BACCHUS bashes BACCHUS puts on Baseball bash at Larks Park for second year

Rebecca Lofton
Staff writer

The organization Boosting Alcohol Consciousness Concerning the Health of University Students sponsored a "Baseball Bash," held yesterday at Larks Park at 5 p.m. in conjunction with the double-header baseball game.

As Fort Hays State took on the University of Nebraska at Kearney, there were other activities going on at the park.

BACCHUS sponsored the game for a second year and were pleased with its success.

Jim Nugent, coordinator of the drug and alcohol wellness network, said, "I thought it was very successful. I don't think it will be the last time we do it."

The organization distributed free hot dogs and squeeze bottles to all who showed up to the game clad in any apparel or carrying any apparatus with the BACCHUS logo printed on it.

"Some were very creative in making something that referred to BACCHUS, while others wore the true BACCHUS shirts. It was all fine," Nugent said.

Along with the food, BACCHUS had various activities set up. There was a baseball throw for $.50 where the participants could have their speed clocked by radar.

Dave Crotchett of the highway patrol was on hand to assist with the radar.

Nugent found the game most popular with the baseball players and the little kids.

Highway patrolman Mark Deterding also brought in a Camaro just as an added extra.

"The kids like that kind of thing. It was just something flashy for the kids to look over," Nugent said.

There was also a car donated by Hays Auto Parts, North Highway 183. For $.50, one could take a swing and "bash in the car," Nugent said.

Nugent said the activities "didn't raise a lot of money. We had wanted more participation. But that's the way it goes."

BACCHUS had chosen activities relevant to the sporting event.

"We felt it would be a stress reliever, to bash in a car. It was a way for students to relieve tensions with the end of the year coming up, in a healthy way," Nugent said.

Nugent said there was a good turnout in part due to it being fraternity/sorority week.

"It was good for us and good for them. They (the fraternities and sororities) were keyed up and I really go (at the baseball bash). We really appreciated that," Nugent said.

Aimee McKee, Goodland junior said, "There were a lot of people there. The game was pretty exciting. I went with the volleyball team and we sat together. It was fun."

The baseball bash was successful both years, Nugent said. It was so successful, Nugent received calls from the University of Arizona, the University of Maine and the University of New York, New Paltz, regarding specifics.

FHSU won both baseball games, 13-10 and 10-5.

HALO to sponsor HOT meeting

Kelly Freeman
Copy editor

Hispanic American Leadership Organization (HALO) will sponsor a council meeting for Hispanics of Today (HOT) Friday, April 30, and Saturday, May 1, in the Memorial Union.

Registration will begin Friday evening and a welcome by Provost Rodolfo Arevalo will follow.

Eddie Tejeda, coordinator of student services and HALO sponsor, said HALO, which started at Fort Hays State in '92, is an organization specifically designed to support Hispanics on campus to continue their education and simply to succeed.

"It is also here to support Hispanics because there isn't a Hispanic community off campus and also it helps to expose the community to the Hispanic culture," Tejeda said.

HALO is hosting the HOT council for the first time after just starting this chapter last spring. Tejeda said HOT is an umbrella organization for HALO.

Tejeda said the purpose of HALO hosting the meeting is to develop leaders from other communities in a collaborative effort to address concerns of Hispanic students in higher education.

"The meeting will allow local chapters to get together to discuss concerns about the future of HALO. Also, to be informed, share ideas and to develop a working agenda for now and for the future of HALO in Kansas," Tejeda said.

Tejeda also said the meeting will further define and develop the actual role of officers and leaders within HALO and HOT.

The agenda for the council meeting includes two presentations and a performance by Tiger by the Tale, an FHSU drama group.

Art Hoernicke, professor of special education, will present the topic, "Issues in Culturation" and Tejeda will speak about "Leadership Roles."

"This meeting is really beneficial because it will look at the roles that individual chapters play as local and statewide organizations," Tejeda said.

There is a $10 registration fee. For more information, call 628-5667.

Hammond pleased with NCATE results

Stephanie Baccus
Staff writer

"I'm extremely pleased to tell you that after a lengthy and thorough review by NCATE...our university meets all 18 basic and advanced standards set forth by that organization," President Edward Hammond announced Wednesday.

The National College Accreditation of Teacher Education, the only authorized accrediting body for schools recognized by the U.S. Dept. of Education, did not accredit FHSU in April of '92.

However, after changing its accrediting standards, NCATE sent another team back last fall to re-evaluate FHSU's teacher education program.

This time, FHSU was awarded accreditation, and will not be up for accreditation again until '97, the normal five-year span.

"Additional good news was also received from the Kansas State Board of Education, which has fully approved all 46 of our teacher education programs," Hammond said.

"Seldom does a university meet all of the state board standards and NCATE standards we did. I know of no other teacher education program in the state of Kansas that has received a more positive review from NCATE than we did."

