Bannister addresses senators

Julie G. Long
 University Leader

Shala Bannister, Fort Hays State affirmative action officer, was the guest speaker at last night's Student Government Association meeting.

Bannister said, "The point of affirmative action is to take affirmative steps to bring under-represented people in the work place."

Bannister said her office "works with all the different things that have to do with a person's protected class status."

This includes the search process for under-represented faculty. It also involves handling complaints of discrimination or harassment related to a person's protected class.

The protected classes are race, religion, gender, age, disability, and Vietnam-era and special disabled veterans.

Bannister said her office is considering a possible revision of the grievance policy and establishing a disabilities policy.

Bannister said she is open to hearing the senators' thoughts and suggestions.

"I always appreciate input from people on policies. You have to have to go back and change things all the time so it's nice to have a lot of feedback from people before you implement something," she said.

Several senators wanted to know if Bannister felt affirmative action had reached the point where people were being hired because of their protected class status.

Bannister said, "I don't think we've gone too far yet. I think we still have quite a ways to go to have equality in the work force."

"You should be hiring someone because they're the best person for the job. The problem is that for many, many years we hired people and said they were the best person for the job because they were white males."

In other business, a resolution was passed calling for "each senator (to) post their photo and Student Government phone number within their department."

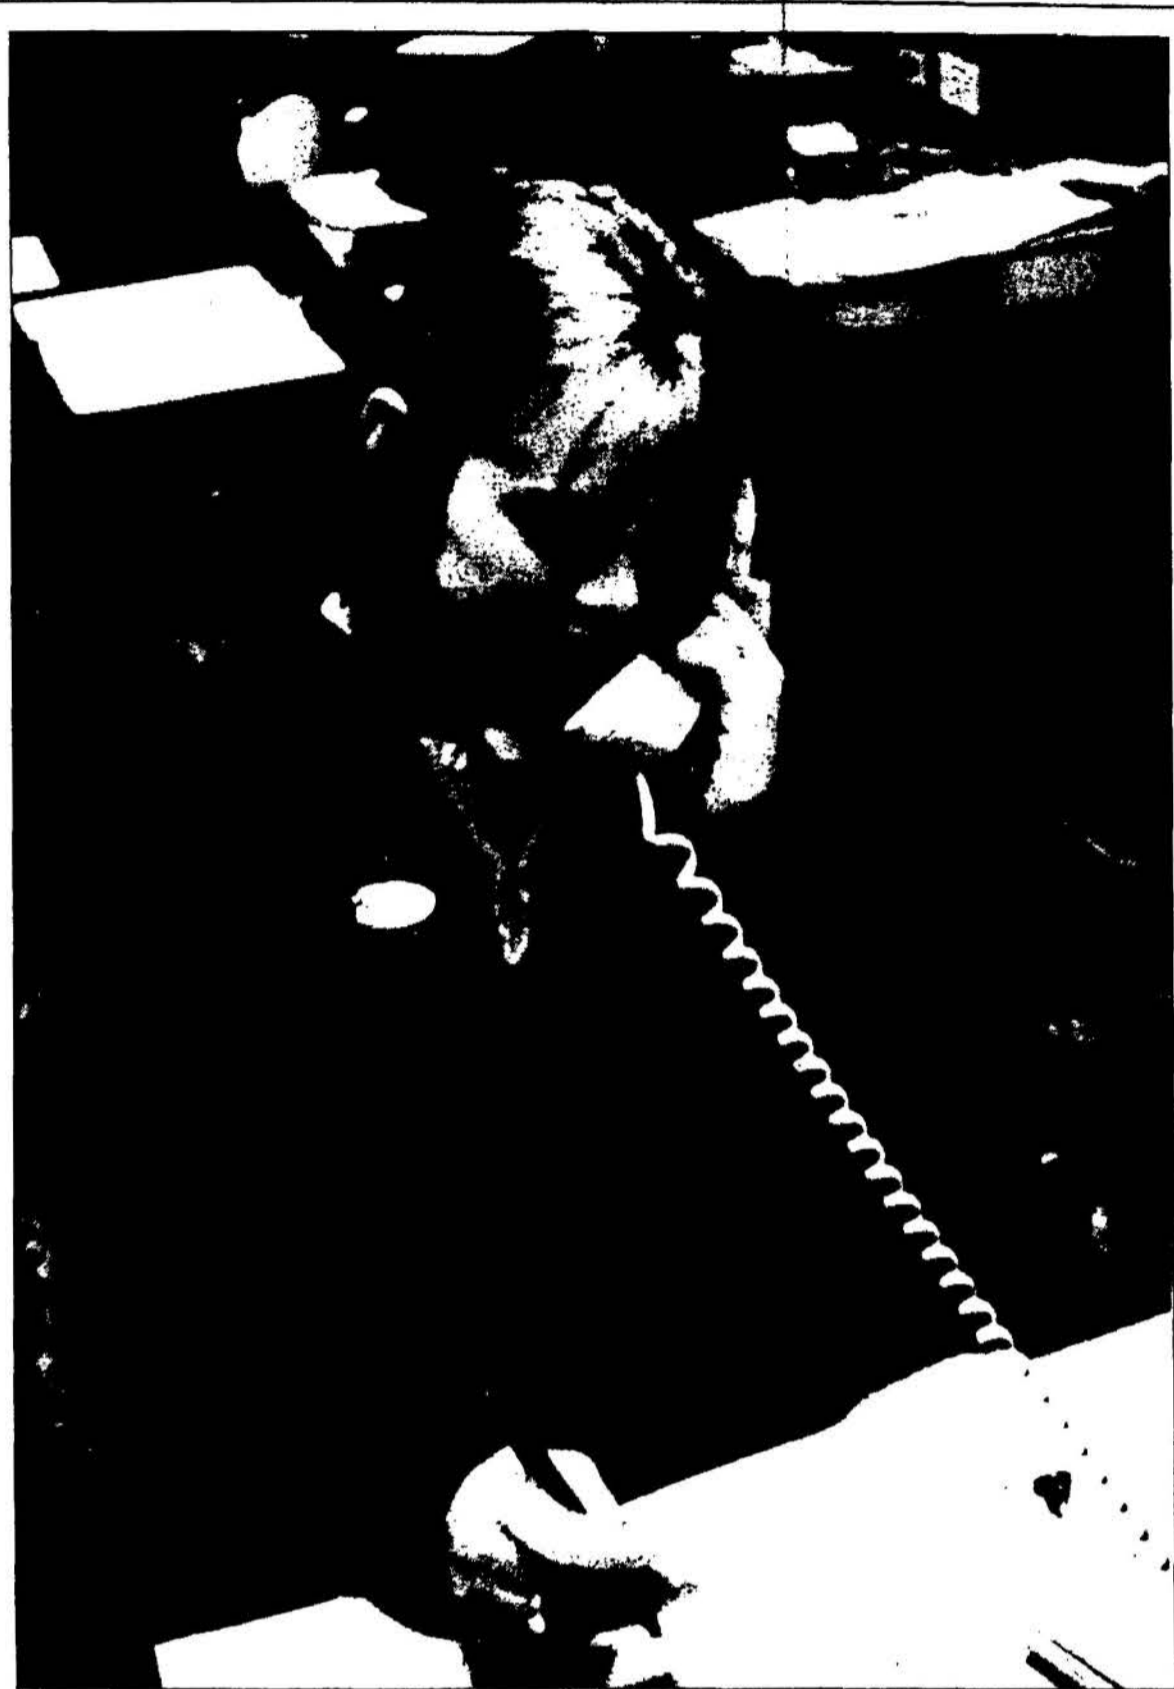

The resolution originally asked senators to spend one scheduled hour per week in the SGA office.

Audrey Nogle, SGA president, said, "We see about five of you in the office on a regular basis. The rest of you we never see."

"I think that one hour a week is not a lot to ask, if you have to split it up. You need to be there so there are other people there besides executive staff. You all are (the student's) representative," Nogle said.

"The concern that you are not representing your constituents and that you are not accessible has been brought to me and (this resolution) is the response to that," she said.

However, the scheduling of one hour a week was voted out of the resolution because many senators said they did not have an hour to spare.

Speaker focuses on Greek gays, lesbians

Candas Graham
 University Leader

Janet Pryor from the University of Kansas spoke at the Women's Center on "Gays and Lesbians in the Greek System" and the programs that have been implemented on the KU campus.

