Graduation change approved

Melissa Chaffin
Senior copy editor

Graduation is the day we all look forward to, although some are closer to it than others.

President Edward Hammond approved one of the Faculty Senate's recommendations for changes in the graduation ceremony for this year.

The changes will move the ceremony to Saturday morning, and although a time has not been established, the ceremony will be planned so it will last no longer than 90 minutes and be over by noon, Richard Hughen, Faculty Senate president, said.

The changes for the graduation ceremony were made for several reasons.

One of the reasons is for convenience.

"In the past, the ceremony for all graduates was on Friday evening," Hughen said. "It got late and students and their families got impatient."

He said with the ceremony being moved to Saturday morning, families will have more time to travel to attend graduation.

Another factor involved in the change was the hot weather which occurs in May.

"It gets so hot in May in the evening so that's why we decided to move (the ceremony) to the morning," Hughen said.

Hughen said recent ceremonies of past years have been chaotic and led to the discussion of changes.

"It was just chaos, and many students were upset," he said. "We had to make some changes to improve that."

Andy Addis, student body president, said the student body is, for the most part, in support of the changes.

Addis said after the Faculty Senate made suggestions to the Student Government Association for changes, senators spent a month meeting with constituents to come up with ideas representing what the students want.

Addis said, "For the most part, the students agree with everything (that is being changed)."

"It's really not a tradition to hold graduation on Saturday," Addis said. "The reason we suggested the changes is because we heard students wanted a change...to make it a more memorable experience."

Addis said the Student Senate had an additional reason for approving of the changes.

"The potential for having it (the graduation ceremony) outside would grow if it was in the morning."

Another recommendation the Faculty Senate made to Hammond was to have a separate ceremony for master's candidates on Friday evening.

Hughen said, "It's quite ceremonial and you don't want to rush it too much. This would make it easier."

He said there was an overwhelming majority in favor of the changes in the Faculty Senate.

And although Hammond has not yet approved this second recommendation, Hughen said, "he did not seem opposed to it."

This year's ceremony will be Saturday, May 15 in Gross Memorial Coliseum.

STOP started

Tracy Whifflock
Features editor

Student Teams Offering Protection, the new on-campus escort service, opened for business Monday night.

STOP is open from 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. seven days a week. The phone number is 628-KARE.

Anyone needing an escort from any on-campus location or any of the fraternity or sorority houses can call the number and an escort will be sent as soon as possible.

People can also call and make an appointment in advance by calling during open hours or by leaving a message at the number above.

The escorts are all volunteers. The only paid positions are the student escort coordinators who are Chad Fuller, Wellington freshman; Rodney Spangler, Topeka junior, and Carey Brouillette, Goodland freshman.

The main jobs of the coordinators are to take requests for escorts and relay the calls to the escorts on duty.

Fuller said at this time there are about 20 volunteers, five of which are female. The escorts are sent out in pairs, which they try to make male-female "to make them (the escorts) more comfortable."

Fuller said they are looking for more volunteers. "We'll take all we can get."

Interested people should either go to the Residential Life office or the front desks of one of the residence halls and pick up an application.

Although all of the current volunteers are from the residence halls, fraternity and sorority members are encouraged to apply.

"We wish we could get a (Greek) representative, so we could get them to use it (the service)," Fuller said.

There is an interview process which includes a background check with the police to make sure the applicant has no criminal record.

Volunteers work two shifts from 7 to 10 p.m. and 10 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Fuller said right now most of the escorts are working only one shift per week. "No more than two which makes it really nice."

The escorts are not paid for their services but they do get free pizza every other Sunday night, Fuller said.

The phone is set up at McMinder Hall, but escorts do not have to wait there during their shifts. They can stay in their rooms or at a friend's as long as they are near a phone and the coordinator on duty has the number, Fuller said.

The escorts have certain rules to follow. "We are real particular about the rules," Fuller said.

There is no physical contact and personal conversation should be kept to a minimum. "Nothing personal is allowed; this is not a dating service," Fuller said. "We are strictly here to increase safety."

For liability reasons, the escorts must always walk. There can be no use of bicycles, automobiles, etc.

All of the people escorted must also sign a paper saying that they were safely escorted. A complaint form is available if there is any kind of problem.

Tammy Glidden, Topeka junior, used the escort service Monday night and said she felt a lot more secure than walking alone.

"The escorts are nice people and I felt really comfortable," she said.

Fuller said he thinks there is a big need on campus for the escort service but people have not really started utilizing it.

