Schmeidler/Crites sweep elections

JANELLA MILDREXLER/University Leader

LaNette Schmeidler, Springfield, Va., senior, and Travis Crites, Idalia, Colo., sophomore, hold their composure after being announced the new president/vice-president.

Scott Aust
Editor in chief

LaNette Schmeidler and Travis Crites have been elected president and vice president respectively of the Student Government Association for the 1995-96 school year. Their term will begin June 1.

The Schmeidler/Crites ticket defeated the Duane Simpson/Trevor Steinert ticket, 426 votes to 266 votes.

"First, we'd like to thank the students. We'd like to thank them for voting and participating. A 16 percent turnout is definitely higher than it was before," Schmeidler said.

Current SGA president Audrey Nogle said 711 students voted in this week's election which translated into 16 percent of the student body.

"It's an improvement," Nogle said, "I was pleased."

Nogle said voter turnout was up 4 percent from last year and was also 4 percent short of the goal Nogle and her running mate, Phil Covington, set at the beginning of the year.

"Obviously, if we've been elected, we're here to serve. That was brought out in our campaign and that's what we want to do," Schmeidler said.

She said the team is here to serve the students.

"With that, we encourage anybody with any questions to contact us," she said.

Schmeidler said the first thing they want to do is promote unity on campus.

"That can begin immediately by talking with students and getting some feedback before the summer," she said.

Schmeidler said she will be in Hays over the summer getting people involved in university wide committees. She said she wants to get a jump on this process by beginning in May.

Schmeidler said she thought the biggest factor in her and Crites' winning campaign was "promising deliverable things."

"Travis and I felt we were very sincere in what we had to offer. We fought from an experience point of view, and we're students. First of all, we're students, and that's our approach," Schmeidler said.

In other election news, both constitutional amendments on the ballot passed by large margins.

Amendment 1, which would create three new senate seats for freshmen, passed with 516 voting yes, 139 voting no and 24 undecided.

Amendment 2, which would change the wording of certain phrases in the constitution, passed with 480 voting yes, 96 voting no and 92 undecided.

For complete election results, see page five.

AIDS Memorial Quilt will be displayed at FHSU

Scott Aust
Editor in chief

A portion of the AIDS Memorial Quilt will be displayed at Fort Hays State next fall. President Edward Hammond announced yesterday.

The NAMES Project Foundation in San Francisco has given approval for 888 three-foot by six-foot panels to be displayed in Gross Memorial Coliseum Sept. 21-24. Each panel commemorates the life of someone who has died of AIDS.

Hammond said, "We believe (this event) is going to be critical and important not only for the university but also for western Kansas."

The AIDS Memorial Quilt aims to help bring an end to the AIDS epidemic by providing a means for remembrance and healing, illustrating the enormity of the epidemic, increasing public awareness, assisting with HIV prevention education, and raising funds for community-based service organizations, according to a press release.

"I'm very pleased to join with community members, students and members of our staff who worked so hard to bring this quilt to Kansas and western Kansas," Hammond said.

Hammond thanked Patti Scott, director of student health, and IB Dent, director of the University Activities Board, for their work in bringing the Quilt to Hays.

"I think the quilt's display here is going to be an eye-opening experience for our students, faculty and staff," Hammond said.

Hammond said there will be a lot of local interest in the quilt as several families in western Kansas have expressed a desire to bring their own sections of quilt as part of this event.

According to the Kansas Department of Health and Environment, as of Dec. 31, 1994, Kansas had 1,304 reported cases of AIDS. A recent study by the Kansas Hospital Association indicated northwest Kansas has the third highest rate of HIV/AIDS in the state. Southwest Kansas has the highest rate.

Presidential candidate Dole arrives at Hays airport

Mark J. Dolezal
Circulation manager

GOP presidential hopeful, Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kan., arrived at the Hays Municipal Airport at 6:12 p.m. yesterday to a crowd of approximately 30 onlookers and supporters.

Dole, who announced his third bid for the Republican presidential nomination Monday in Topeka, is winding up a whirlwind announcement tour with a visit to Russell.