"These two reports reaffirm the quality of our university's faculty and our college of education and their commitment to excellence in preparation of graduates to go forth and teach in our schools," he said.

Mary Hoy delivered comments from the NCATE report, listing many of the positive aspects NCATE recognized.

"One of the strengths that was listed was the Empowered Educator Model, which was developed to represent the College of Education's knowledge base," Hoy said.

The EEM is a model the College of Education bases programs and classes on.

Hoy said, "Fort Hays' program in teacher education is somewhat unique to teacher education programs in this country."

Secondary teachers major in the areas of their content, which is an unusual trait of FHSU's College of Education, and is recognized nationwide as "a real strength" of FHSU's educator program, Hoy said.

"The fact that the faculty unit truly operates as a cooperative unit, with much shared responsibilities, was also recognized by NCATE," she said.

Hoy also listed other highlights of the NCATE report.

Hammond said, "Fort Hays State has been accredited since 1954... when NCATE was founded."

Approximately 20 people attended the press conference. Provost Rodolfo Arevalo was with Hammond.

"The University asked for NCATE accreditation so that we can make sure that we are producing the kind of teacher education professionals that we've been proud of in the past and can continue to be proud of in the future," Hammond said.

SGA discusses $1.50 increase

Squire R. Boone
Staff writer

Monitoring the application of the proposed $1.50 tuition increase that is to benefit the athletic department was the prominent issue at last night's Student Government Association meeting.

Andy Addis, SGA president, said he has met a couple of times with President Edward Hammond on the issue.

"Since the student body has already voted resoundingly not to have a tuition increase, President Hammond suggested the idea of amending the by-laws to provide for a committee to monitor the appropriation of the money," Addis said.

The committee would have the final say concerning how the monies will be allocated among the various athletic groups.

Three viable options came out of that meeting and were put up for SGA's consideration by Addis, asking for senator input: a joint committee of students, faculty and administration; a pre-existing SGA committee; or SGA in committee as a whole.

Addis said a combination of two of the above groups would be the most effective.

"A committee of students, faculty and administration to make recommendations with final approval by SGA in committee as a whole would best serve the university," Addis said. "That would assure that most interests are being served."

The committee would also help SGA become more than simply an

Blade runners

Christie Villarreal, Hays junior, Misty Callahan, Wichita freshman, Jova Buser, Jewell freshman, rollerblade across campus Wednesday afternoon.

Opportunity to help

When I first came to school the excitement was not about all the new friends I would meet, but rather about finally being on my own.

Although I anxiously waited for this day, some students did not. Leaving home was a serious step in life.

This summer I have been given the opportunity to be a student counselor and help the incoming freshmen enroll for their classes next fall.

This day is not just to enroll, but it is also detrimental to the freshman and to what path they will follow in their years ahead.

Many students who attend Fort Hays State take different paths, some do nothing but go to class, some just go to class and their job, but others get involved with the various activities and benefit from their endeavors.

If an advised student of mine joins an organization because I provided an advantage and that student benefits from it, then as an adviser I will feel I have done my job satisfactorily.

Some students just need to hear past experiences, and this is where the student adviser helps.

This program of hiring students instead of faculty to help these students feel more comfortable was brilliance on someone's part.

Masses of people control education

Editor's note: This is the second reason why learning does not occur in today's classroom. The first reason was given in the April 20 issue of the University Leader.

The implosion of the meaning is the second reason.

This idea is heuristically bound up with the first series of points I made about consumerist education; but it also goes beyond that specific framework to the "social" as a whole.

Not so long ago, it was necessary for Americans to produce durable goods; today it is necessary to produce consumers.

Something that is far more expensive to turn out than material products.

(Witness the cost of one minute of advertising during the Super Bowl, approximately $750 thousand.)

So today, as a result of the intense demand for information in the form of advertising, news, education and computers, data is produced everywhere in apparently illimitable quantities.

(This is what people mean when they speak of the information explosion, although they often confuse the means and ends of this phenomenon.)

Information is not produced because knowledgeable scientists are making new discoveries daily; but instead because of the extremity of the demand for the product.

Guest Column

Paul Basinski
Assistant professor of political science

Hence, it is the very surfeit of information, the explosive and perpetual torrent of news and ideas that has resulted in the implosion of meaning (learning) in the masses.

The masses today absorb all messages but no longer refract any meaning back. This is their peculiar revenge on the political and their profound disconnection from it.

It is also why I choose, following Baudrillard, to use the somewhat antiquated and amorphous term masses.

Because, "they do not radiate; on the contrary they absorb all radiation from the outlying constellations of state, history, culture, meaning" into the mass.

A suggestive way to conceptualize this phenomenon is by comparing the masses to a black hole.

The endless stream of communication, the dense and perpetual flood from the telecommunications medium, has met its match.