They have been implemented, Pryor said, to help those in Greek organizations feel comfortable in "coming out" to their sisters and brothers in sororities and fraternities about their sexuality.

"In the Greek sorority system, 'coming out' to their sisters is very difficult," Pryor said.

Pryor said education at leadership conferences called Greek Endeavor, has helped create a safe environment in which the house members can "come out of the closet."

"Many people in houses don't come out" for fear of being physically hurt. That's why education is important.

"It's amazing that many people in houses stay 'in the closet' because they won't feel comfortable. They need to be comfortable, it's their house too," Pryor said.

Pryor, a lesbian, has been nationally recognized through articles published in Redbook Magazine and a documentary soon to air on PBS called Shades of Grey: Growing Up Gay in Kansas.

The psychology club also sponsored a discussion on human sexuality with Pryor as the speaker.

Marc Pratarelli, assistant professor of psychology, invited Pryor to come to Fort Hays State as a part of a year long experiment in behavioral science and behaviors.

"Having Janet here was really great. I thought it was a fun and rewarding evening."

"Anytime you mention gay or lesbian, people automatically think of the sexual aspect of it. Janet helped those of us who attended realize that there are people behind those labels," Pratarelli said.

The main focus of this experiment, Pratarelli said, has been to broaden student's horizons, strip away labels and see that as people we are all similar.

"It's rare that we get real diversity here in Hays and having Janet here has given not only a taste of diversity to some of my students, but also to those who attended her lectures."

"It's important to learn that all people are basically good inside," Pratarelli said.

Wichita Symphony to perform for Encore Series

Rebecca Aistrup
 University Leader

"Symphony pieces that you can hum," is how I.B. Dent, University Activities Board director, describes the Wichita Symphony Orchestra.

As part of the Encore Series, the Wichita Symphony will perform at 3 p.m. Sunday in the Beach/Schmidt Performing Arts Center.

The Symphony played at Gross Memorial Coliseum about five years ago.

Dent said, "They have a wonderful reputation. They do a wonderful series in Wichita, plus they do a fair amount of touring around the rest of Kansas and Oklahoma."

Dent said it is rare to have a full symphony orchestra for the Encore Series because of the size of the orchestra and the cost.

The orchestra was founded in 1944 making it one of the oldest arts organizations in Kansas.

As the largest performing arts organization in the state, it has been nationally recognized for its artistic level and for the community support it receives.

It is governed by a 65-member board of directors. These volunteers represent almost every industry and business in the Wichita community.

Dent said, "This particular program is one that would be very accessible to the general public for the simple fact that it is music that they know. It is a very historical 1800s kind of performance."

The last piece on the program is a fast moving, enjoyable, showy Tchaikovsky work, Dent said.

He said the piece shows off and tests the solo violinist, David Perry.

Dent said, "He has a wonderful reputation and has done the Tchaikovsky piece before. We wanted to make sure that he would be able to do this particular piece again."

Perry began studying violin at the age of five. He earned his bachelor of music and master of music degrees at The Juilliard School of Music. He made his solo debut with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra in 1984 and is in his third season as concertmaster of the Wichita Symphony Orchestra.

Zuohuang Chen has been the music director and conductor of the orchestra since 1990. He is the fifth artistic leader in the Orchestra's five decades.

Chen was born in China and began to study piano at an early age. After graduation, he studied conducting privately.

While in the United States, he entered the school of music at the University of Michigan and received a master of music degree in 1982.

Tickets are available at the Student Service Center in the Memorial Union. Reserved tickets are $14 for the general public, $12 for senior citizens and students 18 and under, and $10 for FHSU students with their student ID.

Unreserved tickets are $10 for the general public, $8 for senior citizens and students 18 and under, and $6 for FHSU students with their student ID.

"The unreserved section is one of the best acoustic areas to sit in for this particular performance," Dent said.

"The way Beach/Schmidt is designed, the sound goes up and hits the ceiling and comes back. So those are wonderful seats. This is a nice way to spend a couple of hours in a concert hall. It is really special."