Dole did not answer questions from the press, but he and his wife, Elizabeth, did mingle with the crowd and shake hands for about 15 minutes before departing for Russell, his home town. While there, he will be staying at his boyhood home.

Tomorrow a pancake breakfast will be held from 8 to 11 a.m. in Russell's Memorial Park. Dole will address the crowd after he finishes dedicating a monument honoring him in front of the VFW building in Russell.

After the pancake breakfast, Dole will attend a community Good Friday service at the Otterbein United Methodist Church.

Dole will be taping an appearance on NBC's Meet the Press Saturday in the Ruppenthal Middle School. After the taping, Dole will fly back to Washington.

Also on hand at the Hays Municipal Airport were 25-30 reporters and photographers from local and national media outlets.

Lisa Meyers, of NBC's Meet the Press, arrived on the press plane which preceded Dole's plane by about 10 minutes.

Meyers said that although this was her first trip to Hays and Russell, the small town atmosphere brought back girlhood memories.

"I grew up in a town very much like Russell, a little tiny town called Webb City in Southwest Missouri," Meyers said.

Dave and Joan Brown and their three kids were on hand to catch a glimpse of the Doles and to wish him good luck.

"We've always liked Sen. Dole," Joan said.

When asked what advice she would give to Dole, Joan said that she hoped Dole would strive to pass as much of the Contract with America as possible in the Senate.

"I hope that the Senate will be able to complete what the House of Representatives has started," Joan said.

Over all the Browns were optimistic about the GOP's chances in the 1996 presidential election.

"I think that Republicans have a lot of good choices (in 1996)," Joan said.

TRAVIS MORISSE/University Leader

Presidential candidate Senator Bob Dole (R-Kans.) gives the crowd the thumbs up sign after arriving yesterday evening at the Hays Municipal Airport, accompanying him is his wife Elizabeth. Dole is announcing his bid for President in Russell today.

Not all were on hand to wish Dole good luck in his presidential aspirations. Marian Shapiro, director of education for Planned Parenthood of Kansas, wished to stress continued federal AIDS funding to the Senate majority leader.

"I'm here to encourage Dole, who has spoken out very courageously about his prostate cancer, to remember AIDS," Shapiro said.

"I think that it is so important that politicians realize that it is good hometown people who are losing their sons and daughters to this disease."

Man's body found in Kansas River

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) A man's body was found in the Kansas River near an area closely searched for a missing Wamego man, authorities said.

The body was found about 6:30 p.m. Friday by people hunting mushrooms about a mile south of this eastern Kansas city, said Sgt. Joe Stech of the Riley County Sheriff's Department.

The body was that of a black man about 30 years of age, Stech said. An autopsy was planned to determine cause of death and to try to identify the body, he said.

It was found about a quarter-mile from an area authorities have searched for Aaron Williams, 31, of Wamego. Williams, a black man, was reported missing March 29. The search was prompted by the discovery of his blood-stained vehicle.

Legislation prohibits exchange of firearms

WASHINGTON (AP) District of Columbia Council Chairman David Clarke introduced legislation Wednesday to prohibit the exchange of firearms, ammunition and ammo clips between D.C. police and a major gun manufacturer.

Under a program proposed by gun maker Glock, Inc., police would exchange their present 9 mm service pistols and ammunition clips for new guns.

Clarke didn't like that idea, saying it would make a large number of high capacity ammunition clips available for sale to the public.

The 1994 federal assault weapons ban prohibits the manufacture and sale to the public of clips that hold more than ten rounds. However, high-capacity ammunition clips obtained from D.C. police could be sold to the public as long as they were made before 1994.

"The Metropolitan Police Department is potentially being used by a major gun manufacturer to circumvent the intent of the federal assault weapons ban," Clarke said.

The proposed exchange would have the effect of increasing the number of assault weapons available to the general public, "including the streets of the District of Columbia, where such assault weapons might be used by criminals against our own citizens and police officers," Clarke said.

Clarke's bill would permit the department's old guns to be either destroyed or transferred to other law enforcement agencies.