Whether in the classrooms at Fort Hays State, or in the mind-numbing hours spent in holy communion with the television, "the mass is dumb like beasts, and it's implosive, that it seems to emanate from the center of the earth, as if muffled, buried, by miles of solid rock."

Admittedly, this silence from the masses in the midst of this perpetual stream of communication, is positively chilling.

"Despite having been surveyed to death (and the constant solicitation, the information, to which it is submitted is equivalent to experimental torture on laboratory animals), the masses say neither whether it prefers revolution or repression."

The idea of polling the masses to find out the destiny of our nation, or political future, is risible.

Not only because of the profound self-cancelling impact through the overwhelming quantity of polling that goes on.

Doesn't polling produce the result which leads to the suspicion that there is nothing there to "prove" after all, except the ability to "generate" more data in the form of public opinion?

Think of the implosion of meaning in these terms. With the seemingly infinite quantities of information produced daily, and whipped up for consumption, there is no longer any real sorting out process, epistemologically, that goes on.

In the face of 20 minutes of world news that juxtaposes images of dog food commercials with the devastation in Bosnia, or equates the sale of laxatives with images of gun-crazed fundamentalist cults, what response other than silence can there be to this?

This is deeper than information overload, we are talking here about the disappearance of meaning and the flight of reason.

That is, we are characterizing a silence that overthrows the political and the social both, a silence of the lambs that shouts: we do not want meaning!

Meaning is precisely what we will not tolerate!

The fascination of the people today has no dependence on meaning (the message), but only with the medium itself.

The people want spectacle, "fascination is their law, and their specific violence, a massive violence denying communication by meaning in favor of" spectacle.

Cable is 20th century bread and circuses.

To conclude: the masses want education, but only in the form of a commodity. And meaning? Hardly!

The hoi polloi prefer "American Gladiators." As I said, this is their specific revenge on the political, on teachers, on truth itself.

In this particular sense, the masses are completely in control of this democracy and of their destiny.

Letters to the editor

More organization could be beneficial

Dear editor,

Even though I am not a student on campus this semester, I have been a member of the Non-Traditional Student Organization in the past.

My wife is currently a member of NTSO. I guess my biggest problem with NTSO is that they do things only half way or just never finish what they start.

As I am sure you know, the Special Olympics were held in Hays.

NTSO said they sponsored a team, but as usual they only wanted to do things halfway.

When you sponsor a team, there are certain responsibilities that need to be met. These were badly neglected. There was never any NTSO officers around that I saw while I was there.

Two members from NTSO went to the dance, but not one of the officers showed up.

This needs to change if an organization wants to sponsor a team. They need to do it right and not halfway.

If the non-traditional students do not like the way the organization is being ran, they need to take an active part in their organization.

If the students do not want to do this, then Student Affairs should kick NTSO off campus.

Home economics teaches 'life skills'

Dear editor,

Teaching "Life Skills" is the business of home economics.

Historically, home economics education has responded with technical and human skills needed during the agricultural and industrial eras.

In our current era of high technology and rapid change, the information and skills that home economics has to offer are more important than ever.

Strategies for addressing critical issues facing families in our society such as lifestyle choices which promote mental and physical wellness, avoiding teen and/or too soon pregnancy, managing stress, effectively balancing work and family responsibilities, parenting effectively, resource management and consumer concerns are essential components of a home economics program.

This knowledge is more important for today's society than ever before as evidenced by the problems in our country.

Home economics is the only educational program I can think of which addresses the total concept of family life.

Because of the complexity of living in a changing society and the challenge of coping with the resulting problems, individuals and families urgently need the skills and knowledge required to be responsible individuals and family members and productive workers.

Quality family life enriches the social and economic well-being of our society.

I was raised in a small southwest Kansas town and graduated from Fort Hays State.

The quality of the education I received was excellent. Had it not been for the small campus environment, I probably would not have attended college at all.

Western Kansas and our youth need the home economics program at FHSU.

I would encourage you to speak to those who hold your future in their hands to continue the program at FHSU.

Mortar Board inducts members

Tracy Whitlock
Features editor

Last Sunday in the Memorial Union, 28 new members were inducted into Mortar Board, a senior honor society.

Michael Rettig, assistant professor of special education and senior sponsor of Mortar Board, said the organization is a scholarship and service group.

"(Joining Mortar Board) is a chance to do something good for the community and the university."

Rettig said the induction was an academic type ceremony. The new members wore robes and last year's officers all took part in the ceremony. The ceremony was conducted by Brice Feldt, Hoxie senior and last year's president.

Mortar Board members were chosen by blind review. Earlier this semester members sent out letters to prospective seniors with good grades and who are involved in activities, Rettig said.

The names were removed from the returned applications and the members then voted.

Rettig said about 80 applications were received and from these the 28 new members were chosen.

