the statement that "the test pilot curbside recycling program didn't go over, and we haven't heard about it since." This is a misconception and we would like to clear this up should other people share this same view.

The Pilot Curbside Recycling Program was very successful. It was necessary for us to obtain statistical data in order for us to plan a city-wide program. The Pilot Curbside Recycling Program provided the necessary statistics. Those statistics have been published in "The Hays Daily News" in the past. Also, the statistics were displayed in a Mall window display in the spring. These statistics were also given during the Earthfest sponsored by SAGE on the Fort Hays State campus this past

April

Feb. 12 the Hays City Commission appointed a Refuse Delivery Advisory Committee from a list of volunteer citizens for the purpose of reviewing our present trash hauling system and making suggestions on possible changes which would hopefully include a citywide residential recycling pickup service. The committee has been meeting on a regular basis. Information is continually being gathered so recommendations can be made to the Hays City Commission as soon as feasible. We are all anxious to get a citywide recycling program underway, but it is important that all details be worked out so the program can work smoothly and at the least expense.

If you support the concept of having a citywide recycling pickup service please be patient and let our city leaders know of your support. Please continue to recycle all you can on your own and make a strong effort to buy recycled products (especially paper products) to help strengthen the markets.

Campus/ Community Briefs

Oliva to speak

Leo Oliva, a national authority on the Santa Fe Trail, will give a slide presentation at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Black and Gold Ballroom in the Memorial Union.

Phi Delta Kappa, education honorary, invites the public to this free program and also to the 7 p.m. reception.

Oliva has written a book about the trail, and he and his wife, Bonita, have conducted tours across its entire length.

Election party

The Memorial Union Activities Board is sponsoring an election night party at 8 tonight at the Backdoor.

All students are welcome and encouraged to attend and watch as the election results unfold.

There will be door prizes and games, as well as refreshments.

Screenings Friday

Free screenings to check the development of children birth through 5 years are being offered Friday at the Early Childhood Development/Community Childcare, "The Children's Center."

The screening, sponsored by the Hays Interagency Coordinating Council for Preschool Children, may identify potential problems which could later cause difficulties for the child.

Interested parents who have a concern about their child's development can call the Center at 625-3257 for an appointment.

The screening appointments are scheduled on a first come-first serve basis.

Awards Scholarship

Soroptimist International of Hays would like to announce the availability of its annual scholarship for the Training Awards Program.

The Training Awards Program Scholarship is to aid mature women who must enter or return to the job market.

These women need additional skills, training and education to upgrade their employment status.

Candidates should be heads of households completing undergraduate programs or entering vocational or technical training programs.

Soroptimist International of Hays is a classified service organization for executive and professional women.

Anyone interested in applying for these scholarships should contact Jane Schumacher at 625-8459.

Tickets still on sale

Tickets are still on sale for Sunday's concert of the Nitty Gritty Dirt Band and Hal Ketchum.

Tickets are available at the Student Service Center in the Memorial Union.

Last day to drop

Students are reminded that this is the last week to drop a class for this semester.

All drop slips will need to be received in the Registrar's office no later than Friday.

Spring schedules in

The 1993 Spring semester class schedules have been prepared and may be picked up in the Registrar's office or at the Student Service Center.

stage, shake the president's hand and have it mean something, it needs to be smaller," he said. "It gets boring to watch 600 people walk across the stage and do that."

In addition, Hugen said he had also received feedback from faculty members.

"I sent out a message on PROFS and there were very few negative comments about changing the ceremony to Saturday," he said.

Other comments were made about the action and behavior of the faculty members at commencement.

"Although I feel the students' behavior was not acceptable, we also need to look at the way our faculty acted," Garry Brower, associate professor of agriculture, said.

The motion was tabled and sent back to the Student Action Committee for further discussion.

In other business, Larry Gould, dean of arts and sciences, addressed the Senate on three continuing projects and processes.

Gould summarized the work of the General Education Committee, the Honor Program Task Force and the Student Leadership Committee.

The next meeting of the Senate will be at 3:30 p.m. on Tuesday, Dec. 1 in the Pioneer Lounge of the Memorial Union.

Bryna Sandstrom Staff writer

The Student Government Association heard three speakers from a new committee on campus which will address multicultural issues.

Among the issues the Cultural Diversity Committee will focus on are women's issues, American issues, handicapped issues and Hispanic issues.

Lisa Heath, director of student development, addressed the senate and asked for their support.

"We solicit and need and welcome your input and involvement in multicultural issues," she said.

Herman Reese, Colorado Springs, Colo., junior, said the committee was formed to bring awareness to campus of the diversity among the students, the faculty and others.

