Seasons greetings.

Fort Hays State begins to get into the holiday spirit tonight with the annual Christmas Tree Lighting Ceremony sponsored by the Student Alumni Association. See page 3.

Students react to changes in 'independent' status

Rebecca Lofton
Staff writer

Just graduated out of high school and on the way to college. Teenagers full of dreams with one word ringing in their ears: independence.

For many the word "independent" poses a great burden.

College students across the United States between the ages of 18-24 must claim "independent" in order to obtain much needed fi-financial aid.

At Fort Hays State, approximately 225 students between the ages of 18-24 filed as independent for the 1992-1993 school year. Karl Metzger, director of financial assistance, said:

With this status, financial aid and, most notably, the Pell Grant, was available so students could pay for their college education.

This financial backing is now about to give way, according to the U.S. Department of Education's updated letter regarding the Federation's updated letter regarding the Federal Family Education Loan Program.

The letter states on July 23, 1992, President Bush signed the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 into law.

These amendments provide for numerous changes to the federal student financial aid program.

The most devastating change for students lies in the redefining of the "independent" status. These new guidelines will go into effect in the Fall of 1993.

Page 93 of the letter, headed Need Analysis section 34, requires a student of independent status to be at least 24-years old by Dec. 31 of the award year, an orphan or ward of the court, a veteran of the Armed Forces of the United States, a graduate or professional student, a married student, a student who has legal dependents other than a spouse or a student for whom a financial aid administrator determines and documents the student's independent status on the basis of unusual circumstances.

Metzger said, "I think major problems will arise from this legislation with students not being able to come back to school next year."

Metzger said, not only will those under 24 lose their grants, but those over 24 will receive reduced assistance by about $1000.

To counter these restrictions, all students will be eligible for a loan next year and an

Committee finds top three for Provost

Anne Zohner
Managing editor

Fort Hays State is one step closer to obtaining a provost.

According to Bill Watt, chairman of the provost search committee, President Edward Hammond has received the committee's final recommendations.

Hammond will take the recommendations into consideration as he looks to fill the position, which has been vacant since last summer when former Provost James Murphy left the position to return to teaching.

The committee, which began their search in June, presented Hammond with the following three primary candidates: Rodolfo Arevalo, associate vice president for academic affairs and dean of graduate studies and research at California State University, Stanislaus; Lawrence Gould, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, FHSU; and Robert Kriebel, vice president for academic affairs and professor of physics, Jacksonville State University.

The committee also offered two alternates to Hammond, Watt said.

Those two are Donald Green, dean of liberal arts, Chadron State College and Marvin Kaiser, associate dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Kansas State University.

After receiving the recommendation, Watt said Hammond plans to visit the campuses of the three primary candidates before making a decision.

Dr. Hammond plans to visit the campuses of the top three candidates and after that, he intends to bring all three of the candidates with their significant other to our campus," Watt said.

Although Watt said he was not sure when a final decision will be made, he said the position could be filled as early as Jan. 1.

The ad for the position states that the position is to begin as early as January 1, but I really couldn't say for sure when it will be filled."

Watt said the committee is content with the recommendations.

"We are absolutely pleased with our candidates," he said.

Department, students respond to peer's loss

Crystal Holdren

Most students just have to wait until the final of these last two weeks. Last night I had everything inside the house and also I imagine being homeless with no clothes, no books and still waiting for a final.

This is the problem. I'll be Ann Kitzke. Hays sophomore is looking for a place to live after her apartment at 344 E. 11th St. caught fire on the night of Nov. 30, last Monday.

According to the Hays Daily News, Ralph Burns, Hays fire department captain, said the fire started from faulty grounding of electrical equipment.

The fire started in the basement and spread to everything inside the house and also I imagine being homeless with no clothes, no books and still waiting for a final.