Mortar Board has a spirit of camaraderie, Rettig said. It is usually a diverse group with people from various majors which offers a chance for members to get to know people they would not ordinarily meet.

The group participates in various service activities. Last year's members collected food for hurricane victims and participated in the Adopt-a-Mile program.

"All of the members have good grades and are involved in activities on and off campus," Rettig said. "They stand above their peers."

Genealogical workshop to help trace roots

Melissa Chaffin
Senior copy editor

"Climbing Your Family Tree Can Be Fun."

This is a genealogical workshop presented by The Everton Publishers, Inc., which is being sponsored by the Fort Hays Kansas Genealogical Society.

Mary Lattin is the yearly program chairman of the genealogical society and she is coordinating the seminar.

Lattin said "Genealogy is the study of your family line from yourself back as far as you can take it. Not only by dates and places, but you also try to tie your family in with history which makes it more interesting."

To aid in people's efforts to trace their genealogy, the Evertons will present their workshop "Climbing Your Family Tree Can Be Fun."

"It's to bring a well-known speaker to Hays to help people with specialized material research," Lattin said.

The workshop will be Saturday, May 1, 1993, in the Hays Public Library, 1200 Main St. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. and the seminar begins at 9 a.m.

The registration fee for the workshop is $30 which will include a noon lunch and a year's subscription to "The Genealogical Helper."

"The Genealogical Helper" is a magazine published by the Evertons.

The pre-registration deadline is Sunday. She said she hopes to have 40 to 50 people attend the workshop.

Lattin said as the Evertons travel around the country presenting workshops, more people add information to a computer program called a "Roots Cellar" for people in other places to take.

"As they go from workshop to workshop, more people put information into 'Roots Cellar'," Lattin said.

Topics of the seminar include: Beyond Vital Records, which will be the standard birth, marriage and death records are not available; Finding Your Female Ancestors; Southern U.S. Research, which will be an overview of the types of records available for the family historian searching for his or her roots in the southern United States; and Immigration, Emigration and Naturalization Sources.

There will be opportunities for question and answer sessions after each session. Lattin said at this time people can ask more "personal" questions.

The Fort Hays Genealogical Society keeps all their material in Forsyth Library at Fort Hays State.

Lattin said, "We do have our library holdings in Forsyth Library. To check out material of ours, you must be a member, but you can look through them anytime."

She said there are other genealogical books available in the Hays Public Library, but the society's material is only available at Forsyth.

For more information about the workshop or other projects of the Fort Hays Kansas Genealogical Society, contact Mary Lattin at 625-5851.

Anne & Andy's Reel Review

This week's video: 'Consenting Adults' Rating: AAAA (a good rental)

Editor's note: Anne and Andy decided to take a break from the box office for one issue in order to give you a review of one of the latest releases on video.

If you have enjoyed viewing the recent flick "Indecent Proposal," (starring Demi Moore, Woody Harrelson and Robert Redford) which focuses on a man buying someone else's wife for one night for the price of $1 million, we have just the video for you.

"Consenting Adults" was released last fall and has just recently hit the racks at your local video store.

The film stars Kevin Kline as a man who falls in love with his new neighbor's (Corbin Bernsen) wife. Surprisingly, Bernsen has no problem with Kline's obsession because Bernsen himself has fallen for Kline's wife (Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio). Interesting, huh?

Bernsen, a "live on the edge" type of guy, decides the two should take advantage of their same-boat situation by secretly sneaking into each other's bedrooms for one night. Bernsen claims their wives would never know and it would be a way to get over their obsessions without upsetting their spouses.

Although this may seem like the perfect situation to some, it does not exactly work out the way these two "consenting adults" planned. In fact, things really get fouled up.

The next morning, after spending the evening with his neighbor Bernsen's wife, Kline awakes to find that she is dead and he is wanted for her murder.

Once behind bars, Kline finds that his new "friend" and neighbor Bernsen had other motives than just a night of pleasure behind his perfect plan.

Unable to convince his lawyer he's innocent,

Kline sets out to clear his name and finds out his neighbor is not exactly what he appeared to be.

ANNE'S VIEW:

This film seems quite simple in the beginning. A neighbor moves in, the couples begin to spend time together and an average run-of-the-mill relationship occurs ... not.

That is probably the one reason I enjoyed this film so much. Everything is NOT what it would appear to be and nothing as it would seem.

There are more twists and turns in this plot than on a roller coaster, and it keeps you guessing right up to the end.

We see some interesting and strong performances from Kline and Mastrantonio, and Bernsen makes an impressive show on the big screen.

This film is a good follow-up to the recent film "Indecent Proposal." If you thought that that was a bad idea ... you ain't seen nothin' yet.

RATING: AAAA

ANDY'S VIEW: The story in this week's selected video gives new meaning to the phrase, "welcome to the neighborhood."