Students protest new gay literature course

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) Religious student groups are protesting a new gay literature course at the state university, arguing that it violates their traditional values and promotes homosexuality.

Eliezer Sepulveda, the spokesman for student protesters at the Cayey Campus of the University of Puerto Rico, said this week that they worried the course "shows only a pro-gay point of view" and eventually could become required for obtaining a degree.

"Gay and Lesbian Narratives" is being offered next semester in the English department.

The Puerto Rican Association of University Professors on Tuesday approved a resolution defending the course, arguing it will help expand students' cultural horizons.

Spokesman Professor Rafael Bernabe said gay literature classes, like courses in black and feminist literature, strive to bring to light the work of groups previously condemned to obscurity.

Roman Catholic Cardinal Luis Aponte Martinez, the U.S. commonwealth's top Catholic leader, did not object to the course but urged the university to create a religious literature course as well.

Residents charged with selling drugs

Mark J. Dolezal
Circulation manager

Fourteen Hays residents were arrested and charged in Ellis County District Court with selling drugs.

Ellis County Attorney Glenn Braun said the arrests were part of a year long operation that was undertaken by the Kansas Bureau of Investigation and the Ellis County Drug Enforcement Unit.

"(The investigation) involved one K.B.I. undercover agent who worked over the course of a year along with the Ellis County Drug Enforcement Unit," said Braun.

The Hays Police Department and the Ellis County Sheriff helped execute the arrest warrants for the 14.

According to a news release issued by the County Attorney's office, the drugs involved included cocaine, methamphetamine, marijuana and psilocybin mushrooms.

Among the 14 arrested was a 30-year-old student of Fort Hays State University, Charles Proffitt, Hays freshman.

Proffitt, who resides at 413 W. 8th, was charged with two counts of selling marijuana and two counts of selling marijuana without a tax stamp.

Besides Proffitt, the following individuals were also arrested:

Volunteers needed to help with displaying of AIDS quilt

Scott Aust
Editor in chief

Displaying the AIDS quilt in Gross Memorial Coliseum Sept. 21-24 will take the efforts of about 1,000 volunteers, according to Patti Scott, director of the student health center at Fort Hays State.

"This is a big project," Scott said. "We will need lots of volunteers."

People interested can volunteer in many different ways. Some of the responsibilities include:

• Set up: Help set up the display; carry boxes to set up sites; unpack; lay out panels; set up merchandise area; move tables and chairs, etc. It involves a great deal of physical labor and the ability to follow directions and work quickly. (No clothing restrictions.)

• Quilt Monitors: Watch over an assigned area of the quilt during the display. Answer general information questions about the display and make sure the quilt is not harmed. Offer tissues, a hug or other assistance for guests. (Should wear white.)

• Information Table: Answer questions and help visitors find specific areas. (White clothing suggested but not required.)

• Emotional Support: Should be a licensed clinical social worker, a licensed psychologist, a psychiatrist, or registered nurse. (White clothing suggested but not required.)

• Merchandise: Help sell NAMES

Project merchandise. (White clothing suggested but not required.)

• Greeters: Welcome visitors, count number of visitors, monitor staff donation bins, and thank visitors for attending. (White clothing suggested.)

• Volunteer Check In: Assist the Volunteer Coordinators in checking in volunteers reporting for duty and directing them to their assignments. (White clothing suggested but not required.)

• Panel Check In: Must be persons capable of dealing with sensitive and emotional situations. Each shift will include a professional trained in emotional support issues. (White clothing suggested.)

• Break Down: Help pack the quilt and display materials for shipment back to San Francisco. Return the display facility to its normal state. The move involves physical labor. (No clothing restrictions.)

Anyone may call Ellie at (913) 628-4293 to volunteer or make a donation.

How do kids celebrate...

Easter?

The pleasant weather and the beautiful flowers are a sure sign that spring has sprung.

Over at the Tiger Tots Nurtury Center, bunnies and colorful eggs have sprung up as well, in preparation for Easter.

I thought it would be interesting to see this season through the eyes of the innocent, so I asked several children at Tiger Tots what they thought Easter was about.