Idea pays off for psychology secretary

Rupananda Misra
 University Leader

Marnie Amhold, secretary in the psychology department, has been awarded $356 by the Employee Suggestion Awards Program for her idea that will save the state some money.

If her idea is implemented, it will save the State of Kansas about $3555 per year on interviewing candidates for faculty positions.

In addition to the money, she will receive a certificate of merit. Her supervisor, Tom Jackson, psychology department chair, will receive 10 percent of that amount.

Amhold received the award for suggesting the use of a checklist by candidates interviewed for faculty positions.

This checklist helps the candidates outline appropriate interviewing expenses and is a method for submitting receipts, which results in prompt reimbursement.

Amhold said prompt reimbursement has been an ongoing problem for several years.

She said when candidates interview for faculty positions on a campus, they are required to pay their own expenses during the visit. Reimbursement is made to the candidate after he or she submits all the receipts pertaining to the trip. This is verbally explained to the candidates.

She said the problem arises when candidates do not adequately interpret what is considered appropriate interviewing expenses, and expect reimbursement for items like movies in the motel, magazines, personal telephone calls, etc.

Negative feelings may develop by the candidate for the extra time spent processing payment, which delays reimbursement, she said.

Amhold said the checklist she developed defines appropriate interviewing expenses, outlines the correct method for submitting receipts and reminds the candidates to leave their social security number.

The checklist also provides an understanding between the candidate and the university of the reimbursement procedure.

Amhold said the checklist provides all information that the university needs to reimburse the candidate in a timely and inexpensive manner.

Amhold said she had shared her idea with the State of Kansas Employee Award Board last March.

"I am glad to share my idea with other departments, which might help them in their interviewing process," she said.

Duo to perform music from south of the border

Rebecca Aistrup
 University Leader

Get a little taste of South American music culture with a couple from Nicaragua.

Guardabarranco, a Spanish musical duo from Nicaragua, is coming to the Backdoor, located in the basement of Custer Hall. The performance will be Monday at 8 p.m. and is sponsored by the University Activities Board.

Katia and Salvador Barquero are a "remarkable glimpse of two distinctive personalities merging with the music they create into one unified artistic and philosophical whole," according to press release.

I.B. Dent, UAB director, said, "We are doing this group because they are from Central America and their program is basically in Spanish."

Dent said this program will be great for students enrolled in Spanish classes.

"They can come to the program and hear Spanish being spoken and sung," he said.

"We also have a number of Hispanic students on our campus. It gives them a program that they can go to that is in Spanish," Dent said.

"We are just trying to serve a little bit of a different population," he said.

This duo was barely out of college in Nicaragua when they began their professional careers.

According to a press release, they came from a family of poets, musicians and painters. Their original songs embrace the intimacy of the folk traditions learned from their parents, the gentility of the classical heritage passed down from records and radio brought to their young lives in Central America.

Dent said the couple grew up listening to American music. Their music is a blend between their native music and American music.

"It is a sound that we don't normally hear. It is one that wouldn't be common," he said.

They began singing their new songs in schools, factories, and fields.

"The direct yet non-polemical and playful poetry of Salvador's writing and the strong gorgeous unforced vocals of Katia thrilled people like Holly Near and Jackson Browne," according to a press release.

The release added that the result of this fascination was an album produced in Jackson's home studio in Los Angeles and released on Holly's Redwood label.

Guardabarranco has toured in the United States and Europe.

Dent said he gave one of their cassette tapes to the UAB staff who "just fell in love with it."

"It is a little bit different because it has a Spanish flavor to it," he said.

Dent said learning about other cultures is very important.

"Americans are going to need to know more about cultures south of us," he said. "We are going to find as time goes on that we are going to be dealing more and more with Mexico and the nations south of Mexico in Central America as trade develops and grows," Dent said.

Tickets are on sale now at the Student Service Center in the Memorial Union. Ticket prices are $5 for adults, $3 for FHSU faculty/staff and those 18 and under. Admission is free for FHSU students with their student ID.

Story 'littered' with inaccuracies

Dear editor:

On Nov. 8, the University Leader printed a story about students in campaigns.

Unfortunately, the paper found it necessary to distort quotes and take them out of context. In fact, the story was littered with inaccuracies.

First or all, I was quoted as saying "I am the most involved student on campus."