Imagine your meeting your new neighbors, creating the typical suburban neighborhood friendship full of weekend trips and backyard barbecues, and then one morning your new neighbor suggests you and he play a game of "I'll let you sleep with my wife if I can have yours."

The story starts out kind of slow, but after the fateful romp in the hay, the characters start to develop and we see what happens between lovers the morning after.

After seeing Kline's character go from successful husband and father to a fugitive criminal you can ask yourself, "Was the night of passion worth the consequences of being accused of a murder?"

If you want to see a movie which will tempt your set of values and can't afford the admission price to see "Indecent Proposal," check this one out at your local video store.

Spring brings weddings

Tracy Whitlock
Features editor

The flowers are blooming and the birds are chirping. Spring has sprung and love is in the air. And with love, comes weddings.

Joann Berens, owner of A Bride's World, 2520 Vine St., said this is the busiest time of the year for her store.

"Students are getting out of school; they're graduating and ready to get married," Berens said. She said while June is a popular month for weddings, May seems to be the busiest.

The trend in wedding colors this year is dark. "We're seeing some black and white," Berens said. She said amethyst is also popular.

Ruth Miller, owner of Bridal Studio of Hays, 119 E. 11th St., also said dark colors are in this year. "Emerald green is a popular color."

She said some people do not think of black as a "wedding color." However, Miller said black is very fashionable these days and is being used in everything, including weddings.

Pastels are showing up in a few weddings this year but not many.

Berens said brocade-type fabrics are the trend in bridesmaid dresses "all across the country." She said it is hard to order shoes in this material because of the widespread popularity.

Miller said the average age of the brides she sees in her store seems to be increasing. "We are moving to the more mature bride."

"While there will always be the 18-year-old brides, girls (today) are more career-minded. They want to get settled in their way of life before they get married."

She said a lot of the brides she sees are either graduates or in their last year of school.

Miller said she has seen a lot of changes in the bridal dresses themselves also.

"I have been in the business for 11 years. We have gone from domestic fabrics to imports with heavy beading."

She said last summer with the high temperatures there was a lot of interest in dresses with shorter sleeves.

While most people opt for the traditional white dress, some girls prefer ivory because "the color looks better on them," Miller said.

"We see very little of the pink (bridal gowns)."

In choosing a wedding site, churches are the most popular in this area. Berens said she does know of a few outdoor weddings taking place, but the weather is always a risk with those. "Especially in Kansas," she said.

Both women said one should usually plan at least six months in advance for a wedding. "It takes about three months for the gown to come in and another month for the fitting," Berens said.

Miller said she knows of people who plan one to two years ahead for their wedding. However, she warns against planning too early. "Changes can happen."

Berens said she has owned her store for seven years and she really enjoys it. "It's fun to work with the girls. This is the happiest time of their lives."

Rodeo activities Three vie for title of queen

Kelly Freeman
Copy editor

It's that time of year again, time for the 28th annual Fort Hays State Rodeo and the '93 Rodeo Queen competition and coronation.

Activities for the rodeo queen contestants will begin Thursday morning, and the actual rodeo will start Friday evening at 7:30 at the Doug Philip Arena, Golf Course Road.

The crowning of the queen will be during the Saturday evening action at the arena.

This year's queen competition deadline was April 17 which found three girls between the ages of 18 and 24 vying for the '93 title.

Contestants are: Dena Lamb, Lewis freshman, Wendie Bowie, Jetmore freshman and Melanie Wendling, Zurich sophomore. All three are Rodeo Club members.

The competition consists of a radio interview, as well as an interview by a three-member panel, personality evaluation, a three to five minute speech on any aspect of rodeo, modeling of contemporary western attire and horsemanship.

Reigning rodeo queen, Tally Ann Klitzke, Quinter sophomore, said she competed against two others last year and she was very proud to win.

"I really worked hard with my horse and my speech last year so it was really exciting to be the winner," Klitzke said.

Klitzke said probably the most difficult parts are to give the speech and complete the horsemanship exercise.

"The speech is a large part of the competition. You can't be too nervous and you have to know how to smile and act. This is a preview for the judges as to what you are really like," Klitzke said.

"In the horsemanship competition, the girls really should smile and look good and be able to control their horse. Basically, the judges want to know if the girls know what they're doing," Klitzke said.

The queen's duties include promoting FHSU, the rodeo team and club by speaking at various engagements, traveling with the team and occasionally modeling or riding in parades.

"It's really important to promote the university and the team. Mostly to get people to come here to school and to see the team participate," Klitzke said.

Klitzke said speaking for clubs and at the grade schools helped to get her out into the public and to simply become a better speaker.

"The speaking was very good for me and I got out in the public. It also helped to let people know what rodeoing is all about and it got people to come," Klitzke said.

Klitzke said one of the advantages for the next rodeo queen will be that she has the option to go to a Miss Rodeo Kansas contest in the future.