Three-year-old Cortney Steinert replied, "The Easter Bunny brings eggs and stuff."

"Bunnies hide eggs," chipped in Jessica Mick, age 5, "and I got new clothes at Wal-Mart."

Craig Bates disagreed. "When I was a little kid, the Easter Bunny brought me some toys. He don't bring clothes."

How were they planning to celebrate Easter?

Donovan Schwarz, age 4, gets pink, chocolate eggs, "and purple and orange. I'm going to ask my mom if I can go on an Easter egg hunt."

Five-year-old Pat Glaze thought that was the right idea. "You got to get eggs. 16 of them."

James North had already gone on an Easter egg hunt, "with some big kids. I had one person with me and I find 2 eggs. An orange egg and a white egg."

As the children continued to make their bunny baskets covered in cotton balls, I posed my final question: "Why do we do these things?"

"Because the teachers tell us to," was Cortney's logical answer.

However, it was Kali Bogart, age 4, who, with an exasperated sigh, gave me the best reason.

"Cuz it's Easter!"

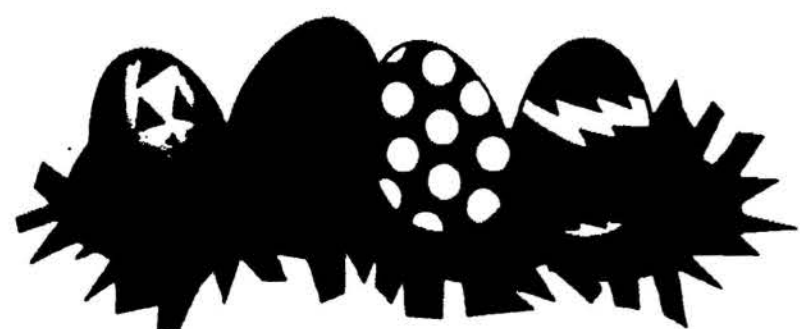

Above: Kali Bogart, 4, daughter of Lori DeBoer, admires the bunny basket she made for Easter.

Top: Sarah Gist, 4, concentrates on putting together her bunny basket.

The bunnies on the door were made completely out of egg shapes. The bunny baskets were covered with cotton balls and were filled with little yellow chicks.

From the editor's desk...

Yesterday, a press conference was held to announce the plans for Fort Hays State to host the AIDS Quilt for a couple of days in September (See related stories, p.1 and p.2).

The Quilt is usually associated directly with the horrible disease, AIDS.

In reality, hosting the Quilt may cause some controversy on campus and in the community of Hays.

Despite the facts, AIDS is not a "gay disease." Regardless, people still see AIDS as a "filthy" illness that God created to punish homosexuals.

But despite, God's reasoning for creating such a horrible disease, the assumptions are still present.

The Quilt does not represent the disease itself, but those lives that it claimed.

In spite of how the victims contracted AIDS, every person whose name appears on the Quilt was a human who was loved by someone.

When we see each name which has been lovingly embroidered into a quilt, the impact of AIDS may hit a little closer to home.

We, as students at FHSU, should feel fortunate to host such a megaphone declaring the impact of AIDS.

AIDS kills. But when a person sees the number of quilt blocks laid out on the floor of Gross Memorial Coliseum, the number of people that AIDS kills will become apparent.

Unfortunately, AIDS is present in Hays and should be present in our minds.

The Quilt will give people the opportunity to reflect upon the fact that soon, every one of us may recognize a name on the Quilt.

Support the Quilt.

A COMMON MISTAKE MADE BY FRESHMEN

And now, a word from our sponsor:

Tacky commercials cause loss of appetite

After having a rough day, I sat down to enjoy a hot slice of pizza while watching a little T.V.

As I was getting ready to take a bite of my pizza, a hemorrhoid commercial came on. You know, the one that talks about the pain and discomfort medicine designed especially for women.

My pizza no longer looked good.

This commercial, along with several others targeted for females, is tasteless and embarrassing.

Those "not so fresh feeling, private itch, and special 'wing' design" commercials really bother me, too.