The art department heard of this disaster and the Creative Arts Society has set up a donation box in the art department. Patrick D.D. Rattl, an art major, said:

With it being Christmas, it's a nice way to show that we care," Kuchar said. The donation box, Kuchar said, will be there for one week.

She said these donations will be used to help Kitzke buy personal possessions, books and art supplies which were destroyed in the fire.

"I was really grateful to the art department. I didn't expect them to do something like this," Kitzke said.

She said the art department has been really willing to help her out with her classes.

Kitzke said she learned six important lessons from this which every renter should be aware of.

One is "every renter should make sure they get renter's insurance." The other item she pointed out was there is an ordinance in Hays that all landlords have to have fire extinguishers and smoke alarms in their property.

Electrical fire reported last night

Anne Zohner
Managing editor

Tonight the campus will begin to glow with the lights on the tree in front of Picken Hall.

Last night, however, a small fire illuminated the parking lot behind Malloy Hall.

At 9:23 p.m., the University Police responded to a 911 call which reported a fire.

With the assistance of the Hays City Fire Department and the Ellis County Rural Fire Company No. 5, the University Police were able to contain the blaze "momentarily," Sgt. Ed Howell said.

The cause of the fire was due to an "electrical wire in the boom crane," Howell said. The equipment belongs to Roof-techs, a roofing company which arrived today to begin roofing Malloy.

Charles Bush, Roof-techs employee, said they went through the wiring following the incident and said he does not expect any further problems.

The University Leader OPINIONS

Renters beware

This is the first year I have had to experience dealing with landlords, and let me tell you it has been quite a hassle.

I assumed as long as you paid rent on time and tried to keep the property the way it was when you moved in, landlords would do their jobs and if something needed to be fixed, they would get someone there to fix it.

Wrong.

For the last three months, my roommates and I have been having trouble with our heater, and our landlord is reluctant to do anything while our bill for electricity just keeps climbing and climbing.

I thought maybe the landlord we had was the only one like this, but after what Tally Ann Klitzke said about her landlord, (see story on page one) I think it is most landlords in Hays.

Landlords are just taking advantage of the students because they know the students have to have a place to live, so they do not put much effort into taking care of the apartments.

Renters should learn now to stand up for themselves and demand items they feel a necessity in their property or go buy it and send the landlord the bill to show them you mean business.

Make them realize, you will not be walked on and when you make a request you expect them to follow through.

New law merits opposition

Two weeks ago, I received a letter from the Fort Hays State Office of Financial Aid saying I had been re-defined for the 1993-94 school year.

I was notified I could no longer claim an independent status because I'm under 24-years-old, not married, and I'm not a ward of the state.

From the beginning of the 1993-94 school year and on, I will have to be considered dependent, no matter how much money I make and whether or not I pay for my schooling on my own.

This is not fair. The new law, which re-defined me, will probably also keep me from receiving financial aid because I will have to submit my parents' income and assets.

In the past, I have worked hard to earn over the $4,000 a year in order to be considered independent.

Scott Legleiter
Staff writer

Now, all of that hard work has amounted to nothing — wiped away with the reception of just one letter.

This, my fellow students, is discrimination at its finest.

Before this incident, I had never believed there was such a thing as age discrimination.

Now I do.

What disturbs me most is that in a time when people are trying to help rid the world of discrimination, lawmakers create more.

In my case, I vowed I would pay for my own college education with my earnings, scholarships and financial aid.

This new twist really does hamper the possibility of me accomplishing this.

The letter also seemed to have an underlying attitude from the Financial Aid office.

I felt it just said, "We didn't enact this law so don't blame us."

I guess my response to them is why was there no warning to us students who were facing the possibility of losing our independent status?

Maybe if we would have been warned, there could have been some kind of student protest which could have prohibited the passage of such a discriminatory law.

Maybe we could have voiced our opinions before we received their letters in the mail.

The good news is that it is not too late to still let our voice be heard.