"I have the choice of competing too, but I just haven't decided yet," Klitzke said.

Each rodeo queen is sponsored by individuals or businesses in the community and surrounding area. The retiring queen is responsible for obtaining the sponsors which will supply the reigning queen with outfits for modeling and speaking engagements and also provide the queen with other supplies.

"I was able to round up seven sponsors for the '93 queen, which is quite a few compared to other queens only having three or four. It's really important to have quality sponsors to support you throughout the year," Klitzke said.

Overall, Klitzke said she enjoyed her reign as queen and was proud to sponsor the university and the rodeo club and team, she just wished she could have done more.

"It has really been a good experience and I have thoroughly enjoyed it, the club and members have done a lot for me, I just wish I could have done more for them."

Klitzke wishes much luck to the contestants during the competition.

Art exhibition opens tonight at Stone Gallery

Rebecca Lofton
Staff writer

John Lenz, Kirwin senior, will present his bachelor of fine arts exhibition at the Stone Gallery, 107-1/2 W. Sixth St., from 7 to 9 tonight.

The exhibition is part of Lenz's graduation requirement, but he said he is excited about it for other reasons.

"I think it's a good experience to know how to coordinate a show," Lenz said.

The exhibition will be arranged upstairs in the main gallery. After the opening reception, the show is scheduled to remain in the gallery during regular business hours through May 8.

The showing is part of the first gallery walk of the year. Each year, it is a tradition to have two gallery walks. The first is in the spring and the second is in the fall.

The spring gallery walk is in conjunction with Hays Days which will also be underway this weekend.

Five to seven galleries throughout Hays participate in the gallery walk. Lenz was adamant in scheduling with the Stone Gallery.

He called Pete Felton, owner of Stone Gallery, and reserved the studio last August in anticipation of the spring gallery walk. Lenz said.

"The Stone Gallery is the end of the line on the gallery walk. I think it's kind of the focus of the gallery walk," Lenz said.

Lenz will be showing 15 pieces. Four pieces will be assemblages (structures composed of found and created objects). One installation, a structure set up in the gallery which cannot be moved around and is meant to appear to be part of the gallery environment, will be shown and 10 bronzes will be displayed.

In an artist's statement regarding his philosophy and approach to art, Lenz stated, "I feel that it is important to keep in touch with the roots of our cultural symbols and motifs as a means to understanding how life is supposed to work."

"Hopefully, the work in this gallery acts as a catalyst towards opening the door to something esoteric and mysterious not only for me as the artist, but for the viewer as well."

Lenz anticipates a good turnout. He has been handing out invitations for quite some time.

He said he hopes the spectators will enjoy his work.

"I hope to connect with the audience. Any type of an emotional response is a good one in my view," Lenz said.

After receiving his bachelor's degree, Lenz will take a year off to set up a studio in north central Kansas before continuing his education.

Hays Days begins today

Central Plains Region schools to attend rodeo

Kelly Freeman
Copy editor

Fort Hays State and Great Plains Chrysler Plymouth and Dodge, 4240 Vine St., announce the 28th annual FHSU Rodeo, beginning Friday, April 23, continuing through Sunday, April 25, at the Doug Philip Arena on Golf Course Road.

More than 400 contestants from 23 colleges in three states, including Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri, will compete.

Weekend activities begin at 2 p.m. Friday with the '93 rodeo queen style show, speeches and interviews in the Memorial Union and the horsemanship competition at the arena.

Evening action will begin at 7:30 with a grand march of assorted flags earned on horseback by the FHSU rodeo team, club members and reigning queen Tally Ann Klitzke.

Announcer for the 28th annual rodeo will be Jerry Taylor, Wamego, and bull fighters/rodeo clowns are "Lightening" Larry Deges, Grainfield, and Brent Schreiber, Ransom sophomore.

During the course of the evening, rodeo goers will be thrilled with the the "Wild Ride" and the announcement of the '93 rodeo queen candidates.

The "Wild Ride" consists of nine individuals in outlandish costumes of their choice riding saddle broncs as best they can. Linette Schaller, rodeo club secretary, said. Registration for the "Wild Ride" is $15 each which will eventually go to the individual with the combination of best ride and best costume. Competing in this year's "Wild Ride" is the FHSU Tiger mascot.

'93 Rodeo queen contestants include: Wendie Bowie, Jetmore freshman, Dena Lamb, Lewis freshman and Melanie Wendling, Zurich sophomore.

Rodeo action will begin again Saturday morning at 9 with slack running until after noon and the Hays Days Parade at 11 a.m. The evening performance will begin at 7:30 with the highlight of the evening being the crowning of the '93 Rodeo queen.

Finals for the top 10 in each event will be held Sunday afternoon at 1:30 with announcements of the men's and women's all around cowboy and cowgirl and each event's winners to follow.

