ID resolution passes at SGA

Beth Norman
the university leader

Whether or not to give new students a random ID number was the hot topic at student senate last night.

Resolution number 96/F/104 was introduced as old business and was debated for several minutes.

The resolution states: "In the fall semester of 1997, new students shall be assigned a random identification number and faculty and staff shall take steps to prevent social security number lists from being exposed to students."

The resolution was proposed to keep students' Social Security numbers from being used for fraudulent purposes by others.

The idea to amend the issue to exclude random numbers in place of the social security number was debated and the motion failed. A discussion of the resolution as printed followed which was passed by a 15/14 vote.

The Senate also discussed resolution number 97/S/100, which appointed Jenna Winterberg to the office of Office of Legislative Affairs.

The motion was carried and adopted by unanimous consent.

Three Senators resigned their positions this week. SGA will meet at City Hall (Court House), 1204 Fort, Jan. 23 to discuss the Hays City Silver Scholarship. With no other business the Senate, adjourned.

On Tuesday, Faculty Senate met in the Pioneer Lounge. David Schmidt, Interim Director of Computing and Telecommunications Center, spoke about current projects, issues and services regarding the computing center.

Schmidt commented on the internet dialup project. Schmidt said that the server "appears to be very reliable." Schmidt also told senators that faculty can use Netscape gold for publishing World Wide Web pages.

A new class, BIO 655 Fisheries Management, was proposed and passed.

A resolution from SGA regarding the last date to withdraw from a class be moved to the Friday after midsemester has been sent to committee.

With no other business the Faculty Senate Adjourned.

McDonald's® names scholarship recipients

"Some people wait for the future. Some push it along. We don't have waiters." McDonald's® founder Ray Kroc said. Seven McDonald's® employees are pushing along their education with the assistance of the McDonald's® Employee Scholarship Program.

McDonald's® of Hays, Russell and WaKeeney has awarded scholarships to seven employees for attendance at Fort Hays State. Recipients for the 1997 Spring semester are Jeanne Flora, Tara Kramer, Travis Kreutzer, Cassandra Ormiston, Melissa Ormiston, Scott Schroeder and Janel Walters.

Flora, a freshman business major, is the daughter of Arlen Flora of Hays and Charlene Finley, Wichita. She is the swing manager at the NorthHays restaurant where she has been employed for two and a half years.

Kramer, a freshman undecided major, is the daughter of Jim and Luanne Kramer, Hays. She has been employed at McDonald's® of NorthHays for two and a half years where she is currently a Crew Trainer.

Kreutzer, a freshman accounting major, is the son of Frank and Vivian Kreutzer, Hays. He is a crew trainer at the NorthHays restaurant where he has worked for two and a half years.

Cassandra Ormiston, freshman accounting major, and Melissa Ormiston, senior accounting major, are the daughters of Melvin and Marilyn Ormiston. Cassandra has been a part of the McDonald's® of Hays team for six months after having been employed by McDonald's® of Pratt for two and a half years. Melissa is a swing manager at the NorthHays restaurant where she has been employed for three and a half years.

Schroeder, Haysville senior education major, is a crew member at the SouthHays restaurant. He has been employed there for three and a half years.

Walters, freshman psychology major, is the daughter of Gerald and Marge Walters of Hays. She is the crew trainer at the NorthHays restaurant where she has worked for two and a half years.

McDonald's® of Hays, Russell and WaKeeney established this scholarship fund through the FHSU Endowment Association to provide its employees with tuition assistance through a scholarship in addition to providing a source of income through productive employment. In its 12 semester, this fund has awarded over 52 scholarships totaling $19,500. The fund offers a renewable scholarship of $375 per semester without regard to financial need or other scholarship awards. Student maintaining eligibility may receive the award for up to 10 consecutive semesters based on the number of qualified applicants

Debate is No. 1

Christy J. Briggs
the university leader

Currently, the Fort Hays State Tiger Debate Squad is ranked ninth in the nation out of over 300 debate schools in the state.

"To me, the more exciting thing than being ranked ninth in the country, which of course is great, is being ranked first in the state," Eric Krug, assistant professor of communication and head debate coach, said.

Previously there were two different kinds of debate, NDT (National Debate Tournament) and CEDA (Cross Examination Debate Association), but this year the two were combined.

Some of the larger schools were in one kind and some of the larger schools with the smaller schools were in the other kind.

"Now there's just one division no matter what school you come from — schools as small as Southwestern College or Fort Hays to as big as the University of Kansas or UCLA or Lake Forest."

"We're debating in the same division," Krug said. The ranks are as follows:

1 — Southern Illinois
2 — West Point
3 — Michigan State
4 — University of Alabama
5 — University of Vermont
6 — Cornell University
7 — Emory University
8 — FHSU
9 — Weber State University

The ranks for the other Kansas schools are

10 — Kansas State University
11 — University of Kansas
12 — Emporia State University
13 — Wichita State University
14 — Washburn University

"A few years ago, Fort Hays wasn't the best program in the state, K-State, Emporia State and KU were a little bit better, but in the last two-and-a-half years we've been able to turn that around."

"Now we're the best program in the state and it's helped recruiting — Recruiting seems to be pretty easy when you're the best program in the state," Krug said.

Josef Boyle, Houston graduate and assistant debate coach, feels that the squad will move up in the rankings "I think we can do a lot better in the second semester, especially considering that we've worked consistently throughout the Christmas break. So we've done a lot of preparation for upcoming tournaments and I think we're prepared to move up in the rankings," he said.