"What bothers me is that I have heard rumors that people are embarrassed to use it (the service). We really want to get people to start using it."

Six recommendations made at Regents meeting

Kelly Freeman
Copy editor

Fort Hays State made six recommendations to the Kansas Board of Regents during their monthly meeting in Topeka on Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 20 and 21.

According to a press release, the recommendations were made following a survey conducted by FHSU.

In keeping with its mission to serve the educational needs of western Kansas, FHSU initiated a preliminary assessment of the impact of the closing of St. Mary of the Plains

College of Dodge City, June 30, '92.

President Edward Hammond said James Petree, dean of continuing education at FHSU, and several faculty members in cooperation with The Docking Institute, conducted an informal survey of educational interest.

Hammond met with community college presidents and Chamber of Commerce representatives from Garden City, Liberal and Dodge City to discuss and work on the survey.

Three options were offered as a response to the need for higher education.

Hammond said those options included expansion of FHSU's off-campus programs, establishing another regional campus (an addition to FHSU) or a creation of a regents' center like the one in Kansas City.

"The regents' center in Kansas City allows a number of regents universities to teach courses there," Hammond said.

In the meantime, the regents directed a systematic survey of the education interests of the citizens of four of the larger communities in southwest Kansas.

According to a press release, Dodge City, Garden City, Liberal and Great Bend contain about 43 percent of the population of the southwest quadrant of the state and, therefore, needed to be assessed to find the amount and areas of interest in upper-division and graduate courses.

The survey, conducted by mail and telephone interviews, showed approximately 1,000 individuals desire to take upper-division and/or graduate courses.

The subjects of greatest interest for upper-division and graduate classes were elementary education, accounting, computer science, business administration and counseling (education).

Based on the survey findings, the following recommendations were presented to the regents by Hammond last week.

A regents' center is not recommended due to the cost and lack of need.

"The community colleges meet the needs so far. If there were twice as many people wanting upper division or graduate courses, then it would be

Light shed

SGA discusses security

Anne Zohner
SGA reporter

Fort Hays State Chief of Police Sid Carlile shed some light upon the "dark" subject of campus security at last night's Student Government Association meeting.

According to Carlile, there is the possibility of some headway being made in the area of lighting in the near future.

"As of July 1, we will be getting a considerable amount of dollars allocated for lighting," he said.

Carlile said he appreciated the efforts of SGA.

Due to the support of SGA, we are moving toward making some changes," he said.

One of the areas to be lit is the area between Dicken and Rarick Halls.

"That area will be improved 100 percent," he said.

Even though Carlile was able to give some positive feedback in the area of lighting, the outlook for an other security-related issue was not so bright, due to funding

"Money is the answer to everything, especially when it comes to the implementation of a 24-hour campus switchboard."

Carlile said he feels the switchboard would benefit the students the most of any improvement in campus safety.

This new system would replace the current one, which is only available until 4:30 p.m. on weekdays and non-existent during the weekends.

When the current system is not available, students' calls to the campus police are transferred to the Hays Police Department and a campus officer is then dispatched.

The Hays Police receive approximately 200 calls each month when the campus line is closed," he said.

Although the need exists, Carlile said the improved system will not happen overnight. "Carlile himself has been working on the project for two years."

"I took the proposal of a campus switchboard to the administration to

Gay rights are wrong

For over 200 years, the United States Armed Forces have fought to protect the liberties and freedoms we, as Americans, have come to take for granted.

From George Washington to George Patton to Norman Schwarzkopf, the military has been led by brave men determined to do whatever is necessary to preserve democracy as we know it.

The reason those men have been able to lead so well and their troops have been so successful is a sense of respect for those in charge and esprit de corps throughout the military.

That respect and esprit de corps is now being challenged and indeed threatened by those people who support the right of homosexuals to serve in the armed forces.

Those supporters of homosexual rights hold that by not allowing gays and lesbians to openly serve in the military, their rights are being infringed upon. On one hand, I would tend to agree.

It would certainly seem homosexuals would be able to accomplish individual tasks as well as their heterosexual counterparts. The problem is, there are very few things in the military done on an individual basis. That is where the overwhelming problem lies.

In the military, it is absolutely essential for soldiers to respect and trust their superiors and peers. Without that trust and respect, military units are unable to function to their utmost capabilities.

Unfortunately, in our society, a majority of the population holds disrespect and a sense of distrust for homosexuals. This is perhaps no fault of the homosexuals, but it exists nonetheless.