Roger Barnhart, publicity manager for the Memorial Union Activities Board, has offered to organize a letter-writing campaign in which students can write important politicians to pass new legislation.

I urge all of us students who have been re-defined with no explanation to get in contact with Barnhart and express our freedom of speech.

If we stand back and do nothing, we are allowing our lawmakers to do whatever they want to us college students.

By organizing a formal protest of this new law, we can let them know that we are people too.

End of semester brings holidays, stress

It's here.

You know. It's that time of the semester when you suddenly wake up and realize, "Oh my God, are there really only two more weeks of class until finals?"

I always feel like Rip Van Winkle about this time of the year when I look at my calendar of assignments due and think I must have slept at least 20 years for all of this work to pile up.

I wake up, shake off the groggy state of consciousness of the semester and realize it is already December. It is high time for the end of the semester.

Finally, this is not a serious problem, but a pain-stricken realization of the cold hard fact that I have about 14 more days to do all of these assignments I have procrastinated throughout the semester.

It is unfortunate that this time of the semester brings classes and the end of the semester.

The stress of the semester is not just a problem for the student.

Anne Zahner
Managing Editor

not pass. Ouch.

What ever happened to the days in grade school when the end of the semester was what everyone lived for?

I remember making calendars in grade school to cross off each day that brought me closer and closer to Christmas break.

At the end of the countdown, I placed an immense tree, decorated with all sorts of colorful ornaments to serve as the announcement I had finally made it to the long-awaited break.

However, if I was to make a countdown calendar now, it would probably have a time bomb to represent that each day means one more tick off the clock until the ultimate deadline explodes.

It always seemed as though Christmas would never arrive when I was a child.

Now, it seems as though it gets here all too fast.

Instead of envisioning all of the presents I will open on Christmas Eve, I toss and turn as I ponder for an idea for that composition paper and wonder where I will find the time to complete my final project.

Yes, I could be glad to herald the arrival of the holiday season if the only thing I had to worry about was what I was going to buy for my family and friends this Christmas.

Of course, last semester, I said I would never put myself in this position again, but here I am again, right back in the pressure-cooker of stress.

So if you're feeling like you'll never survive this semester and get everything done in time, don't feel alone. 'Tis the season to be stressed.

Presentation offered

Dr. Richard Schellenberg of the Kelly Center and the psychology department will be offering a stress management presentation 7 to 8 p.m. Thursday in the Pioneer Lounge of the Memorial Union.

The presentation will focus on stress management strategies to help students cope with final exam week.

The Non-Traditional Student Organization is sponsoring the presentation, and all students are welcome to attend.

Students to enroll

An information and enrollment session for prospective students will be at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 8 in the Black and Gold Room of the Memorial Union.

Students considering college will be able to talk to advisers, enroll and even pay tuition during this session.

Free babysitting will be available.

Those unable to attend may call the Office of Student Affairs for information.

Volunteers needed

Volunteers are needed at 8 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 3 at Davis 154 to help complete 200 wooden trains for children who might not otherwise receive Christmas gifts.

Toys will be donated to Hays Jaycees by members of Epsilon Pi Tau, a professional fraternity at Fort Hays State.

Volunteers will do sanding, finishing and assembling of the trains. All volunteers will receive a prize.

Reception scheduled

An opening reception for Daniel Johnson, Victoria graduate student, will take place from 7 to 9 p.m. Monday, Dec. 7 at the Moss-Thorns Art Gallery.

This will be Johnson's graduate thesis exhibition.

K-SNEA to meet

Kansas Student National Education Association will meet at 6 p.m. tonight in Rarick 201.

Natalie Unruh, Tiger Tots director, will be the guest speaker.

Refreshments will be served.

Group to perform

Tiger By The Tale will perform at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 8 in Felten-Start Theatre.

Tiger By The Tale is a student theater group that presents current health issues to adults in a manner that promotes discussion.