This year's rodeo events include in order of performance: bareback riding, calf roping, breakaway roping, saddle bronc riding, steer wrestling, goat tying, "Wild Ride" (Friday and Saturday only), team roping, barrel racing and bull riding.

Each event's winner will receive money as their prize. Rough stock events will receive gearbags and timed events will get saddle blankets which were provided by the FHSU rodeo team and club.

For the rodeo fans, door prizes will be given away courtesy of Gullivers, 2900 Vine St., and Musicland, 2900 Vine St. Prizes include posters, books and compact discs. Winners will be determined by whether or not programs were signed by the FHSU rodeo coach, Bronc Rufford.

Rufford said he expects the team to do very well this weekend, because "they have all worked hard and aspired to excel in their chosen events."

Schaller, Otterle senior, said in order for the community and other students to see what rodeo is all about, they should come on out and join in the fun.

"We want people to see what rodeo is all about and to support their hometown school in competition. Everyone should see some exciting events and quality entertainment," Schaller said.

Greg Farney, rodeo club president, said, "This promises to be the most exciting rodeo in the history of FHSU. Mainly because club members have all pulled together to make this weekend a huge success."

Farney also encouraged the community to attend and thanked everyone for their support.

"We would like to encourage everyone to come out and experience the thrill that comes with rodeo and we would also like to thank the community and all sponsors for their continued support," Farney said.

Gary Brower, rodeo club sponsor, said the team had made all the preparations and the weatherman is cooperating so they should have a very good competition.

"We just want people to come and support us and have a good time."

Schaller also added that it was not expensive entertainment either.

Students may purchase one ticket per student identification at $4; $8 for adults or $5 with a discount ticket or a badge.

Tickets can be purchased at the following outlets on the campus of FHSU and within the community of Hays:

Memorial Union Student Service Center; Great Plains Chrysler Plymouth and Dodge; Vanderbilt's, 1001 Cody Ave.; E-Z Rentals, 1505 Vine St. and A & A Coors, Inc., Eighth St.

Tiger baseball team gets foot back inside NCAA playoff door

Christian D Orr
Sports Manager Editor

Just as the Tiger baseball team thought the door to the National Collegiate Athletic Association Division II playoffs was slamming shut, it popped back up.

Head Baseball Coach Curt Hammeke said the Tigers and Mesa State College are battling for the last NCAA Division II at-large playoff berth.

"It just seemed like it was just as the door was closing, they were swept by the Mavericks in our game series last week. We've won all four games in the Mesa State series, but the Mavericks have won three of their four games, and they have the tiebreaker at large bid."

"It was a simple shot, a fly ball, and the Mavericks put them selves in a position to pick up the Mesa State tiebreaker."

The Mavericks completed a four game series with Denver in a series in which they won just two games.

The Mavericks losses tied with the Tigers performance this week. They have put themselves back in playoff contention.

Hammeke said now the main thing the Tigers need to do is win as many games as they can.

"After hearing this morning that Denver University had beaten Mesa State twice, I think that may let us back in and have an opportunity again," Hammeke said.

So it just reiterates what we need to do as far as maintaining our focus and winning the rest of our games. We wanted to do that anyway, as a goal, but I think now it is going to make a little more significance in each game we play here on out."

Hammeke said he is not sure how much their playoff chances have improved, simply that they did improve.

"I don't know exactly how much their playoff chances have improved. I just know that it gave us a crack," Hammeke said.

"It gave us a crack to get our foot back inside. So I think if we can take advantage of that and go ahead and continue to play good baseball from here on out, then we will let what we can control, I take care of it. But the part of it that we can control is what we do on the field, so we need to go out and take care of it one game at a time and try and get ourselves back into a position where we can get the bid. It's not going to be easy, I know that, but I still think, fortunately, that we are in a position to make something happen."

After coming off the four losses to Mesa State this past weekend, the Tigers bounced back and defeated the University of Nebraska at Kearney in both games of a two night doubleheader.

The victories were a relief to Hammeke, who was worried how his team would bounce back after losing all four games to Mesa State.

"I felt real good in the fact that we were able to come back after the losses over the weekend to Mesa State. I was a little concerned about the players' attitudes after losing those four out there, how well they would play, coming back from that," Hammeke said.

The Tigers defeated the Lopers 13-10 in the first game, and 5-2 in the second game of the doubleheader.

In the first game, the Tigers gave up one run in the top of the first inning but then took over the lead in the bottom of the first by coming through with five runs of their own.

Both teams went scoreless in the second inning, and then the Lopers scored nine runs in the top of the third to grab a 10-5 lead.

The Tigers then retaliated by scoring two runs in each of the final four innings to win the game 13-10.

Cory Barker grabbed the win for the Tigers to improve his record to 4-0.

Brian Thulow took to the mound for the Tigers and faced the Lopers in check by giving up just six hits and did not allow a run until the sixth inning.

