Annual Cathedral Concert to be featured tonight

Rebecca Aistrup
University Leader

Christmas time is coming. It is in the air everywhere.

The Fort Hays State department of music will present the Cathedral Concert at 8 p.m. tonight at St. Fidelis Catholic Church, Victoria. The church seats 1000 people.

James Murphy, Music department chair, said, "This is holiday music that is predominantly vocal with a lot of instrumental types of things happening also."

"This is a tradition here at Fort Hays. The Cathedral Concert has been going on for about 10 to 12 years now. It is a good tradition."

The groups that will be performing at the concert are: the Fort Hays Singers, and the Hays Community Choir, conducted by Laurine G. Lamb, instructor of music; Fort Hays State University Concert Choir, conducted by James L. Murphy; Hays High School A Cappella Choir, conducted by Joe F. Dolezal; and Kennedy Middle School Singing Irish, conducted by Diane H. Flood.

Along with the vocals there will also be an instrumental section.

The instrumental groups that will be performing will be the University Cameraata, directed by Julian Shew and the Fort Hays State University Brass Quintet.

Some of the instruments that will be used include the piano, organ, brass, strings and woodwinds.

Murphy said, "It is not like a full orchestra, although, different choirs have different small ensembles that are accompanied with them."

Many type of Christmas songs will be performed at the concert.

Murphy said, "There will be a whole range of songs being performed from the earliest music of the Gregorian Chant from Pope Gregory, all the way up through contemporary music."

There will be classical music and the traditional Christmas carols. There will be songs like "Silent Night," "Joy to the World" and "Hark the Herald Angels Sing."

Some of the soloists that will be performing include Brad Dawson, instructor of music; Lamb; and Paula Boire, associate professor of music.

Murphy said, "One of the more traditional solos is 'O Most Holy Night' and Lamb will be singing that. This song is done in the program every year. It is the audience's favorite, as well as one of those things that is associated with the Christmas season."

The groups will combine to sing three Christmas carols.

Murphy said, "This is our annual see concert page 2"

Varied agenda discussed at last faculty senate meeting

Tammi Harris
University Leader

During yesterday's faculty senate meeting, a report was given by Fort Hays State President Edward Hammond; Sandy Rupp, assistant to the president, and Viv Hammond told about the VIP student ambassadors and their duties; and John Ross, assistant to the dean of education, told of an idea for new student identification cards.

Hammond told of his meeting with the Task Force to Empower the Faculty.

Hammond said that in recent visits with faculty, he has "found confusion about some things, so to try and clarify this confusion," he met with this committee.

The Task Force to Empower the Faculty is a "special task force that's working on empowering faculty."

After his meeting, Hammond said he thought it would help to clarify situations by talking with the faculty "about some things that have been going on at the university," he said.

"My intent has been to try and create a team approach to run the university," he said.

Hammond said in order to do this, "management changes" will need to be made to make the university "more effective and more efficient."

Then Rupp, along with V. Hammond, spoke of the student representatives for VIPs.

Rupp said that "maybe the faculty are not aware (that the VIPs are a) service organization and they are at your disposal for social events."

Rupp went on to state that to be an ambassador, students must have a 2.5 GPA, be friendly and outgoing, willing to serve your university, have a common knowledge about the campus, and be interested in meeting new and interesting people.

Following this was a report by Ross on the Task Force on Debit Card Technology.

This potential FHSU ID card may offer many opportunities to students. The card will still cost $5 and may have the following options:

Library checkout, long distance calling card, pop and candy machines, laundry services, banking services, residence hall security systems, class attendance, and financial aid.

The card could be used as a credit card with one exception; the money must be in the bank before the student is able to spend it.

Kearney native to perform for Gallery

Rebecca Aistrup
University Leader

"This is not a typical college act," was the comment made about Jim Salestrom from I.B. Dent, University Activities Board Director.

The University Activities Board will present Jim Salestrom for the last of the Gallery Series performances at 8 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday at the Backdoor, in the basement of Custer Hall.

Dent said, "He performs some folk, sings ballads, performs popular stuff and some pop-type songs with his acoustic guitar."