Judges needed

The Western Classic Debate Tournament will take place Friday and Saturday at Fort Hays State.

Chris Crawford, associate professor of communication, is looking for persons interested in participating as judges.

Judges should plan to attend a training session from 7 to 8 p.m. Thursday in Malloy Hall. For more information, contact Crawford at 628-4284.

Clinic planned

The Student Health Center is sponsoring a breast and testicular self-examination clinic from 9 to 11 a.m. Tuesday, Dec. 8 in the main lobby of the Memorial Union.

A table with information about breast and testicular self-examinations will be set up, and a registered nurse will demonstrate how to conduct the exams on a model.

The Christmas season will get an official start at Fort Hays State tonight with the annual Christmas tree lighting ceremony.

President Edward Hammond will start the event at 6:30 p.m. by turning on the lights on the giant blue spruce in front of Picken Hall.

Everyone is invited to the ceremony, including students, faculty, staff and community members.

Santa Claus will be making an appearance at the event. Children can have their pictures taken with Santa for $1 each.

After the ceremony, free hot chocolate and cookies will be served in the Sunset Lounge of the Memorial Union. Vocal groups from FHSU and Hays High School will be performing Christmas songs.

"This is an opportunity for not just employees (of FHSU) but the community to kick off the Christmas season," University First Lady Vivian Hammond said.

"(It is) a way to wish people a merry Christmas."

The annual event is sponsored by the Student Alumni Association. The organization revived the forgotten tradition of the tree lighting ceremony in '86, according to a press release.

Lisa Karlin, assistant director of alumni, said the organization is a group of students interested in making others aware of the activities of the Alumni Association and helping the admissions office recruit new students.

Karlin said it is a tradition for the group to sponsor the event "to kick off the Christmas season."

It also helps to make people more aware of the Alumni Association, she said.

appeal is also presently being compiled, Metzger said.

But this is not enough for students who will be affected next year.

Patty Brand, Wakeeney freshman, said, "I'm here at school this year on a Pell Grant and that's what's gotten me through, so next year I may not be able to go to school."

Roger Barnhart, Phillipsburg junior, refuses to sit idle in hopes that something will work out.

Barnhart said, "The average Joe isn't going to be able to go to college anymore. People will have to drop-out or get married to achieve independence, and that isn't right. I know I won't be able to afford to go to college anymore."

Barnhart is planning to take action. Having received support from I.B. Dent, director of student services, he hopes to soon have the backing of many organizations across campus.

With the help of the various campus organizations, Barnhart will set up tables in West Hall, McMindes Hall and the Memorial Union to collect signatures for a petition opposing the now-approved legislation in the spring.

A letter will also be construed and sent to various political officials and President-elect Bill Clinton, Barnhart said.

A committee will be formed to make packages with copies of the letter opposing the new requirements and a petition to be sent to colleges across the United States in hopes of a country-wide effort, Barnhart said.

"I want to get everyone involved," Barnhart said.

Many students on campus have expressed concern over the matter.

Martin Kollman, Woodston freshman, said, "The changes are going to affect a lot of people. I have a feeling that a large percent of the school population will have to drop-out of college."

"We're caught between a rock and a hard place because the government assumes that all parents will help pay for their child's education, but with today's economy, that's not real feasible."

Chemistry students honored

Kelly Freeman
Staff writer

Like the song, "Two Outta Three Ain't Bad," for Fort Hays State, three out of eight is great.

This year the American Chemical Society recognized eight senior chemistry students throughout the state. On Nov. 18, three chemistry students from FHSU were recognized during the ACS's regular meeting in Wichita.

Frank Kohlisch, Craig Rumpel and Laura Tanner, all of Hays, were recognized and awarded by the ACS for their outstanding achievement in the chemistry field.

Larry Nicholson, department chair and professor of chemistry, said each year the ACS awards certificates and a year's ACS membership to senior chemistry students from the smaller universities throughout the state.