Not only are those commercials somewhat humiliating and disgusting, they also reveal a bit of humor in the way they are displayed by making women look ridiculous.

There is nothing like cuddling with my boyfriend on the couch while watching a program, and then, during a commercial, a daughter asks her mother, "Mom, do you ever get that not so fresh feeling?"

Oh, come on! I wouldn't ask ANYONE this question. As I sit there on the couch, I think to myself, "How embarrassing and how dumb. Women don't really talk like this." I also wonder what my boyfriend is thinking (Not so fresh feeling? What's that?)

Another commercial that I watch in humiliation is one that shows a small group of ladies sitting in a powder-room discussing the "new models" available to help take care of that "not so fresh feeling."

Speaking for myself, and probably for other women, I would never sit around and talk about this with even my best friend. Honestly, we women don't just sit around talking about our "private problems" all day.

How about those "private itch" commercials? ("For that itch that is so private.") If this itch is so private, why do these companies and advertisers find it necessary to discuss it on television where millions of people are watching? Also, I personally DON'T CARE or want to hear about anyone's private itch.

I wonder if any of you have been keeping up with all of the modern technological designs available for women and their menstrual cycles? This is exciting.

Now, women have access to "wings" and "netting" (dry-weave). We can get any type of thickness, thinness, length, or curve. Wow!

Like buying clothes, women can shop for a small, medium, large, or extra-large design. How nice, but once again, how corny.

Females know, usually by the time they are about 10, that they will need these products (with or without wings) for most of their lives. I don't think it's necessary to display "these" on television.

It's interesting that I've never seen, as far as I can remember, a commercial about men talking about their "private problems" on T.V.

"Hey Bob, do you ever get an uncontrollable 'private itch' and don't know what to use...?" Seems a little stupid and potentially embarrassing for men, right?

These commercials, although they are a bit tacky, may be useful and helpful to some women. I know that advertising is a way to sell a product, but I believe there are a few products that could do without the advertisements.

Through advertising, I suppose most women become aware of what products they want and where they can find them. But take away those commercials, and women would still know what to do.

It is important to say that these commercials, and the "tasteless" manner in which they are displayed, do not exemplify the way most women act or talk everyday.

I think these commercials are tacky, distressing, and a bit revolting, and should be taken off the air to save women from any further humiliation.

Fellow student addresses writer's education concerns

Dear Editor:

Nothing personal between you and I Byron, but aren't you being a (expletive deleted) about this whole thing called school?

The professors here are not here to make life easier for you. Who gives a damn about your five papers you have to write and the five exams you have to study for? The professors are here to challenge you and the way you think.

Last year I was having the same problem as you, but I was a freshman. I felt like I would never use the knowledge I was gaining in class in an operative situation;

I changed my major.

Now, although, I may still sleep in class, I enjoy my classes all the more. My advice to you is to have enough initiative to change. Change how you are doing things, change majors, change your attitude, change your drawers, and get over it.

From the picture you have in the Leader, you look old enough to know life is not going to get any easier. Life is a game that people play, whether you win or lose is not by chance. Handle your business.

Mel's DINER

Dear Readers,

I'm having a hard time concentrating on my work with the beginning of this wonderful weather which is upon us. So for today, I've decided to focus on the good things in life, you know, the stuff you never see on the news or read in the paper.

In honor of spring, I'm giving you "Mel's 10 reasons to be outside rather than in class."

1. Barbecued burgers that are still raw in the middle.
2. Cheap cold beer
3. Babes in bikini tops
4. Babes in cut-off shorts
5. Babes who want to show their gratitude after you share your burgers and beer.
6. Motorcycle rides
7. Mud volleyball (of course with babes).
8. Fishing with buddies
9. More beer
10. For the simple fact: Who the hell wants to go to class on a sunny day?

Enjoy and Happy Easter!

Dear Mel,

My roommate is a slob, and I can't take it anymore. After he cooks, everything goes in the fridge only to turn into mold. The fridge looks like a forgotten science experiment. Whenever it is his turn to do dishes, they sit for days in the sink. The apartment is small so everything smells like rotten food.