"He has been to a lot of the big folk festivals all around the United States." Salestrom is from Kearney, Neb. This is where he got his start with his brother Chuck.

Dent said, "He established a band in that area called 'Timberline' which was Dolly Parton's backup band for eight or nine years."

He moved to Colorado after "Timberline" fell apart.

Dent said, "In Colorado, he began to play solo and do some free-lancing."

He has done a lot of commercials as well.

Dent said, "He wrote and performed the Colorado Rockies baseball team's little jingle advertisement that goes along with their radio and TV advertisements."

In addition to his varied performance endeavors, Salestrom was awarded a regional Emmy as well as a Colorado Broadcasters Award for Promotion of the Year. Both honors stemmed from public service announcements recorded for Denver NBC affiliate, KCNC Channel 4.

Dent said, "He plays a lot in the ski resort area at clubs, particularly at Breckenridge."

He performs during the ski season at the Breckenridge Cattle Company in the Village at Breckenridge Resort, as well as Breck's Lounge in the Hilton.

Dent said, "He has an album out right now with the 'Wild Jimbos,' with the song titled 'Let's Talk Dirty in Hawaiian.'"

He has also performed with some popular country musicians.

COURTESY PHOTO

Jim Salestrom will give an acoustic guitar performance at the Backdoor at 8 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday.

Dent said, "He has played with people such as Dolly Parton. He has also played on John Denver's albums."

The last time he performed in Hays was at an outdoor concert in June of 1993.

Dent said, "This is a nice way to take a break from studying for your exams and getting papers done."

"So instead of taking a break and watching television the students can take a break and watch a real performer."

People attending five of the six

Gallery performances will be eligible to win dinner for four at Gutierrez Mexican Restaurant, 1106 E. 27th St.

Tickets for the show can be purchased at the Student Service Center in the Memorial Union.

Ticket prices are $4 for the general public, $3 for faculty/staff and those 18 and under and free for FHSU students with their student ID.

Dent said, "(Salestrom) is an all around good performer. He has got some nice stories, knows a lot of people and has been in the business for awhile."

A MODEST PROPOSAL

Two issues that have the campus up in arms these days are parking and multiculturalism. No matter what action is taken, or not taken, no one is happy.

With this in mind, here is The Parking/Multiculturalism Initiative for your consideration.

The staff/student parking distinctions on campus should be eliminated. Instead, the divisions should be along ethnic lines. A certain number of spaces will be designated for African-American students and staff, a certain number for Asian-Americans, and so forth — with each having an equal representation around the campus proper.

Any white person caught in a space of a different ethnic delineation will not be required to pay a monetary fine, but an educational one.

For instance, any white, male or female, caught in an African-American space will have to perform one of several tasks designed to educate him or her on the oppression blacks have had to live under: pick a sack of cotton, sing a spiritual or perhaps go to a special class held on Martin Luther King, Jr., Day.

Any non-white minority caught in an improper space will be subject to a minimum monetary fine that is much lower than what the fines are now, racism does not exist outside white America.

By changing the parking regulations thus, perhaps students who like to complain about the parking situation and those upset over the SGA vote on the multiculturalism initiative will finally be satisfied.

Would the initiative work? Probably not. It would only concentrate on the differences between cultures, rather than the differences that make us individuals and human.

Just like the class.

CAMPUS VIEWS

Should FHSU athletic teams pad their non-conference schedules?

Barry Wolf
Olathe, sophomore

"No. It gives them a feel for what the playoffs will be like, if any FHSU team makes it to the playoffs."

Jynette Nuss
Jetmore, senior

"No. To be the best, you have to beat the best."

Kale Schields
Goodland, graduate

"No. Playing weak opposition will not improve the team in the long run."

Ronnie Tenbrink
Wright, senior

"No, it will just make FHSU athletics better. It will prepare them if they make the playoffs."

Julie Smith

"The better opponents that FHSU plays, the better FHSU will be in the long run."

Shannon Goodnight
Burton, junior

"If they compete against people below them all the time, they won't get better."

Gabe Higgins
Marion, freshman

"No. You can't just detour from the large opponents, you have to nail them head on."