Esprit de corps is perhaps the second most important aspect of a successful military. It is a sense of pride in a unit and trust in the person standing or fighting beside you. Without it, a unit is dysfunctional.

Another unfortunate product of our society is a distrust in those things we do not see as morally correct. While we do not have the right to decide morality, the distrust still exists.

If a soldier does not feel confident in the ability or courage of the soldier beside him or leading him, or feels uncomfortable around an individual, the unit's integrity and morale is jeopardized.

While homosexuals may not be directly at fault for the views of society towards them, the fact that these insurmountable barriers exist, overwhelmingly preclude any infringement on the rights of the homosexual minority. We, as Americans, have the right to be protected by the most capable and effective military possible.

This is a textbook example of the rights of the many outweighing the rights of the few.

Some questions deserve a second look

As we go through life, we gain a vast amount of knowledge.

With each new tidbit of information we collect, we seem to ask twice as many questions (perhaps to expand our knowledge). If we take a step back and look at it all, it seems more and more that we live in a backwards world.

We like to think of everything as being somewhat logical or at least sensible. At times, we even question this to an extent.

True, we do live in a complex and confusing world. Take a few cases, for example.

We all know education is very important in getting ahead in life. We want to better our chances of getting good jobs and being financially secure. So here we are paying quite a bit of money for our college education.

The backward side of it is some of us (myself included) ask the question, "Do we really need to go to class and have roll call?"

That's like asking whether a team really needs to show up if they are favored to win a game by a landslide

Khahn Nguyen
Staff writer

(ask Kansas University for this answer).

Another irony is we are paying an enormous amount of money for our education in order to be financially secure in the future. Oook. I have to admit the idea of going into debt as a route to financial security is quite a different concept.

Sticking with the university level, let's look at Student Government Association. SGA has been working hard all year to get things done before their administration comes to a close.

A few things caught several students by surprise. We all know SGA works for the students and gets a considerable amount of its power from the student body. They are forever asking for input from all students so they can work on issues we feel are important. Yet, where was all of the needed input?

Speaking of government, let's move up to a slightly larger scale.

America has elected a new president to bring needed change and renewal. We are hoping President Bill Clinton can follow through on his campaign promises. He is now in the position to change or improve the policies of previous administrations.

One of the main focuses of his campaign was cutting the national debt in half. Many Americans asked how he was going to do this. I don't think this was the appropriate question.

Do we expect him to do it single-handedly? How does paying more money to the government and cutting funds in important policies help the situation? Is it reasonably possible to accomplish this task? Are we willing to make the sacrifices needed to accomplish it? Think about it.

Let's move up to the universal level. Millions of dollars are spent on our space programs. We have learned valuable facts from these programs.

Take the Apollo 11 mission, for example. America landed three men on the moon making tremendous breakthroughs in space technology and studies. We learned a great amount from this mission alone. Well, where has it gotten us?

Yes, the results of that mission have had a rippling effect on many fields of study. We do understand more about our universe, but everyone still asks, "If we can put a man on the moon, how come we can't...?"

I guess it's obvious that learning is an ongoing process. Education is of the utmost importance. Although we do seem to live in a mysterious world with many questions left to be answered, we are understanding more about our universe. As Neil Armstrong put it, "That's one small step for man; one giant leap for mankind."

Of course, no one ever asked in which direction.

I would also like to thank all of the Cody boys from the Rodeo team, who pitched in to help me through these difficult times. I don't know how I would have overcome this crisis without your help. Again, a special thank you for the kindness you have extended to me.

Editor's note: Student Government President Andy Addis will write a bi-monthly column for the Leader dealing with issues and problems concerning SGA, the student body and Fort Hays State as a whole.

Somewhere on the Fort Hays State campus is a student with an idea that could save the student population lots of time, money and effort.

There is also a group on campus with the answer to a number of the problems the administration has been dealing with year after year. Unfortunately, we don't know who or where they are.

Though there are plenty of resources to effectively tackle the issues pertaining to our school and Board of Regents system, nearly all students believe what they can do or have to say will not amount to anything.

At a university from a northern state, the student senate debated whether or not it was fair to have a three-day weekend. The reason if you always get a Monday or Friday off, how is that fair to the students and instructors of Tuesday and Thursday classes?

After discussing, voting and

The President's Column

SGA president

lobbying, the student senate convinced the administration all three day weekends should be extended to four. That is the power of the students.

At FHSU, there is no difference. There is an active administration, willing to hear and respond to the students, but to react they have to hear.