He has a pretty big closet but continues to leave his clothes all over the house. I can't ever tell which ones are dirty or clean.

Mel, I'm not a clean freak. I just want a place where I'm not afraid to bring friends home to. What should I do?

Fed Up

Dear Fed Up,

I suggest you begin by setting some ground rules with your roommate. Tell him your problem and if he continues to ignore you, take matters into your own hand. Gather up all his dirty clothes and throw them into one big pile on his bedroom floor. Let him sort through the mess. If he continues to leave dirty dishes around the house, take them and place them on his bed. That will wake him up. But, if nothing works, I would begin looking for a new roommate.

Anyone who has a problem and would like Mel's advice should write to:

Forum scheduled to clarify functions of new student ID

Tammi Harris
Senate reporter

A forum to explain students' questions about the new student ID card will be at 1:30 p.m. on Wednesday in the Pioneer Room of the Memorial Union. Travis Crites, executive assistant, said at last night's Student Government Association meeting.

Crites said John Ross, director of the University Card Center, said he had heard students voice concerns about the student I.D. card.

"Students came in and voiced some different concerns. They were very concerned they would have to keep an account balance on the student I.D. debit card," Crites said.

He said the forum will be an informal session for students to ask questions about the ID debit card to clear up any questions.

SGA President Audrey Nogle addressed concerns about the Lewis Field renovation project.

"All of the proposed renovation costs, which are still $850,000, will be out of donations," she said.

No student money will be used, she said.

The renovations will include a press box, locker room, and a medical complex.

"Those things will not be built if we do not come up with enough money from donations. It's not going to come out of our pockets," Nogle said.

In other business:

Nogle said she received a letter from the provost.

Rodolfo Arevalo about the honors requirement.

The letter stated Arevalo "regretted SGA did not contact me prior to voting on this resolution and discussing the matter with me."

"His main difference with us is he wants to start the requirement in Fall of '95, our resolution says Fall of '96," she said.

Nogle said the legislature is suggesting student workers receive a 3.5 percent increase in student wages.

However, they have not made their final decisions and Nogle said she would keep SGA posted.

Sarah Young, director of legislative affairs, said the recession bill from the senate passed and includes $16 billion targeted for recession programs.

However, the House has a different idea. The House wants to allow $17 billion dollars targeted for the educational programs.

The House also suggested to add $100,000 to the state scholar program. However, when the senate saw this proposal, they increased the amount by $472,940.

With this amount, the students who are already receiving the scholarships can still receive it.

However, according to a press release, new scholarship applications will not be accepted.

However, "This is all an assumption. It still has to go through a conference committee (state level) for approval," according to the press release.

Two students were appointed to empty senate seats. Lisa Henry will be the new health senator, and Chris Starkey will be the new at-large senator.

Byron Cook, a 1974 FHSU graduate, is representing the NAMES Project Foundation as the Quilt Display Coordinator for the Hays event. Cook is executive director of the Shawnee County Medical Society, Topeka.

Cook said he was "honored" to be a part of this display.

"I think it's important that we bring the quilt and the message it has to western Kansas. AIDS is an equal opportunity disease," he said. "It doesn't care who you are."

Work on the Hays display began about a year ago according to Scott. She said the quilt in its entirety covers 17 football fields.

"As large as that seems to us, it only represents 12 percent of the people (in the United States) who have died from AIDS. It's pretty incredible," Scott said. Hammond said the Hays display will fill Gross Memorial.

Panels will be laid on the floor and will be hung from railings.

Scott presented a video tape which explained the origins of the Quilt.

The Quilt was conceived in 1985 by San Francisco gay activist, Cleve Jones.

Jones was inspired by a candlelight march in which people taped the names of friends and lovers who had died of AIDS to a building, giving it the appearance of a patchwork quilt.

Scott said individuals may create a Quilt panel in memory of a loved-one who has died from AIDS.

She also said she is available to make presentations about the project to community organizations.

"Hosting the Quilt, really does fit with the university's role as an institution of higher learning by advancing awareness and education of HIV and AIDS in our region.