Travis Vaughn
Rexford, sophomore

"No. But I think playing KU is a little out of our reach."

Laugh all you want, but when life is at its toughest, sometimes all you have to do is

STOP!

and listen to the salad dressing

Scott Mullen

University Leader

The salad dressing speaks to me. My friends laugh when I tell them this. My family is humiliated. But I know the truth. The salad dressing speaks to me, and I listen.

It happened one September. I'd been working at a restaurant—pushing over 40 hours a week. While I liked it, a part of me detested the waiter job, always smiling. I felt like a hooker for pancakes.

I'd been able to juggle work, school and friends for the first couple months, but I was beginning to lose balance. My unicycle wasn't going to support me much longer.

I ignored my social life. I ignored my studies. I ignored the Muse's call to be creative. All that seemed important was making that almighty buck.

I lost touch with my dreams. So instead, my dreams got in touch with me.

Time-Life book commercials?

I waved off the feeling of indigestion and tried to fill up the salad bowl again. But I couldn't.

My eyes grew wide as I stared at the salad dressing vats before me—Ranch, Blue Cheese, Italian. All the favorites. Even a low-fat French.

I saw my reflection in those sweetened sauces. There I was—dressed in a smelly, damp, revolting outfit even Pee Wee Herman wouldn't be caught dead in. I'd become a slave to travelers from Missouri. A slave to that time clock. A slave to that schedule that

But what about the responsibility to myself? "Get out..." A voice—somewhere—said to me.

The salad dressing was gurgling, its oils bubbling, its smell foul.

"But I can't," I muttered, reaching for the salad bowl a third time.

But I couldn't do it. I tried. I made salad after salad, but every time I put on the wrong kind of salad dressing. I went against the orders of what my customers wanted to eat... just as I was going against the orders of what my heart wanted me to do.

I gasped, "I can't just leave!" "Why not?" The Thousand Island dressing asked.

"I have customers to attend to. Walking out would be the immature thing to do."

Dorothy Lynch laughed at me.

"And you call wearing a Ronald McDonald clown suit mature? If you don't get out now, you never will. Someone will talk you back into staying, into working another shift. They always have before. And you'll be right back to where you started: nowhere."

I stood up and realized what I had to do. Untying my apron strings—strings which had tied me down for too long—I waved good-bye to my manager.

"Is this a walk-out, Mr. Mullen?" he yelled. I didn't answer. All I could do was walk out the back exit door. The autumn wind blasted against my face as the stench of that god-awful place left me.

And I was scared.

It was crazy! Leaving a job without giving notice. Taking the chance to flee into the night while everyone was still watching. I didn't have a job anymore. I didn't have much money. All I had was a dream.

But that was enough.

It's frightening to leave something you don't like, especially when it's a job. Some people think you have to suffer to make money, but that's preposterous. Since the time I left the restaurant, I found jobs with better hours, better pay, and much better working conditions.

There is a better life out there. You just have to find it. Sometimes, the search is the easy part. It's leaving the bad circumstances that's tricky. Because that's when you lay the most important thing on the line: yourself.

And you do control your destiny. It's your choice whether to change the channel or not.

Often you need a little help to do this. Maybe through God. Or the advice of friends.

For me, it was the inspirational ingredients of the Italian salad dressing.

Don't underestimate the power of salad dressing. It just might save your life...and your dreams.

I remember the night well. The restaurant was understaffed, but I was doing a pretty good job of keeping on top of things — Making drinks, taking orders, fighting with cooks as they tried to serve road-kill in place of double cheeseburgers. It was a typical night's work.

Walking up to a table, an older couple ordered dinners and the side-salads that came with them. I smiled and went into the kitchen to make their garden appetizers.

And that's when it happened.

I stopped suddenly. The glass salad bowl dropped from my hands as I tried to fill it up with lettuce. I couldn't move. Was this the prelude to a heart-attack? Was someone in my family being hit by a car, like in all those just kept screaming: "Work! Work! Work!" "Scott, you have three at table one!" my manager shouted.

But I couldn't take my eyes off the salad dressing. What was I doing with this moment in my life? What happened if God struck me down right now and the last thing I saw was a bunch of wilted lettuce? What would be engraved on my tombstone: "Scott Mullen: grand maker of the dinner salad?"