That sounds like a bold statement, but if the paper would have put it in context, then no one would have disagreed.

In context, I said, "Of the College Republicans, I am the most involved student in political campaigns." Obviously, the quote the paper used for its headline is totally different from what I said.

I was also given credit for things that I could have never done. According to the story, "most of the yard signs and posters for Graves seen around town can be attributed to Simpson's efforts."

The truth, however, is totally different. The only "Graves" signs I put up were the one in my yard and the one on top of the Republican Party Headquarters.

It's time to give credit where credit is due. Ken Havner, Ellis County Graves campaign chair; David Coen, Ellis County republican chair; and Errol Wuertz, Hays senior and treasurer for Scott Schwab; are the three people most responsible for putting up the Graves signs.

As for Schwab, I was his campaign manager. However, the man who did most of the work for Schwab was Errol Wuertz, Hays senior. I was also given credit for "telling Scott what to wear."

Anyone who knows me would know that simply is not true. I'm color blind.

What I did was give Schwab my opinion on whether he should wear a suit and tie or something more casual.

I would like to take time to thank all of the students who helped me with the Schwab and Graves campaigns, but they are simply too numerous to do so.

I hope in the future that the Leader tries to make its stories more accurate. This kind of blatant irresponsibility and unprofessionalism is what causes people not to read the Leader.

If you talk with anyone who has ever had any significant contact with the Leader, you will find out that the paper continually misquotes them.

It is time for the students of Fort Hays State to demand better. I would not be surprised to see an alternative paper begin on campus.

Misquote harmful to instructor

Dear editor:

This letter is in reference to the article "SGA votes against multiculturalism requirement" in the Oct. 21 issue of the University Leader.

I was wrongfully quoted as making a negative statement about multicultural education. James Forsythe, dean of graduate studies and former instructor of the Multiculturalism course, was the one who made the statement, not I.

I strongly support multicultural instruction. I received training for multicultural education from Florida International University, Miami, Fla., while I was teaching for the Dade County Public Schools.

I would love to teach multiculturalism and make it as relevant as it should be for better understanding among different cultural, for a world beyond our own idiosyncracies.

It is regrettable that the Leader wrongfully attributed to me, a part-time instructor with a masters degree, a statement that I strongly disagree.

This article has caused me hardship and negative comments from colleagues and others. I consider it a defamation of character.

Many people did not see the correction on page three of the following edition. The article ran on the front page.

If the Leader wants to be reliable and act in good faith, it needs to edit and double check their sources. I have lost faith in the Leader.

Olga Forsythe
Instructor of modern languages.

Q & A with the President: 'All they have to do is ask'

The purpose of this correspondence is to respond to the questions that students asked me in Campus Views section of the Nov. 8 issue of the University Leader.

I have always said that if a student has a question, all they have to do is ask and I will do everything I can to get them the answer or assist them in dealing with whatever is challenging them.

In keeping with that commitment, here is some information for each of the students who participated in the Campus View program.

Q: Why are we spending so much money on building new buildings instead of improving the ones we already have?

A: The resources for new building are from a different source that the funds for the maintenance and repair of current existing facilities.

For example, Tomanek Hall is currently being built by $4 million in United States Department of Energy funds and $8 million in federal reimbursements which Kansas received and awarded to FHSU for this project.

Each year, we spend approximately $600,000 of educational building fund resources to renovate and improve our current existing facilities. This last year, we spent the largest amount of those resources on improving and renovating classrooms.

Q: (I'd ask) if he thinks the housing proposal is really needed?

A: The answer is emphatically, "yes." But it is important to note that the students have convinced me of this over the last 3 years, including the recent Student Government Association discussion and vote on the housing proposal.

Q: Where does all the money that we pay for tuition go?

A: Currently, for every $.25 of tuition a Fort Hays State student pays, the state of Kansas provides $.75 in matching funds.

All of those resources go to pay for salaries and fringe benefits of the employees at FHSU and the operating costs of the institution.

No tuition dollars go for scholarships or student financial aid as per regulation of the state of Kansas.

Q: Why don't we have more residential hall parking?

A: I'm glad you brought this up because I wasn't aware there was a need for additional residence hall parking.

I know that Student Residential Life is very interested in improving the quality of life in our residence halls.