There are a number of avenues for a student to travel when trying to get his/her voice heard, but a few methods are simply better than others. Two of the most easily accessible means are the Student Government Association and the Associated Students of Kansas.

Both institutions have their own office on the second floor of the Memorial Union, and both encourage student visits. But, even more important is an event taking place this February.

ASK Awareness Week, an annual event for student promoting student activism, will be Feb. 1-5. Four years ago, it was a mock '60s rally, last year it was public information dissemination. But this year, it's the students' year.

The theme "More Bang for Your Buck-A-S-K." Nate Halverson, ASK Director for FHSU, and an entourage of apprentices, have been planning for weeks different ways to present the issues to students and draw student comment.

The week is concluded with a trip to Topeka, as students from across the entire regents system will gather to lobby for issues of higher education.

FHSU will take about 15 students to participate. Those students, though, will be on a point-less venture unless the students of FHSU respond to their call next week.

There will be announcements, information tables, events and programs, and the responsibility is yours. To effectively communicate your ideas to your representatives in Topeka, you need not save your lunch money, gas up the Ford and head east.

Just keep your eyes open for opportunities during ASK Week, and let your voice be heard.

Issues currently on the agenda are the Board of Regents budget, campus safety, educational equity, community service, voter registration, Washburn's entrance into the regents system, tuition and financing of higher education and a number of other issues.

The rest of the agenda must be set by the students of FHSU and the entire regents system. Reading this article should be the motivation, attending an ASK Awareness event is the response.

Get more bang for your buck. Use ASK next week, and they will spend the rest of the year working for you.

feasible," Hammond said.

FHSU should continue its expanded off-campus center format.

"We offer many courses now; we're just going to add more degrees and more classes and expand series of degrees," Hammond said.

FHSU off-campus offerings should be offered through a variety of methods such as: commuting faculty to sites, maintaining faculty in the four communities, interactive video, broadcast television, Western Instructional Network, Kansas Telenet system, video taped classes and audio tapes.

Legislative approved funding levels designed to compensate for the closing of St. Mary's should be adjusted to reflect actual fall '92 and spring '93 enrollments.

Higher education geographic service area restrictions should be replaced by a model of competition.

"This would be so other universities could service Fort Hays State's counties in southwest Kansas too," Hammond said. "Then the student could decide which (university) is better suited for them."

All parties with a stake in the higher educational needs of southwest Kansas should continue to monitor changing higher educational needs.

The recommendations were all endorsed with the exception of the removal of geographic service areas.

"I believe in a competitive free environment, however, the regents felt it may be duplicative and wasteful," Hammond said.

"We at Fort Hays State University want to maintain our excellent relationships with and service for the people of southwest Kansas," Hammond said.

"We want to provide the best possible educational services that we can as we face the ever-changing challenges of tomorrow."

years ago," he said. "I figured it would cost almost $40,000 to implement."

"There is just no funding right now," he said. "When the time is right, we will need student government support."

Some senators stated they felt the administration needs to make the issue a definite priority and make funding possible now instead of later.

"The administration needs to make (campus security) a priority even though our crime figures are not high," Katie Thompson, senator, said.

Student Body President Andy Addis also stressed the issue's importance.

"It is obvious that the money is out there," he said. "We are building a multi-million dollar science building and all we need is $40,000."

The need for campus safety improvements will not diminish, he said. "I don't believe we as students can wait on an issue such as this. We need to implement what we can now."

BACCHUS attends conference

The National Collegiate Conference on Life Skills, held Jan. 24-26 in Kansas City, was attended by BACCHUS.

At the conference, Boost Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students gained knowledge of health and drug awareness, which is an invaluable asset in today's world, Jim Nugent, coordinator of Drug Alcohol Wellness Network, said.

The three-day event consisted of seminars conducted over various topics. Topics discussed included tobacco, alcohol and rape prevention.

A round table discussion on peer group theater was also presented by Nugent.

The seminars showed the students "how to identify problems and learn ways to go about handling them," Abraham Garcia, Houston senior, said.

"The highlight of the weekend was performances by four theatrical groups," Garcia said.

The four groups presented valuable information in a skit format. The presentations covered a wide range of topics all extremely valuable to college students.

Tiger by the Tale, Fort Hays State's theatrical group performed its hour-long production with an additional 30-minute discussion period.

"More colleges are developing peer theater as a means to discuss topics that are often hard to discuss," Nugent said.

"The evaluations on the weekend looked extremely impressive," Nugent said.