"The Wichita section of ACS doesn't include the bigger universities such as K-State, KU and Pittsburg, just the smaller ones," Nicholson said.

Nominations, which were due on Nov. 6, began within the departments at each school and then the ACS committee chose the winners.

Anthology needs submissions Creative calling

Tracy Whitlock
Copy editor

Looking for a creative outlet? If so, "Lines from the Middle of Nowhere" is looking for you.

"Lines from the Middle of Nowhere" is a literary anthology published yearly by the English department.

LouAnn Gottschalk, editor of the anthology, said she is looking for poetry, prose, essays and artwork for this year's edition.

The deadline for submission is not until March 15, but Gottschalk said the sooner the submissions are in, the better.

To submit a work, one needs to get an application for submission from Rank 370.

The works will be judged by anonymous review, meaning there will be no names on the works.

The pieces will be judged by an editorial board consisting of Jackie Votapka, Oberlin senior; Judy Anderson, Hays senior; Lisa Curry, Hays junior; Koteeswaran Lakshminarasimhan, Hays graduate student; Tate Kerst, Stafford senior and Karen Zimmer, Hays senior.

"It is a good varied group, not biased," Gottschalk said.

After all of the editorial board members have read all of the submissions, they will meet and make the final decisions.

The art editor for the anthology is Michele Degas. She will be judging the art submissions and choosing which ones will be in the anthology.

This is the fifth year for this particular anthology, although there have been others in the past, Kris Bair, co-sponsor for the anthology, said.

The purpose of the anthology is to "provide a forum for student work in both art and literature," Bair said.

"I think it is one way to provide students experience in publishing their work."

Last year's anthology was 48 pages. However, Gottschalk said they are not limited in pages and are hoping to grow this year.

Gottschalk said she is planning some changes in format this year. She hopes to increase the size of the pages themselves and possibly use some color.

There is no restriction on length of submissions, but Gottschalk said she does not "want a novel."

"I encourage everyone regardless of major to submit."

It is that time again. Time to start thinking about enrollment for next semester, among other things.

For students who have questions ranging from personal growth to campus resources to necessary classes to take, the Life Skills Center presents PLATO: Peers Lending Assistance To Others.

Eddie Tejeda, PLATO coordinator, said he noticed something missing from the network of services provided by the university.

"A peer group seems to be the missing link," he said, mentioning there are already services for academic advising, residence halls and student life, among others.

The students in PLATO have been trained in communication skills, decision-making, referral and available resources to help answer students' questions.

Tejeda said the 13 volunteers in PLATO have already contacted from 100 to 125 students, including freshmen and transfer students, since the group started in mid-semester.

To date, PLATO's main focus has been on mid-term grades and early registration.

However, Tejeda said PLATO is "planning on doing more outreach, especially in the residence halls."

"We hope that this...will encourage more of our new students to meet with their adviser and be better prepared," Tejeda said in a memo.

Teresa Strausz, Hays senior and student assistant for PLATO, said, "Right now we're trying to do promotion so people know we're there. We're calling students to let them know we're here."

"They can ask us stupid questions, and stuff we didn't have anybody to ask when I was a freshman," she said.

Volunteers put in one hour a week for PLATO, plus about 15 total training hours.

Strausz said PLATO is not available for counseling, only referral to help answer students' questions.

Anne & Andy's Reel Review

This week's feature: 'The Bodyguard' Rating: AAAA1/2 (a good flick)

In the 1991 summer smash "Robin Hood," Kevin Costner pledged his undying love to Maid Merrian by promising to give whatever it took, even his life, in order to save her.

Costner once again puts his life on the line for a beautiful woman in the newly-released "The Bodyguard."

Costner plays ex-Secret Service man Frank Farmer, who after years of working in the government has decided to take on personal cases for monetary reasons.

Farmer lands his newest assignment with Rachel Marron (Whitney Houston), a successful singer/actress whose manager has fired Frank out of fear following Rachel's reception of numerous psychotic death-threats.