If there is a need for more parking, students need to articulate that so we can make it a priority in all our improvement strategy for our residence halls.

Q: Why don't we have a class in Latin here?

A: Not enough students have indicated an interest in taking Latin classes. A couple of years ago, there was an interest in Japanese and the university provided courses in that foreign language as long as the interest continued.

Q: With the addition of the new science building, how much is our tuition going to change?

A: The answer is none. All of the resources to build the new science building come from funds outside of the normal budget process that is driven by tuition and state tax dollars.

Q: Why doesn't the university consider investing in real computers?

A: All of the university investments in our computing technology are for real. But, I know that as soon as we purchase new technology, it is replaced by a new generation within 6 to 12 months.

In the coming year, the university will invest over half a million dollars in new computers that, at the time, will be state of the art.

In closing, let me thank the students for their questions and the newspaper's effort to provide them with answers.

Sincerely

Edward H. Hammond
President

Parents most influential in writer's life

Most individuals have at least one person in his or her life who inspires him or her to become a better person.

Like many people, the most influential person in my life are my parents.

My parents have encouraged me to make the right choices and discouraged me from making the wrong choices.

My entire life they have given me the freedom to make decisions on my own, with the knowledge and values they have instilled in me.

Because of them, I am the person that I am. When I was in high school, I thought my parents were a drag because I always had a strict curfew. Now I understand that it was only for my own safety.

When I broke their rules they didn't bring their wrath down on me, instead they let me learn from my mistakes.

Connie Ellerman

University Leader

But why?

But he would answer me, not out of obligation, but out of desire to see me learn.

It frightens me to see traits of my parents in myself. A friend told me that I tell a story in the same manner that my mother does.

I denied it, but I know he was right.

As far as my feelings and emotions, I am very similar to my father — neither of us like to show any.

I don't call my parents everyday, but I do miss them and enjoy talking to them when I can.

I owe my parents everything. They have given me so much, everything from the memories of a wonderful childhood to the way I am.

I should thank them more often for building me to be the person that I am.

I guess that is what I'm doing now.

Thanks, Mom and Dad.

Rodeo team competes at NWOUSU

Rebecca Alstrup
University Leader

The Fort Hays State Rodeo team competed at Northwestern Oklahoma State University at Alva this past weekend.

Rodeo team advisor Gary Brower said, "Kerry Stewart and Mike Greenleaf both had really good weekends. Others had mediocre weekends and some just had plain bad weekends."

Kerry Stewart, senior bareback rider was eighth in the long round with 60 points, second in the short round with 72 points missing first by two points, and fourth in the average with a total of 132 points.

There was a three way tie for the first three slots with 137 total points.

Brower said, "Kerry is really coming around. He has finally realized what he has got to do to correct his riding."

Mike Greenleaf, junior steer wrestler was eighth in the long round with a time of 5.5, first in the short round with a time of 4.8 and fourth in the average with a time of 10.3. Overall he finished with a total of 50 points.

Brower said, "He had a tremendous steer. He knew he could not let the steer see too much light and it wouldn't take much to take the steer down. But he knew if he hit on him just a little bit too heavy, then the steer would crumble and fall with him and he would be in bad shape."

Right now Stewart is tied for sixth and seventh in the region after two rodeos and Greenleaf is sixth in the region.

Fort Scott Community College was the top team for the men with a total of 175 points.

Murray State College was the top women's team with a total of 125 points.

Brower said, "The arena was really small and is intimidating to any kind of horse other than a 14 hand horse. It just wasn't a good weekend for barrel racers. There was long times and a lot of penalties and the break-away was just a miss."

The Russians are coming

Ryan Buchanan
University Leader

The Russians are coming to Fort Hays State.

The Russian Red Army Air Force basketball team, that is.

The Tigers will face the Russians in an exhibition game Sunday at 3 p.m. in Gross Memorial Coliseum.

Tickets for the game are all general admission, $5 for adults and $3 for children.

Students will be admitted free with valid identification.

With over 20 practices and an intrasquad scrimmage under their belts the Tigers have been able to ascertain, to a certain extent, how much progress they have made in the preseason.