I didn't want that.

"Hey, when are you going to get your order out of my window? I have food dying up here!" the cook yelled.

The tables were piling up. My customers were growing antsy. I had responsibilities to meet.

FORUM

'Minority' student an 'American,' not just data

Dear Editor:

Thanks to Matt Larsen, Ellinwood sophomore, and Mark Dolezal, Hays senior, my name is in the paper again. Their response to my writing on the December 1st issue compelled me to write again.

The stereotypes I was talking about are general and I will explain some of them based on my own experiences.

I was born and raised in Mexico, but had to relocate ten years ago to southwest Kansas. This move made me an immigrant. The media portrays immigrants as undesirable and their children as the cause of most economic problems.

This is a wrong preconception and my case is typical of most immigrants. By moving to the United States, I did not take anybody's job or come to ask for handouts. I contributed to the economy in various ways.

For more than five years, as an illegal alien, I worked without the benefits of income tax returns. My children had food and health insurance because I worked very hard. I bought my first home with the sweat of my brow.

To better my future, I decided to enroll in college. Now, I'm in my senior year. Am I a pariah? No. I love this country maybe more than a lot of people do.

Since I was born in Mexico, I am called Hispanic. This is just a label that the government put on me for data purposes. I do not appreciate labels. They may call me Hispanic-American, Native-American or Mexican-American, but above all I'd rather be called Human.

Geographically, America includes not only United States and Canada, but extends from the Rio Grande all the way to the southern tip of South America, plus some Caribbean islands. I believe that anybody who pays taxes and is making a decent living here is American.

I am a foreigner because I am from Mexico, right? Not really. History tells me that my ancestors, the Mayas, were on this continent since 500 B.C. The Southwest border states were Spain's settlements once and people spoke Spanish before even the Mayflower brought the English language to the continent.

I have been accused of being a left-wing elitist, but I only express my opinions based on personal experiences. I don't believe conservatives are racists, but I have seen many people criege on my face because I don't look or talk like they do. The only friendly people I have encountered in Hays are those who have traveled or who know my language.

Minority is another one of my labels, but I have to say the bad news: This will no longer be true and I hope I don't scare people by saying so. The passing of the NAFTA and GATT bills tell me that United States is becoming more pluralist and that is the good news.

I believe Multiculturalism is alive and kicking as long as universities keep attracting exchange students — thus benefitting from the high tuitions they charge them — and the so-called minorities continue to fill the halls of higher education.

Matt and Mark are right about the course Multiculturalism. A class will not help people get rid of xenocentric attitudes, but rather the exposure to other cultures. Here at FHSU, students have plenty of opportunities to interact with other cultures. I suggest that whenever you see ethnic persons, instead of turning your nose up, at least give them a smile. A friendly gesture is all they need.

By the way, I am a conservative Republican, but I get a rush when I hear some commentators portray my people as lazy and ignorant.

Wildlife artists sought for competition

Rupananda Misra

University Leader

The Kansas Wildlife Art Council, based at Fort Hays State, is inviting artists from around the world to submit entries for its annual competition.

"The subject for this year is a duck called the Blue-winged Teal. The winning artist will receive $3000. The last date for submitting entries is June 1, 1995," Gregory Liggett, paleontologist and Sternberg Museum assistant, said.

Liggett said every year the council sponsors an art competition and selects a work that is of the finest craftsmanship and best represents the wildlife of Kansas.

"The purpose of this competition is to develop, promote and preserve Kansas wildlife, wildlife art and wildlife education," he said.

The council reproduces the winning painting each year as a limited edition, four-color print. The artist signs and numbers the prints, the sales of which support the program, according to a press release.

Prints of all the winning entries are available for purchase through Sternberg Museum. Individual prints are $100 each.

Powers said the council looks for high quality craftsmanship and composition sophistication. The council will also consider how well the artist has handled the media.

"They (artists) could use a variety of painting media like transparent water color, acrylic or other opaque media," he said.

He said the beauty of the challenge is that "it is not a predetermined result."