Rachel is not fully aware of the danger she is in since her agents have hidden many of the threats in order to not "alarm her."

Thus, Rachel is extremely reluctant and uncooperative towards Frank and tends to disrupt the job he is trying to do.

However, as the threats become more and more real, Rachel finds herself running into the safety of Frank's arms and finds not only protection but also romance.

ANNE'S VIEW: Take an engrossing plot, add a couple of superstars and mix well. Toss in some romance, action and suspense in equal portions and what do you have? The recipe for a perfect flick.

Co-producer Costner was definitely following a successful method when he headed into cooking up his latest film.

"The Bodyguard" is not only a respectable addition to the line of films that Costner has previously done, but it is a tremendous beginning for Houston as she makes her first appearance on the big screen.

The chemistry presented on the screen by the two main roles is refreshing and gives the film an added romantic flair.

The scenes the two share alone bring the screen to life, and the emotion they evoke speaks of the quality and the power they possess in the entertainment world.

The one surprise I felt the film held was its ability to shake the predictability of the script. The plot possesses numerous twists and turns and explores many topics along the way.

Rachel is forced to address the fact that although she is famous, she is not safe. Her fear begins to consume her life and she must take a step back and decide just how important her life and well-being are.

Houston does a superb job and her musical talent adds to the overall effect and is able to complete the entertaining package you receive in the movie this holiday season.

This is a movie that I feel you will find entertaining in many different ways.

RATING: AAAA1/2 (A MUST-SEE)

ANDY'S VIEW: When Kevin Costner started planning for the filming of "The Bodyguard," he had to wait a year for Whitney Houston. It was well worth the wait.

Costner and Houston create great chemistry on screen and allow the audience to get involved with the development of their characters.

Houston's character is a spoiled rotten superstar who tries to keep a relaxed atmosphere around her, and in the process, creates a security risk.

Then comes our hero, Costner, who saves the day with his Secret Service expertise on protecting a person in the limelight. After all, he watched over Presidents Carter and Reagan, so surely he can handle a singer-turned-actress with a very weird public relations manager.

After convincing Marron to put her security in his hands, Farmer manages to get a hold of her heart too. Well, one thing leads to another, and Costner finds himself falling in love and his emotions get in the way of protecting his "client."

Sounds predictable, right?

Wrong.

The plot takes many twists and turns along the way to Marron's ultimate pleasure evening, the Oscars. This is Farmer's ultimate horror experience, protecting a superstar who is on stage in front of thousands of onlookers.

After some dramatic action and a romantic trouble, we find our characters come closer and closer to each other in the pursuit of keeping each other safe.

RATING: AAAA (WORTH THE TICKET PRICE)

"The Bodyguard" is rated R and is showing at the Fox Theatre, 1202 Main, along with "The Last of the Mohicans," rated R.

"Home Alone 2," rated PG, and "Bram Stoker's Dracula," rated R, are showing at the Mall Cinema, 2925 Vine.

Sports Briefs

Moeckel honored

Merlyn "Bud" Moeckel, assistant professor of health and human performance, received the Honor Award from the Kansas Association for Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Dance for 1992 at the KAHPERD convention in Hutchinson.

Recipients of the award must be members of KAHPERD for at least 10 years and demonstrate excellence in teaching and service in the profession.

Moeckel began his career at FHSU in 1970 as an instructor of health and human performance.

Pitt State advances

Pittsburg State University's football team advanced to the semi-finals of the NCAA Division II playoffs with a 38-37 overtime victory against North Dakota State.

PSU will play at Portland (Ore.) State Saturday for the right to play the winner of the Jacksonville (Ala.) State-New Haven (Conn.) game.

Ronald Moore (31 carries, 131 yards) scored a Division II record five touchdowns to lead the Gorillas. Moore is a finalist for the Harlon Hill Trophy.