Health clubs on the rise More students working out

Stephanie Baccus
Staff writer

Athletes do it to improve their game. Some freshmen do it to avoid gaining weight. Some people do it for a living.

Working out has become a major industry in America, and it is a trend seen even in low-density population areas like western Kansas.

Jill Leiker, co-owner of the Downtown Athletic Club, 806 Main St., said the rise in the number and popularity of health clubs in the '80s was due to a trend that now is a way of life.

"I don't think it's as much of a fad as it is a fact that it's a healthy lifestyle to get into," she said.

Darren Junk, Osborne senior, works out often at the club. As an athlete, he said he has noticed an increase in the number of students working out.

"The popularity's really grown," he said. "I'd say as much as 30 percent of the students (from FHSU) work out."

Rick Sturdy, owner of Sturdy Bodies, 112 W. 11th St., said he has about 240 members in his club. Of those, he said 50 to 60 percent are college students.

Leiker said, "The rise in the number of members is in the deconditioned market and the fifty years old and over age group; people who want to get and stay healthy and to live longer."

The deconditioned market includes those people who have never worked out on a serious level before.

Leiker said she thought students work out "not only to look good and feel good, but also as a great stress reliever."

"One of the things the students look forward to is the relief time," she said.

Going to the club is also a social activity, Leiker said.

"This gives them an opportunity to come down with some buddies that maybe they don't see all day long because they're always coming and going between classes."

"I know some people who come in to watch their soaps while they ride the stationary cycles," Leiker said.

The hard part, Leiker said, is keeping up with the new lifestyle.

"It's easy for the first three or four months because you're excited about it, and your friends help you along, but then it gets harder to keep it up," she said.

Students can take classes at FHSU, work out at one of the two health clubs or use the free weight facilities in the residence halls and Cunningham Hall.

New group to focus on dealing with opposite sex

Tracy Whitlock
Features editor

One of the hardest parts of college life has nothing to do with school at all. Relationships with the opposite sex are very important but can be very stressful.

The Kelly Center is starting a relationship counseling group at the end of February to help deal with these problems.

The group will be led by Deb Martin, Hays graduate student, and Robert Glenn, Hays graduate student.

The group is not only for people who are experiencing problems in their current relationships. It is also for people who are dealing with past relationships or even those who are not currently in a relationship but would like to learn more about dealing with the opposite sex.

Glenn said it is for anyone from people who have had a hard time with the dating process to people having problems in their marriage.

It is for people who "don't want to make the same mistakes again," Martin said.

"It's a support system," Glenn said. "(It helps to know) other people have the same problems. You're not excluded."

All people interested in the group have to go through an interview to make sure the group is right for them. Anyone interested should call the Kelly Center at 628-4401.

"It is an open group format," Glenn said. "The subjects are really up to the group."

Martin said besides discussion, the group will also participate in some activities such as role-playing and keeping a journal.

Some of the topics Martin said they plan to cover are how to communicate better, how to fight fair and just overall how to better understand the opposite sex.

The group is a "good education process about how the opposite sex thinks and acts," Glenn said.

Martin said she thinks many college students have to deal with relationship problems. These problems can cause stress in the person's life and keep them from doing well at school.

Last semester was the first relationship counseling group. Martin, who was a group leader last semester, said she thought it was very successful.

"The evaluations were very positive and (the group) became really good friends." She said part of the group may continue to be members this semester.

Glenn said if there is enough interest this semester, next semester they might have two groups.

The group is free to all Fort Hays State students, faculty and staff members and their spouses. Community members are also welcome but will be charged a $35 fee.

Lady Tigers win 89-39

FHSU moves to 3-0 in RMAC, captures 10th overall victory

Christian D Orr
Sports Editor

For the second straight game, the Fort Hays State Lady Tiger basketball team has blown out their opponents. This time the victim was Western State College, and the margin was 50 as they beat the Mountaineers 89-39.

The Lady Tigers have won their last two games by a margin of 86 points by beating WSC by 50 last night and the Colorado School of Mines by 36 points Monday night.

The win is the Tigers' third in a row starting with their win last Saturday night, which Head Coach John Klein attributes to the team's confidence level.

"Ever since our win over Chadron, we've been playing with a lot more confidence," Klein said. "We've taken care of business in these last two home games against teams that we thought we could handle."

The Lady Tigers jumped on the Mountaineers early as they started the game with a 17-4 run to claim a 13-point lead.

WSC cut the lead back to 10 points midway through the half at 31-21, but the Lady Tigers scored 20 of the last 26 first half points to claim a 51-27 lead going into the lockerroom at intermission.