He explained some artists may paint the bird flying or sitting in the water. All compositions are different.

Band to present Christmas concert

Rebecca Alstrup

University Leader

The Fort Hays State Band will perform a free Christmas concert at 4 p.m. Thursday in the Beach/Schmidt Performing Arts Center.

Jeff Hinton, instructor of music, said, "This will be an open door concert that is very casual. This is just our Christmas offering to the campus, and a way for us to bring the semester to a close."

There will be four different selections performed.

The band will play a collection of traditional holiday tunes called

"Green Sleeves" arranged by Alfred Reed. They will then play Gustav Holst's second suite.

"We will close out the concert with 'A Rhapsody on Christmas Carols.' Three of these are multi-movements," Hinton said.

He said it is hard to keep a good group going because they start over each year.

Hinton said, "This is a strong group. I think overall it is the strongest group since I have been here. Every year you kind of start from scratch again because every group has its own personality."

Concert

gift to the community, it is free. It is a great program and a great tradition.

"The people come and support us throughout the year, and we turn around and give a concert back to them at the end of the year at Christmas."

Murphy said that in past concerts, people have had to stand in the back.

People arrive early to get seats.

Murphy said, "It is for everyone in the community that wants to come. I know of people who have come from as far away as the Wichita area to the concert."

"This is all aimed at the holiday season," he said. "We are pleased to offer this to the community."

Grapplers go 1-1 in first dual of season

Kerschen takes third in open

Cade Garreits
University Leader

The Fort Hays wrestlers are now one-third of the way through their grueling season as they finished both the Southern Colorado/Missouri Valley Double Dual and the Fort Hays State Open this weekend.

Coach Bob Smith had an intriguing, yet poignant, comment about these meets and the season in general.

"Our season is like a boxing match. There are seventeen rounds total, and we will have fought six of them before Christmas. We keep fighting through the rounds until nationals, and that's when we try to deliver the knock-out punch," he said.

FHSU finished 1-1 as a team at the double dual, winning 26-14 against Southern Colorado and losing 27-14 to Missouri Valley.

MVC also won out over Southern Colorado with a score of 27-17.

Individual results for the double dual were: 118 lbs- sophomore

FHSU also performed well at the open, with the varsity squad closing up the tourney with 19 wins and 17 losses.

Kerschen had an outstanding meet as he had his very first tournament placing ever, landing third with a record of 4-1 on the day.

Woody ended his placing streak this weekend, but he still had a sound meet, finishing with a record of 4-2 on the day.

Hull, another prominent FHSU wrestler, was added to the injury list this weekend when he damaged his ankle at the open. Despite the injury, Hull finished with a record of 1-1.

Sophomore Ryan Jilka, who has been out for weeks due to an injury, is also expected to return to the mat after the break.

Other individual results from the FHSU Open: 118 lbs- Bickley (2-2), junior Mike Ewalt (1-2).

Tiger fans to 'Pack the House' tomorrow

Ryan Buchanan
University Leader

One lucky Tiger fan could strike it rich at tomorrow's Washburn University basketball game, during "Pack the House Night" at Gross Memorial Coliseum.

The jackpot will contain $1 for every person in attendance, with a minimum of $2000.

The Fort Hays State Athletic department's expected attendance is 5,000.

Every person who comes through the gate will receive a ticket and the winner will be drawn at the conclusion of the game.

"Pack the House" is sponsored by the FHSU Athletic Department, in cooperation with, KJLS Radio, 107 W. 13th, Harries Motor Company Inc., 100 6th, Wakeeney and Hawk's Bar and Grill, 113th Centennial Center.

The FHSU Athletic Department is expecting a large crowd and long ticket lines, so students are urged to pick up their tickets early at the Memorial Union student service center.

The game will feature the undefeated and sixth ranked Tigers versus the 4-1 Ichabods who are ranked fourth in the nation.

Last year, Washburn took second place in the NCAA Division II National Tournament.

The meager attendance at FHSU basketball games in the past few years spurred the development of "Pack the House."

"I think our student turn-out has been good this year. I think what has really been disappointing is our community support," Sports Information Director Jack Kuestermeyer said.