The Tigers scored two runs in each of the first two innings and then added one run in the sixth inning.

The Lopers were able to finally get on the board with a single run in the sixth inning to cut the lead to 5-1 and then cut into the lead again in the seventh inning by scoring once again, but that was all they could muster up as they lost by a 5-2 score.

Thulow's performance increased his record to 3-1 on the season to rank him second on the team, and shrank his E.R.A. to 3.89 which is also second for the Tigers.

"I was real proud of the way we bounced back and came out and played hard in those two games. We swung the bats real well and we got a real strong pitching performance from Brian Thulow in game two. I was real happy with the two wins."

advisory board, a pet project of the incoming SGA administration.

"We (SGA) are pretty low on the administration hierarchy. This committee would give SGA more administrative power. SGA still would have a long way to go, but it would be much stronger than it has ever been," Addis said.

"We will be discussing all options and hopefully will have by-law legislation ready for a first reading at the next SGA meeting," Wayne Rzyha, Tampa junior, said.

Campus safety was also discussed at the meeting. Addis said five locations for the proposed independent information centers and "blue phones" were discussed.

Nate Halverson said Associated Students of Kansas would be sponsoring a student survey to gauge the attitude of the student toward SGA. Six questions have been formed so far.

"We're looking at having a booth in the Union on May 3 and 4," Halverson said.

The new SGA administration will be sworn in at next week's SGA meeting in the Frontier room starting at 6 p.m.

FHSU to host teacher fair

Stephanie Baccus
Staff writer

On Monday, April 26, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Gross Memorial Coliseum, the Career Development and Placement Center will be hosting the 18th annual Teacher Career Fair.

Dan Rice, director of career development and placement service, said the career fair is an "opportunity open to new or soon graduates and experienced teachers wanting to change school districts to meet with administrators from schools in 10 states with vacancies."

"It gives all of our Fort Hays State candidates an opportunity to meet with and interview representatives from schools from different states," Rice said.

Often a position will be offered on the spot for hard positions to fill, like a speech pathologist, other areas of special education, industrial technology studies and music, he said.

But, attendance does not guarantee a job offering on the spot.

"A lot of these recruiters will obtain a pool of candidates and will go back home and then sift through that selection of candidates," Rice said.

"It's a very cost effective way of getting interviews for the students and the school districts as well, and it's right here, so you don't have to drive hours away."

"We usually suggest they bring resumes, energy, enthusiasm and flexibility to go where the jobs are," Rice said.

About 140 school districts are to be represented, with around 800 teacher candidates.

The 10 states scheduled to appear include Arizona, California, Colorado, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas.

"I would say (our fair is) one of the 10 largest in the nation, based on our history. However, we may have bumped down to the top 15."

Rice said FHSU, which used to have the largest career fair in the nation, began to fall down the list due to "larger schools getting on the bandwagon."

"It's harder to compete with larger schools," Rice said.

The fair is set up with tables for school districts with representatives for those schools.

The school districts are arranged on the floor alphabetically. Students are given lists of schools and their vacancies and a flow chart of where those schools are located at in the coliseum.

FHSU students receive 2 of 3 KSAGC biology scholarships

Melissa Chaffin
Senior copy editor

Two out of three scholarships from the Kansas State Association of Gardening Clubs were awarded to Fort Hays State students.

Jeff Elliott, Natoma senior, and Kathy Hitchcock, Milwaukee, Wis., sophomore, are recipients of $1000 scholarships for the '93-'94 year.

"It speaks real well for Fort Hays, especially since there were only three in the state, and we received two of them," Joseph Thomasson, professor of biological sciences and allied health, said.

Criteria for the scholarship included: classification of an advanced student (sophomore to post graduate); at least a B average; attend a Kansas university and major in an area of biology dealing with plants.

In addition to the criteria, the applicant must also submit letters of recommendation from Thomasson and a civic leader and send a statement of his or her financial need.

"Both of them are on the Dean's Honor Roll, just super students," Thomasson said.

Cleus Hammerschmidt, Hays resident, is chairperson of the Kansas State Association of Gardening Clubs.

Hammerschmidt said, "These two were very much qualified to receive this. We had three scholarships to give away and only three applied."

Hammerschmidt said the scholarship has been in existence for some time but not in this large amount.

Both Elliott and Hitchcock plan to use their biology degrees in the future.

Elliott said he is interested in environmental issues including plant taxonomy or delineation.

Hitchcock said she is uncertain about what she will do in the future.

She said receiving the scholarship was "great."

"It's wonderful. That money is needed. I have a lot more to learn," Elliott said. "I was honored. Who wouldn't be? There were only three people in the state of Kansas who received it."

Both Elliott and Hitchcock said they were thankful for Thomasson's help as well as to the garden club.

They received their scholarships at a banquet in Arkansas City on Tuesday.