Despite FHSU's offensive outburst of 51 points, which is the most points scored by the Lady Tigers in one half this year, it was their defense that led the way by causing 23 turnovers by the Lady Mountaineers and stealing the ball away from WSC 16 times.

Head Coach John Klein attributes the wide margin of victories in the last couple games to his team's defense.

"Defense triggered everything for us tonight. At half time the other team had 23 turnovers and we had 16 steals. Those types of statistics are a lot of offensive opportunities. That's 39 extra chances to score," Klein said.

"We pride ourselves on defense, that is the bread and butter of everything we do. If there is one thing that we tell everybody on our team, it is that under no circumstances do we ever want any type of defensive let up."

"We're real happy with our defensive effort. We're not surprised because we work hard on defense, that's the primary focus of our team."

As good as the Lady Tigers' defense was in the first half, they bettered their performance in the second half.

The FHSU defense held the Lady Mountaineers to just 12 second half points, causing WSC to turn the ball over another 15 times and stealing the ball another eight times. They also held the Lady Mountaineers to just 18.2 percent from the field in the second half.

Offensively, the Lady Tigers started the second half much like the first as they began the half with a 23-6 run covering the first 15:54 of the second half.

The scoring outburst put the game away for the Lady Tigers as their lead grew to 41 points at 74-33.

The Lady Tigers finished the game by scoring the last 15 of 21 points to claim the victory by a 50-point margin.

FHSU was led in scoring by Carol Coykendall, who finished with 13 points, and had four other Lady Tigers finish in double figures in scoring. Other Lady Tigers in double figure scoring were Tiffany Bunnell with 10 points, Kristin Harms with 10 points, Karla House with 10 points and Angela Bina with 11 points.

Klein said he is happy with the way his team has come out and performed game in and game out.

"I'm real proud of the effort that our team gives game in and game out," Klein said. "Even during the games that we have lost, the effort has always been there. These kids play real hard and now not only are they playing hard, but they are playing better. I'm just real proud of them and they are a lot of fun to work with."

The win for the Lady Tigers moved their record to 10-6 for the season and keeps them undefeated and in first place in the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference.

The Lady Tigers will next take their 3-0 RMAC record into battle with them tomorrow night when they take on the Mavericks of Mesa State, who boast an undefeated RMAC record, as well, at 2-0. Mesa State is 8-8 overall.

Klein said it will take a tremendous effort if the team wants to beat the Mavericks tomorrow night.

"We have to start thinking about Mesa now, they're a real good team," Klein said. "We're going to have our heads together on Saturday, and it's going to take a tremendous effort to beat Mesa because they're good."

Talley denies fight charges

Buffalo Bills starting line-backer has denied charges he got into a fight outside of a Los Angeles bar with a bodyguard of basketball star Earvin "Magic" Johnson.

Allegedly, the two got into a shoving match late Sunday night and Talley came out of the scuffle with a bloody lip and a black eye, but showed no signs of being in a fight during a news conference yesterday.

During an interview with Johnson, he said there would be nothing left of Talley if he had been punched by his bodyguard.

Talley claimed during yesterday's news conference at the Super Bowl breakfast for the press there were no altercations.

Daly returns to PGA tour

Long ball hitting John Daly has returned to the Professional Golfers Association tour less than one month after entering himself into a drug and alcohol rehabilitation center.

Daly is currently competing in the Phoenix Open which is his first tournament since coming out of the rehabilitation center.

Daly is currently three strokes out of the lead in the tournament after one round of competition. Daly stands at two strokes below par. Five golfers are in the lead with first round scores of five below par.

Courier makes finals

American Jim Courier has made it back to the finals of the Australian Open.

Courier made it into the championship match by beating Michael Stich 7-6 (7-4) 6-4 6-2 in the semi-finals. Courier has yet to drop a set enroute to the finals.

Courier awaits the winner of the Stefan Edberg/Pete Sampras semi-final. At press-time Edberg was tied with Sampras at 1-1 in the third set after winning the first two sets 7-6 (7-4) 6-3.

Edberg and Sampras are tied 3-3 in their six career matches. Edberg has already won the Australian Open twice in his career.

Hancock out for one week

The Kansas Jayhawks will be without their star, junior forward Darin Hancock, for one week due to a detached retina.

Hancock underwent laser surgery yesterday to repair the retina in his left eye and will undergo similar surgery today to repair his right eye.

Hancock, who suffered the injury last week during the game against the Colorado Buffaloes, had complained about headaches and blurred vision prior to seeing the team physician.