"There's a myth that it doesn't cross Highway 81, and that's not true," he said.

Scott said the project will require about 1,000 volunteers during the display weekend and to serve on committees.

"This is a big project," Scott said.

Volunteers are needed to set up, break down and monitor the Quilt, serve at information tables, greet and give emotional support to public viewers, and check in other volunteers and new quilt panels.

See related story, page two, for information on volunteer responsibilities.

Any individual, business or organization may call Ellie Gabel at (913) 628-4293 to volunteer or make a donation.

RMAC adds six new members

Ryan Buchanan
Sports editor

The Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference is expanding to 15 teams, admitting six new members from the disbanded Colorado Athletic Conference.

It will be the second time the conference has expanded in as many years.

Entering the league will be Colorado Christian University, Metropolitan State College, Regis University, University of Colorado-Spring, University of Denver and University of Southern Colorado.

The six schools will join the conference beginning July 1, 1996.

Because the expansion will include such a large number of institutions, the conference will grow into a two-divisional league to aid in scheduling.

The University of Denver, who is considering a move to NCAA Division I in the near future, will join the RMAC as an affiliate member.

Denver will participate in the conference schedules, but will not be eligible for conference championships.

The expansion has generated excitement among the RMAC's current and new members alike.

"The excitement level among the current nine members of the RMAC is very high as we contemplate the many positive aspects of expanding the conference," Ray Cleft, Chair of the RMAC Presidents' Council said.

"With this expansion, the RMAC is going from being a respected nine member conference to one of the premiere NCAA Division II conferences in the country," he said.

The expansion increases the number of sports the RMAC can sponsor to 19.

The conference will add men's and women's soccer, men's and women's tennis and women's golf.

The Mile High Baseball and Softball leagues will also become RMAC sponsored sports.

The four core sports will be football or men's soccer, women's volleyball, men's basketball and women's basketball.

RMAC Commissioner Kurt Patberg said, "This expansion comes at a time when the strength in numbers theory is flourishing among collegiate conferences."

"The geographic location of the six new institutions was the driving force behind the growth. An obvious reduction in travel expenses occurs with this conference expansion. It also unites most of the Division II institutions in the region," Patberg said.

A potential increase in media attention for the RMAC could also be an added advantage of the expansion.

"It will enable the student athletes at all the member institutions to become better recognized by the public," Patberg said.

Patberg said the ease of covering one league in the region rather than two, will not only help the Colorado Schools, but bring added exposure to the institutions located in the outlying areas of the RMAC.

These schools would include Fort Hays State, Chadron State College, the University of Nebraska-Kearney and New Mexico Highlands University.

The sports of women's volleyball and men's and women's basketball will implement a two-divisional concept, but the details concerning divisional realignment in those three sports have yet to be ironed out.

Full scheduling is expected to be finalized during the 1995-96 academic year.

The current RMAC member institutions are Adams State College, Chadron State, Colorado School of Mines, FHSU, Mesa State College, Fort Lewis College, New Mexico Highlands, Nebraska-Kearney and Western State College.

FRED HUNT/University Leader

Tiger shortstop Brian Keck turns the double play during a double-header against the University of Nebraska-Kearney on Wednesday, April 5 at Larks Park. The team plays Colorado School of Mines at 1 p.m. today in Golden, Colo., to kick off a nine-game, 10-day road trip.

Tigers take hot bats to Colorado Mines

Ryan Buchanan
Sports editor

The Tiger baseball team hopes to continue its hot hitting on the road against Colorado School of Mines this weekend.

Fort Hays State will play a four-game series with the Orediggers, with doubleheaders beginning at 1 p.m. today and tomorrow in Golden, Colo.

Mines is currently struggling at 3-11 in Mile High Intercollegiate Baseball League action and is 6-17 overall.

The series marks the beginning of a 10-game road stretch for the Tigers in the next nine days.

"They have been very competitive in the games they have lost, which is what concerns me," Coach Curtis Hammeke said.

"They're a lot better than their record makes them out to be," he said.