Fans can expect to see a good basketball game as the Tigers face longtime rival Washburn.

"We decided to have it for this game, because we knew Washburn would be our big draw this year. We wanted to have it for our best game, and Washburn is our best game," Kuestermeyer said.

Coach Gary Garner said this year's team also seems to interact with the large crowd and also responds to crowd reaction.

"I think the more people there are in the stands, the more it helps you. I think this team really reacts to the crowd," Coach Gary Garner said.

Kuestermeyer said there is no better time than now for fans to begin coming to FHSU games.

"I don't know what else we can do to get people here. We've got the highest scoring team and the most exciting team in the history of the school," he said.

"People say they want slam dunks, and fast-paced exciting basketball, and that's what this team does."

This is everything you want in a team to watch," Kuestermeyer said.

Tigers down Pittsburg State, face Washburn tomorrow

Ryan Buchanan
University Leader

After downing Pittsburg State, 97-91, Saturday, the Fort Hays State basketball team is set to face Washburn University.

Tip-off is set for 7:30 p.m. at Gross Memorial Coliseum.

Washburn enters the contest with a record of 4-1 after being upset by Tabor College, 91-90, Friday night.

The Tigers are currently undefeated at 5-0.

Sports Illustrated ranks Washburn fourth in the nation and FHSU sixth.

"Every college has a rivalry or two and Washburn's one of ours."

"There will be a lot of people here and Washburn's going to be fired up. We're going to be ready emotionally."

It's kind of what college basketball is all about," Coach Gary Garner said.

Washburn returns four starters from last year's team that took second place in the NCAA Division II National Tournament.

"Washburn's just a really good basketball game. They're starting four seniors and one junior, so they're a very experienced team," Garner said.

Garner said this game is an important one, but it will not be crucial to the Tigers' success this season.

"I don't think any one game is going to be a turning point for us. I don't mean it's not important, but it will really be a good win for us if we can win," he said.

"It's going to be a big game, but it's still just one game. When we get to the middle of the conference season, people aren't going to look back and worry about whether we won our last game against Washburn," Garner said.

FHSU received some good news Saturday, when it became aware that junior Roy Lloyd is now eligible.

Lloyd could have played in the Pittsburg State game, but the team did not find out about his eligibility until they were already in Pittsburg.

Garner said Lloyd will be able to play tomorrow.

"Roy is a really good offensive player, and I think he'll help us out on the boards. Roy can score and I think he has really worked hard at getting better since he got here," he said.

Senior Jerry Dixon, who has been out for the first part of the season with a broken hand may also be ready for tomorrow's game, but is still very questionable.

In Saturday's game against Pittsburg State, the Tigers jumped to an early lead and by half-time led 48-36.

"I thought the first half we really played well. I thought our defense was really strong," Garner said.

"One of my concerns at half-time was that maybe we should have been up by 20 points, because we had played that well the first half," Garner said.

The Tigers came out with less intensity in the second half and by the 14:57 mark, Pittsburg State had rallied to tie the score at 53-53.

"Coming out the second half, we lost the intensity that we needed to have, but I think anytime you have a good lead, that's a natural reaction, Garner said.

"I think great teams have that killer instinct to play regardless of the score, and that's what we're trying to get across to our players," he said.

FHSU was able to regain control of the game, and kept control until the final buzzer sounded to take the 97-91 victory.

"Down deep I thought we never lost control of the basketball game," Garner said.

"Pittsburg State was really a good win for us. They're a really good team, a well-coached team, and a very good defensive team," Garner said.

"They were very emotional. We're the sixth ranked team in the nation, and there were some comments made about that."

"But they were really fired up. It was just a really hard fought game," Garner said.

Senior forward Dennis Edwards led the Tigers in scoring once again with 35 points.

Edwards also led FHSU in rebounds with 11.

Edwards is currently averaging 39.8 points and eight rebounds per game.

Three other Tigers scored in double figures.

Junior guard Kenneth Haywood racked up 18 points, including three three pointers.

Senior forward Steven McElvey also had 18 points and three three pointers.

Sophomore guard Geoff Eck scored 10 points, including three from three-point range.