Byrd undergoing tests

New York Jets defensive end Dennis Byrd was still undergoing tests following a collision with teammate Scott Mersereau Sunday.

The incident, which occurred in the second quarter of the Jets-Chiefs game, fractured one of Byrd's vertebrae causing partial paralysis.

As of last night doctors still were not sure if surgery would be required to repair the damage.

The Chiefs won the game 23-7.

49ers gain berth

The San Francisco 49ers became the first National Football League team to clinch a playoff berth Sunday as the team beat Philadelphia 20-14 Sunday.

Forty-niners wide receiver Jerry Rice tied former Seattle wide receiver Steve Largent by catching his 100th career touchdown reception.

Rice tied the record in his 120th NFL game. It took Largent 200 games to accomplish the feat.

Results from the rest of Sunday's games:

Charger 27, Raiders 3;
Browns 27, Bears 14;
Steelers 21, Bengals 9;
Packers 19, Buccaneers 14;
Colts 16, Bills 13;
Vikings 31, Rams 17;
Saints 24, Dolphins 13;
Redskins 41, Cardinals 3;
Falcons 34, Patriots 0

Arkansas hires Ford

The University of Arkansas hired former Clemson University coach Danny Ford to take over its football program.

Ford coached Clemson to a national championship in 1981. During his tenure he compiled a record of 96-29-4.

UT names new coach

As expected, the University of Tennessee named offensive coordinator Phillip Fulmer as Johnny Majors' successor as the head coach of the Volunteer football team.

Fulmer had a 3-0 record earlier this season when he substituted as head coach while Majors recovered from a heart attack.

Cagers lose pair at Metro State tourney

Christian Wallingford
Staff writer

While the Fort Hays State student body was digging itself out of the first blizzard of the winter, the Tiger men's basketball team was digging itself out of a dismal performance in the Metropolitan State Tournament in Denver.

After winning two of their first three games, the Tigers lost back-to-back contests against National Association of Inter-collegiate Athletics foes Baker University and Christ College-Irvine.

The Tigers started the season with a 102-48 blowout of Colorado Colorado Springs and a 77-96 loss to Cameron University.

"I can't explain the Cameron game," Head Coach Gary Garner said. "I guess we got over confident when we opened up with the blowout and our heads got to damn big."

The Tigers opened last week with the return of senior forward Bryant Basemore and a subsequent 69-66 victory over Tabor College.

Basemore led the Tigers in rebounding and scoring with 18 and 10 respectively. Tabor committed 28 turnovers and managed only 30 rebounds against a rejuvenated Tiger team.

The Tigers carried the momentum into the Metro Tourney and battled the Wildcats to a 78-78 tie on a Cedric Drewes three pointer with 1:46 on the clock.

Basemore put the Tigers on the board in the with a rim-shaking dunk 26 into the overtime. Nine FHSU fouls and 15 subsequent Baker free throws sealed the 96-90 defeat.

"Fouling is another huge weakness we have," Garner said. "The first thing I want to teach these kids is aggressiveness. Until we get aggressive, we will be out of position and we will foul a lot, and we won't win very many ball games."

Garner said the loss to Baker exemplified the problems the Tigers have faced throughout the young season.

"We were very inconsistent," Garner said. "We do well for short periods, but we are unable to sustain that level of intensity. If we are going to win games, we have to sustain for 40 minutes."

"There is no doubt in my mind that we will be a better team than our performance in the Colorado," Garner said. "It will be a different story when Baker comes to play us at our gym."

The consolation game was not any better for the Tigers as the CC-I Eagles jumped out to a 41-36 half time lead and went on to an 83-71 victory. Basemore again took the scoring and rebounding honors with 15 and 8.

"Playing for third place is like kissing your sister," Garner said. "For Irvine it was a big game. They were playing Fort Hays State. For us, the fact that we weren't playing for the championship game was a let down. I don't want to take anything away from them because they played a great game, but I don't think the results would be the same under different circumstances."