"We're definitely making progress. We've had somewhere around 20 practices. And of those 20 practices, we've really only had one bad practice...that's a pretty good percentage." Coach Gary Garner said.

However, the exhibition game will give them a chance to see how they can perform against an outside opponent.

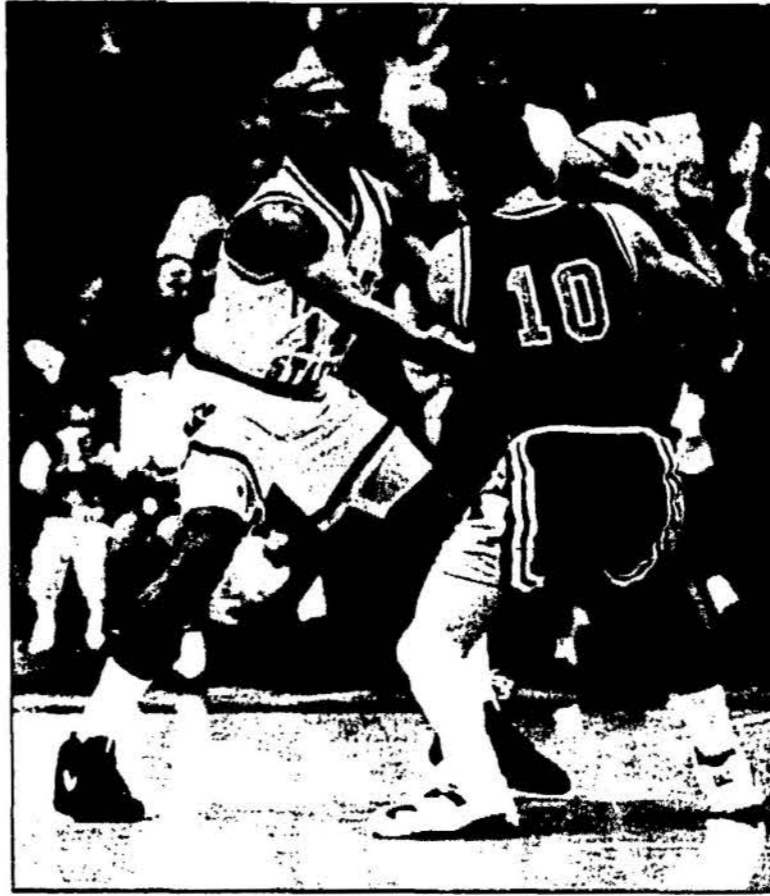

"It's a good way to find out where you team is. Until you've played against outside competition, it's hard to tell exactly where you are," Garner said.

When you play against yourself, it's hard to evaluate how far you've progressed, and this game Sunday will really help us in that area," he said.

The Russian team tours the nation for the sole purpose of playing exhibition games.

The will not go on FHSU's record or affect its chances of making the NCAA playoffs.

exhibition games.

The will not go on FHSU's record or affect its chances of making the NCAA playoffs.

"They'll definitely give us good competition, maybe more than we want," Garner said.

According to Garner, the game will feature the Russians' size versus FHSU's quickness.

The Russians range 6-9, 6-8 and 6-7 inside, and 6-7 and 6-6 at the guard spots.

"Most of those teams really shoot the ball well to. So when you shoot the ball well and you're big, that can present a problem," Garner said.

Garner said he will start the same starting five from last year's team, with the exception of senior center Jerry Dixon who is out with a broken hand.

Freshman Jeremie Kester will start in his place.

"We want to win the game, and we're going to try to win it, but we're going to play a lot of players, and take a look at a lot of different combinations on the floor," Garner said.

Season ends with loss to Ichabods

Kristin Holmes
University Leader

After a trying season of injuries and long road trips, the Fort Hays State volleyball team once again fell short of a win.

The Tigers lost their final game of the season to Washburn on Wednesday.

The Tigers lost the first two matches 15-9, 15-7, but came back in the third match 16-14, only to lose the fourth and final match 15-7.

The team ended the season 8-31, with the Washburn loss being the 21st in a row.

The team did start the season on the right foot. During the month of September it was 8-10.

During October the team began to experience injury and traveled on many long road trips.

One of the road trips consisted of a nine-day stretch when the Tigers were away.

FHSU had only 10 members on the squad this season and were plagued with injury after injury.