The Jayhawks are supposed to play one of their tougher Big Eight contests tomorrow when they take on the Missouri Tigers.

Tigers drop first RMAC contest

WIN. That is what the Fort Hays State men's basketball squad needed to do last evening in order to take the lead in the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference when they played host to Western State College of Colorado. Close - but no cigar. FHSU lost to WSC 69-71 in what Head Coach Gary Garner called the Tigers' best game of the season. "We played as well as we could play. We played a very good game and they played a very good game. You know the ball bounces a little wrong sometimes and we could just as easily have won as we did lose. I am just really proud of our guys tonight," Garner said.

According to Garner, the difference in the game may have been the free throws, but he makes no excuses saying he believed the Tigers had the opportunity to win it all.

"I imagine the difference was probably at the free throw line. I don't doubt that at all, but we had the chance to win it all the way right down to the end."

The Tigers' loss dropped their record to 2-1 in the conference, but it in no way knocks them out of the running, Garner said.

"Yes, we still have a chance to win the conference. We just need to pick up from here. I know our confidence level may have dropped a little but I'm sure after a loss like that," Garner said.

The Tigers had a balanced attack as they had five players score in double figures led by senior forward Cedric Drewes with 15. Followed by Chad Creamer and Darrell Hudson with 13, Allen Creaft with 12 and Radford Rainey with 10.

Garner was impressed with the play of his squad, especially that of Rainey and Creamer.

"Radford-Rainey really came out and played well for us and hustled on the boards. Creamer just handled the ball great for us tonight. It was just a total team effort. Out there, I really feel like we just became a team," Garner said.

According to Creamer, it was the little things that made the biggest difference in the Tigers losing effort to the Mountaineers from Western State.

"We felt we could play them tough because we were both undefeated in the conference. We just have to go play Saturday and get Mesa State if we want to stay in the running," Creamer said.

Rose should be let back into baseball

It has been roughly two and a half years since A. Bartlett Giamatti gave Pete Rose a lifetime suspension from the game of baseball.

I believe it is time Rose is allowed back into the game to which he has given so much.

Rose was kicked out of baseball for, as I'm sure you all know, betting on the sport of baseball and allegedly betting on the Cincinnati Reds when he managed them.

Granted what Rose was doing was wrong, but it has also been over two years since he has repaid his debt and the game of baseball time in a federal prison. Rose has given so much to the game of baseball, it is time to give him a little back to him, namely forgiveness.

Rose has stated he will be asking the commission, which is currently governing the game of baseball while they are without a commissioner, to readmit him into the game.

He gave so much as a player and a coach, imagine the many things he could do to bring back the game of baseball, which many of us have grown to love.

With the owners battling with the players union on whether or not they will even let the players into training camp because of the rising cost of the players salary, I think it is time baseball gets out of the business and get the sport back to a game.

There are signs, in my eyes, this may be coming true. First of all, as the season closed last year, there was talk the Baltimore Orioles would be losing their franchise player in Cal Ripken because of money.

But, to the disbelief and enjoyment of many baseball fans, Ripken opted to go with his heart and not his pocketbook (not that he needed to pad his pocketbook in the first place) and stayed with the Orioles. Yes, at that point the game started coming back to baseball.

Then the same scenario started to look like it was going to happen in Minnesota where the Twins looked to be losing their key player in Kirby Puckett. But like Ripken, Puckett decided to stay with the team that made him who he is today.

And then there was the case of George Brett. Brett, as you all know plays for the Kansas City Royals, and in most people's opinion is past his prime as a ball player. But, Brett has given his life to the game, and he should be able to go out on his terms.

Brett completed his run for 3,000 hits last season, and at the end of the season, Royals owner Ewing Kaufman asked Brett to retire. WRONG! Brett has brought many fans to Royals Stadium, and as long as he wears a Royals uniform, he will continue to do so.

Brett, Ripken, Puckett and Rose are baseball. They have given to baseball, and baseball owes them in my opinion.

Rose displayed a type of baseball that has not been seen since the days of Ty Cobb and will probably not be seen again. He deserves to be in the Hall of Fame, he deserves to be allowed inside a baseball stadium, and he should be allowed to take part in the game of baseball in whatever way he sees fit.

Grapplers look for duel win, take on Western State today

Christian D Orr
Sports editor

The Fort Hays State Tiger wrestling squad will take on the Mountaineers from Western State College today in Gunnison, Colo., in search of their first duel victory.