Junior forward Ralford Rainey said while the season has started slow, the team is progressing every day.

Fort Hays State women split two games at Washburn University

Shannon Slaton
Staff writer

After taking a 34-71 beating Friday evening to the Washburn University Lady Blues, the Fort Hays State Lady Tigers bounced back with an 80-69 victory against Northwest Missouri State Saturday night in Topeka at the Lee Arena.

The Lady Tigers returned home this weekend from the Washburn University Classic, having gone 1-1 giving the team a 2-2 record overall.

"We have played four competitive NCAA Division II games, with all four teams being in the Mid American Athletic Association," Head Coach John Klein said.

Klein said both losses went to top teams, with Washburn winning the conference last year.

"It's early in the year. We are fortunate to have two big wins so far," Klein said.

"We were beaten badly, but we came out with a really good win."

The Lady Tigers kept their composure after the loss, holding on to team unity and their positive attitudes, Klein said.

"If you were to come into the locker room after both games, and see the girls, you would not notice much difference," Klein said.

"The team was very composed after the loss and the win."

The Lady Tigers did a complete turnaround in the second game of the weekend, which put a smile on Klein's face.

"At this point in time, I am proud of the way the girls are performing," Klein said.

After playing only 20 minutes in Saturday's game, and fouling out with

"It's early in the year. We are fortunate to have two big wins so far," only four minutes left, senior forward Deanne Thiemert was high scorer, leading the team with 15 points with a 1-for-10 performance from the field.

Thiemert also led the team in rebounds, bringing down 11.

Senior guard Petrice Faulkner and sophomore forward Amy Scoby both dropped in 14 points, while senior center Carol Coykendall contributed 11 points, eight rebounds, two assists, three blocked shots and a steal.

Scoby's first 12 points helped build the lead for FHSU in the first half of the game, along with her five assists.

Sophomore forward Tiffany Bunell and freshman guard Angela Binacame off the bench and added nine and eight points respectively.

Sophomore forward Kris Osthoff gave five points while sophomore center Kristin Harms added four points to the score.

"We need to improve on executing offensively and defensively while building on our number of wins," Klein said.

With five games left before Christmas break, Coach Klein hopes to win all of them, ending 1992 with a 7-2 record.

The Lady Tigers will host Tabor College in a make-up game at 6 p.m., Thursday at Gross Memorial Coliseum.

The Lady Tigers will play host again to Friends University beginning at 8 p.m. after the wrestling matches are over on Saturday.

"The next two games will not be on the same caliber as the last couple of games," Klein said.

Klein said the girls should be respectful and play to the best of their ability.

"Both teams are excited to play Fort Hays State at Hays," Klein said.

"They will give us an all out effort, and if we don't return that effort, then they will beat us," he said.

Coach Klein said he is proud to be working with such an intelligent group of coachable girls who listen.

"Our team is made up of some classy young ladies, who are tough, play hard and will get the job done," Klein said.

"We started off with a tough schedule, but we should be able to win the next five games," Klein said.

Fort Hays State's Kris Osthoff (No. 35) puts up a shot against Emporia State players during the Country Kitchen Classic on the afternoon of Friday, Nov. 20, as Karla House (No. 32) looks on. Osthoff was the high scorer of the game for the Lady Tigers scoring 18 points. The Lady Tigers won the contest with a 74-64 score.

The Fort Hays State wrestling squad traveled to the University of Nebraska-Omaha Open Nov. 21.

Freshman heavyweight Shad Jacobs was the only tiger grappler to place in the tournament.

All of Jacobs' wins came by fall, and he finished the tournament with a 3-1 record.

Thus far, 118-pound freshman Wade Burdard leads the team with a 7-4 record.

The next action for the team will be Saturday at the FHSU Open in Gross Memorial Coliseum.