The injuries especially took their toll during the later part of the season.

During the Washburn game, junior Karah Dankenbring was recovering from a sprained ankle she suffered during the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference tournament and could not play the full game.

Senior Lynn Loschen was also recovering from an injured shoulder.

Because of the injury Loschen's playing time was also limited during the last game of her college career.

Although the team did not have a winning season, two of the four seniors received postseason honors in the RMAC.

Lynn Smith, a middle blocker, was named to the RMAC second team.

Loschen an outside hitter was named to the honorable mention RMAC team.

Playing for pride: Tigers look to end season on positive note against conference champs, Western State

Ryan Buchanan
University Leader

Last week the Tiger football team gave up its Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference trophy.

Tomorrow they face the new conference champion, Western State.

Therefore many may think Fort Hays State will be playing for nothing.

This assumption is incorrect, for according to Coach Bob Cortese, FHSU will be playing for one thing...pride.

"This game means something in terms of pride. If we beat Western, we can show that we can play with the better teams in the country," Cortese said.

"Pride is what we are playing for, and if we have a lot of pride, we'll play well; and if we play well, we'll win," he said.

FHSU's main goal for this season was to repeat as conference champions.

Now that their goal has been vanquished, the Tigers are approaching tomorrow's game as a shot at redemption.

"There's only going to be one team win the championship, unfortunately it's not going to be us.

"We can't win the league championship, and we know that. What we're asking ourselves is, 'do we have enough pride that we can beat the RMAC champions,'" Cortese said.

Western State's record speaks for itself. The Mountaineers stand at 8-1 overall and 6-0 in the RMAC. They are also ranked 14th in the latest NCAA Division II poll.

The Western State offense leads the conference in points scored with 37.8 per game and is second in the league in total offense with 411.4 yards per game.

The offense features senior quarterback Tim Thenell. Thenell averages 158 yards per game passing and has two of the league's top receivers in Ryan Gentry and Neal Sherbeyn.

"Their receivers have great speed and their quarterback is a three year starter. So they have all the ingredients," Cortese said.

Runningback Pat Greer averages 69.4 yards per game placing him fifth in the RMAC.

"When they run, Greer is a good enough athlete that he is able to generate some offense," Cortese said.

The Mountaineers' success offensively, is fueled by its relentless offensive line.

"The key to their success is that they have a very good offensive line that can both run and pass block very well," Cortese said.

Defensively, Western State ranks third in the conference allowing 308.8 yards per game.

"Defensively they have three starters back from a very good defense last year."

"They have a very good secondary, big strong inside linebackers, and two very good defensive ends," Cortese said.

"If we're going to win we have to go out there and eliminate turnovers, move the ball, and keep the defense off the field," he said.

Wrestlers to compete at Central Missouri

Cade Garrelts
University Leader

This Sunday the Fort Hays State wrestling crew embarks on yet another journey.

This time it will be hustling off to the Central Missouri Open in Warrensburg, Mo. for its second open of this season.

Some of the teams scheduled to attend this meet include:

University of Central Missouri, University of Northeast Missouri, University of Missouri, Missouri Valley College, University of Nebraska-Kearney, University of Nebraska, Merrimack College, and Lindenwood College.

Coach Bob Smith said it will be the large amount of Division I schools that will put up the biggest challenge for FHSU.

Smith seemed confident his team will compete well against these schools, but there will be a slight disadvantage for the Tigers.

Freshman Brian Allender will not be competing at this meet due to an injury he sustained during practice.

The same goes for sophomore Cully Jackson, who took a blow that injured his ribs.

"They probably won't be in this meet, but they should be healed and ready for the next one," Smith said.

Sophomore Eddie Woody, sophomore Cody Bickley, sophomore Jason Dutton, and junior Dave Hull should, once again, be the people to watch.

If their performances at the University of Southern Colorado Open last week are any indication of what is in store for this weekend, they are looking to be successful this at Central Missouri.

For the Tiger wrestlers, the "big men" are the key to having a successful year, Smith said.

Smith said he feels that the wrestlers competing in the 150 lbs. and up classes need to be worked more, but that is where the power will come from.

Cody Bickley	5-1
Jason Dutton	5-1