The Tigers will also compete in a tournament on Saturday when they compete in the Borah Invitational.

The Tigers are coming off a third place finish last weekend in the Simpson Invitational in Indianola, Iowa, where they had eight wrestlers finish in the top six of their respective weight categories.

The Tigers finished with a total of 100.5 points in the tournament, which was just 18.25 points behind the tournament host, Simpson College of Iowa, which won the tournament with a team score of 119.25.

Northeast Missouri claimed the second place trophy in the tournament by compiling 116.0 team points, while Cornell College and Missouri Valley took third and fourth with 88.0 and 77.0 points respectively.

FHSU was led in the tournament by Ben Loggains who went 4-0 in the tournament to improve his overall record to 17-5 and give him a first place finish in the 134-pound weight division.

The Tigers' All-American, Joe Dreher, returned to the line-up for only his second outing of the year due to recurring knee problems and captured a second place finish in the 158-pound category, improving his record to 4-1 on the year.

Jeff Chamblin also captured a second place finish for the Tigers. Chamblin took home a second place medal in the 177-pound category to improve his season mark to 15-11.

In the 118-pound category, the Tigers brought home a third place finish as Jamie Cochran went 5-1 in the tournament to improve his overall record to 10-6.

David Schneider, wrestling in the 190-pound weight division, and Shad Jacobs, wrestling in the 275-pound weight division, both claimed fourth place medals, aiding the Tiger finish.

Schneider improved his overall mark to 10-10, while Jacobs climbed to 14-13 on the year.

Don Reidinger claimed a fifth place medal in the 150-pound weight division to move his record to 13-7 on the year, while Clint Newell moved his record to 4-8 on the year with a sixth place finish.

FHSU will take a combined 104-83 record with them into competition this weekend when they take on the Mountaineers Friday afternoon and Saturday when they compete in the Borah Invitational.

The Tigers will take to the mat today in Gunnison, Colo., at 4 p.m. and then return to the mat tomorrow to compete in the Borah Invitational.

Tiger track squad to compete in Nebraska-Kearney Invite

Christian D Orr
Sports editor

The Tiger track squad will return to action again tomorrow when they compete in the Nebraska-Kearney Invitational in Kearney, Neb.

The Tigers are coming off a performance in the Wendy's Alex Francis Invitational at Gross Memorial Coliseum, which brought them 12 individual championships and saw the emergence of Tonya Jopp.

Jopp claimed three individual titles, was a member of a championship relay squad and earned the praise of Head Coach Jim Krob.

"The meet Saturday, I thought, went really well. Without a doubt Tonya Jopp had a great meet, along with Diann Schwarzkopf and Krista Adams," Krob said. "Overall, I was pretty pleased with our team's overall performance."

Jopp claimed titles in the long jump, the 300-yard run, the 60-yard dash and was a member of the 4 x 400 relay. Jopp's performance in the meet earned her outstanding female athlete.

Adams claimed victories in both the two-mile and one-mile runs, while Schwarzkopf was a member of two championship relay squads. She was a member of the 4 x 440 relay team with Jopp and also a member of 4 x 880 relay.

Other Lady Tigers that claimed championships included Jennifer Nowak in the 60-yard hurdles, Kelli Schultz in the high jump, Jennifer Phelan in the triple jump, Colleen Billinger in the 440-yard run and Lisa Fenton in the 176-yard hurdles. Other members of the winning relay teams were Summer Vann, Nicole Cordill and Marcie Ost in the 4 x 880 relay, and in the 4 x 440 relay along with Jopp and Schwarzkopf, was Vann and Fenton.

Along with the nine championships, the Lady Tigers also had 13 other competitors finish in the top five of each event.

The men's squad had 26 competitors finish in the top five of each event and had two relay teams finish in the top five.

Taking top honors for the Tigers were Matt Bond, Chad Hammerschmidt and Slade Girk.

Bond captured the championship medal in the shot put with a throw 50'5", Hammerschmidt won top honors in the 35-pound weight throw with a toss of 51' 5 1/4" and Girk placed first in the pole vault competition with a vault of 14'6".

Krob said he will be taking a different attitude into the Nebraska-Kearney Invitational this weekend due to the size of the meet.

"It's not going to be a big meet, so we're just going down there with the idea that we will get some people in some different events," Krob said. "We want to put people in different spots and get some people into better condition."

The field events are scheduled to get underway at 11 a.m. tomorrow, while the running events are scheduled with a starting time of 12:30 p.m.

Travis Morisse/University Leader