"You don't have to like a person, but everyone on a college campus should understand where certain people come from and what they have to go through," Reese said.

Pelgy Vaz, associate professor of sociology, said the goal of the committee is to help students and faculty to have "human dignity and respect for everyone."

"People want to come here and get an education without feeling left out. A lot of people get an education but they can't take part in the campus and community," Reese said. "Everyone here needs to understand we should feel a part (of the community)."

In other business, the Legislative and Political Action committee submitted a resolution to take the place of the one vetoed by Andy Addis, student body president.

"The basis of the veto on the qualified admissions proposal was not that I thought it was a bad idea," Addis said, "but that I thought there were elements that would make it impossible to take it to Topeka, impossible to do anything with."

The new resolution proposes incoming freshmen have an ACT score of 20, instead of the 18.

Tigers return from road stretch

Rebecca Lofton
Staff writer

The Fort Hays State Women's Volleyball team has just returned from a five-game road stretch from Oct. 27-31.

The Lady Tigers first came up against Colorado College and were defeated 3-15, 13-15 and 14-16.

They then defeated Western State College on Wednesday, Oct. 28 9-15, 12-15, 15-6, 15-3 and 15-11.

Assistant Coach Marlys Gwaltney said, "The high point of this trip was coming back against Western State College after we lost the first two games."

Western State was an important game as it counted as a conference game, Gwaltney said.

"It was as if all of a sudden we came alive and came back to win," Gwaltney said.

On Thursday, the Lady Tigers defeated Fort Lewis College 10-15, 15-5, 15-9 and 15-10.

The Lady Tigers then moved on to Alamosa, Colo. where they were defeated by Adams State College in a conference game 8-15, 7-15 and 4-15.

All were disappointed with this loss, Gwaltney said.

"We weren't mentally prepared to play Adams. There were several inconsistencies and mental errors," she said.

The Lady Tigers finished out their road trip on Saturday, defeating New Mexico Highlands 14-16, 17-15, 15-6, 11-15 and 15-8.

Of the overall venture, Niki Mock, junior, said, "It seemed like in every game we got off to a really slow start. We need to get off to a quicker start."

The Lady Tigers play Central Missouri State University at 7 p.m. tomorrow at Gross Memorial Coliseum.

Fort Hays and rain dominate Eagles

Christian Wallingford
Staff writer

Mother nature was partially responsible for the 10-0 Tiger victory over the Chadron State College Eagles Saturday afternoon. Chadron's Ellis Field was the victim of an autumn rain that rendered the playing surface slow at best.

The adverse playing conditions and a swarming Fort Hays defense held the Eagle offense, which had averaged 32 points a game through seven contests, to zero points and minus 24 yards on the ground. The Tigers also forced two fumbles and intercepted four Eagle passes.

Tiger Defensive Coordinator Jay Hood said the defense played its best game of the season, but the weather did not hurt.

"We physically dominated them for 60 minutes," Hood said. "We didn't let them have any big plays. They are a run oriented team, but the weather took their running game away. We took the pass away from them and made them play our game."

On the other side of the ball, FHSU made up for a 4-25 passing game with 251 rushing yards on 86 carries. Tiger Head Coach Bob Cortese said his team's ability to adapt was a trait of a good team.

"We saw that we couldn't throw the ball, so we started pushing them around on the ground," Cortese said.

"The defense played the most solid game they have played all year. Senior defensive end Chad Ciriak had three or four big sacks. Anytime you can shut a good team out, it's a very good effort."

Hood said the key to containing the Eagles was slowing down senior tailback David M. Carney who was averaging 140.1 yards a game and had scored 18 touchdowns this season. The Tigers slowed M. Carney to a crawl, allowing him only seven yards on 12 carries.

The FHSU defense also limited a couple of Eagle opportunities set up by Tiger offensive mistakes. Late in the third quarter, CSC cornerback Todd Biggs blocked a John Ruder senior wingback punt and the Eagles recovered on the FHSU 14. After the Eagles were unable to move the ball on three downs, they set up for what looked to be a 55-yard field goal attempt. On the snap, freshman holder Cory Brooks took the ball and attempted a pass, but Ciriak buried him deep in the backfield and the Tigers took over the ball on downs.

Senior inside linebacker Dustin Bailey said while Ciriak and sophomore cornerback Brad Springston, who had two interceptions and a deflected pass, had exceptional games, the victory was the result of a total team effort.

"Even when they got the ball on the blocked punt and the fumble at our 15, we all had a feeling that they couldn't score on us," Bailey said. "When everyone plays as well as we did, it's hard to single out one player. Ciriak did steal that fumble recovery from me though. I had it, but he pulled it out of my arms."