Senior right-hander Brian Thurlow (4-1) and junior right-hander Curtis VonLintel (4-0) are the probable starting pitchers for today's games.

Senior right-hander Daniel Traffas (5-2) and junior right-hander Cesar Romero (0-1) are expected to start on the mound tomorrow.

The Tigers are currently second only to the University of Southern Colorado in league standings.

FHSU is 12-2 in the MHIBL and 24-9 overall compared to Southern Colorado's spotless 15-0 league record.

The Tigers have been off for four days, giving them time to let their bats cool off from last weekend's four-game sweep of Metropolitan State College.

"I think it was good for us to catch our breath and get our legs under us so we can push hard down the stretch," Hammeke said.

Hammeke hopes he can get the same type of hitting from his players as he did last weekend.

The Tigers have 10 players currently batting over .300.

Leading the way at the plate is junior shortstop Brian Keck who raised his batting average to .402 last week.

"It will be interesting to see if our hitting will carry over to the rest of the season," he said.

"We'd like for that to continue for the rest of the year to take some pressure off our pitching staff."

Junior center fielder Dionandre Josenberger was named Rawlings MHIBL Player of the Week for his performance in last weekend's series with Metro State.

Josenberger hit three home runs, drove in eight runs, stole six bases and had a .842 slugging percentage in the Tigers' five wins last week.

Josenberger has stolen 23 of 24 bases this season to lead the league.

Volleyball team signs sixth recruit of season

Ryan Buchanan
Sports editor

Jody Wise, head volleyball coach, has signed her sixth recruit of the season.

Outside hitter Amy Novak comes to Fort Hays State from Garden City Community College where she led her team in hitting last season.

Novak earned all-conference and all-region honors last season and was named Kansas Junior College Athlete of the Year.

As a freshman she was also named to the all-conference team and academic all-conference team.

Novak plans to major in elementary education at FHSU.

As a high school athlete in Holcomb, she earned all-state and all-league honors in volleyball and basketball.

Novak participated in both the Kansas Volleyball Association and Heart of America all-star volleyball games.

Wise's other in-state recruits are Nikki Basgall, Plainville senior; Christin Oakley, Hays High School senior; Kristin Johnson, FHSU freshman, who is currently a member of the Tiger track team.

Two out-of-state athletes have also signed with FHSU.

Palmer, Neb., senior Erin Etherton, and Alliance, Neb., senior Manda White round out the current FHSU signees.

FHSU hopes the new recruits will spark a come back from the 1994 season.

The Tigers will return from an 8-31 record in 1994, when they lost the last 21 matches of the season.

Royals fans call off boycott

Margaret Stafford
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) A threatened fan boycott of the Kansas City Royals opening game has been called off, after the team announced Wednesday that it would give away free general admission tickets for the first four games.

Team officials said tickets for the outfield seats would be distributed on a first-come, first-served basis. Fans would be able to get a maximum of four tickets.

The Royals open at home April 26 against Baltimore and then play three games against the New York Yankees.

"We were asking for something like this," said Kansas City Star columnist Jason Whitlock, who spearheaded the drive for an opening-day boycott. "We just wanted the Royals to make a statement to fans that they are appreciated, and that the Royals played a part in ruining the 1994 season. They showed they were willing to do something."

Whitlock, with help from radio personality Mike Murphy, had volunteered to organize a rally for disaffected fans somewhere outside Kauffman Stadium.

"All of us associated with the Royals and major league baseball recognize we have to make a special effort for our fans," Royals president Mike Herman said. "We think this is a great way to show our appreciation and get the season started."

Fans who already have general admission tickets can use them and receive a refund or use the tickets as rainchecks for another game. Fans who purchase a reserved ticket will receive a coupon for a free hot dog and soda.

Besides the strike, Royals' fans have watched the team trade outfielder Brian MacRae and Cy Young Award winner David Cone in order to reduce payroll.

"I think this shows that, used effectively, the system works," Whitlock said. "The people need to be heard by the higher-ups. Once they are heard, the higher-ups will respond. That's what happened here. The Royals did not respond to Jason Whitlock. They responded to the fans of Kansas City."