University Relations staff receives CASE awards for graphics, writing

Mary Ridgway, graphic artist, James Pelz, Hays senior, and Ellen Pranno, assistant director of University Relations, were honored by the District VI Council for the Advancement and Support of Education for specialty items and science/technical research writing.

Laurie Bean
the university leader

The University Relations office has reason to believe the new year is off to a great new beginning. Next week Bob Lowen, director of University Relations, will travel to Kansas City, Mo., to pick up three awards for the department.

The awards are recognition from the District VI Council for the Advancement and Support of Education (CASE). Two awards for artistic design of specialty items and one award for science/technical research writing will be presented.

The three awards went to Mary Ridgway, graphic designer in the university relations office, Ellen Pranno, assistant director of University Relations, and James Pelz, student graphic designer in the University Relations office.

Hays senior Ridgway will receive a bronze award for her license tag design.

The design displays FHSU in gold lettering against a black background. A gold modernized tiger mascot leaps across the lettering.

The design was done for the Alumni Association to give to the new freshman. Ridgway said.

"We wanted to come up with something that didn't look like clip art or the 1960s," Ridgway said.

The university will give the tags to freshman orientation.

According to Pranno, a spokesperson for the Memorial Union Bookstore the tags are currently on sale for $5.75.

Pranno will receive a bronze award for a feature story covering work done by the FHSU. Geneva Herndon Speech Language Hearing Clinic.

The article focused on Dr. Charles Wilhelm's, professor of communication disorders, work with vocal cord disorders and exercise-induced asthma at the clinic.

The story was published in the June 1996 issue of the FHSU Alumni News.

It was also published in the Hays Daily News, the Great Bend Tribune, the Russell Daily News and other newspapers throughout western Kansas, according to a press release.

Pelz will receive a silver award for a t-shirt design he created.

According to Pelz, the design consists of a basketball player and a football player with FHSU's winning season records in the respective sports. The image was yellow printed in a green shirt.

The shirts were available to freshmen at the fall 1996 and spring 1997 orientations.

Lowen said the department creates a different shirt theme every semester.

Pelz was the first to apply for the position. He's received this award. He's thankful for the honor and the staff.

"It's something I'm fortunate enough to have helped create," Pelz said.

Lowen said that the awards are a nice motivation reward for the staff.

It makes us feel like a good team and it makes us look good.

As a result, the staff is proud of the annual CASE District VI meeting in Kansas City, Mo. Jan. 19-22.

Leadership conference set

Fort Hays State will offer its fourth annual Leadership Conference called, "Effective Strategies for the Changing Workplace — Improving Organizational Performance," Jan. 23 and Jan. 24, at the Holiday Inn, Hays.

The conference provides seven sessions to benefit current or emerging leaders in the areas of business, education, government, industry or community service. Participants will gain a better understanding of leadership as well as useful skills and strategies to implement positive change within your organization, and learn to apply the knowledge in practical action.

Jan. 23 will feature Curt Brungardt, director of Leadership Studies, presenting "Change Mastery: The Key Leadership Skill"; Kyle Ermoian, general manager, KJLS Radio, presenting "The Human Side of Coping with Change"; Charles Leftwich, dean of the College of Education, presenting "Trust: Getting There." The afternoon will include Steve Nolte, executive director, Educational Development Center, presenting, "Dilbertizing Leadership" and Joe Potts, instructor of leadership studies, presenting "The Power of Followership."

Jan. 24 features Rock Moore and Mahmoud Suleiman, assistant professors of teacher education, presenting "Managing Diversity in the 21st Century," and Lisa Heath, assistant vice president for student affairs, presenting "A Top 10 List for Organizational Success," followed by closing remarks at noon.

The conference is sponsored by the offices of leadership studies and continuing education and the department of educational administration and counseling.

A $75 registration fee, which includes conference materials, lunch and a continental breakfast, is due by Jan. 17. Participants may receive college credit for an additional fee.

For more information, call Nicole Louis, conference coordinator, at the Office of Leadership Studies at (913) 628-4303.

Proposed rally brings opinions together

Battle of the sexes, on hold for a change

On Jan. 18, the Ku Klux Klan planned to have a rally in Salina to protest the observance of Martin Luther King Jr. Day. Even though it was postponed it still brings several questions to mind pertaining to the rally.

Why were they bothering to protest?

What did they hope to gain?

Why would such "hate mongers" be allowed to assemble and offend other peaceable people?

Who would have listened?

They protest for the same reason any group does. Simply for the attention it would bring.

The KKK wants to bring itself into the light of day and attempt to legitimize what is and what it does. The only people who would listen to what the group has to say are people who are already lost to its way of thinking. Anyone who would be swayed to its philosophy would only be listening to what the members have to tell them. They would not investigate for themselves and see what the KKK have already proven themselves to be.

The KKK says they want to protest government involvement in "social engineering," or integration which King helped to promote.

In the Jan. 9 issue of The Hutchinson News Rachel Pendergraft, KKK spokesperson said, "We feel it's a slap in the face to every white Christian person in the country that a well-established communist should have a holiday in this country. If he was a white man and he was a communist, we would still be against the holiday."

At first glance this is a simple statement which seems to deny the group's history of racism and hate. However, it really shows what the group stands for when they use terminology like "white Christian person," to define who they represent. With this the KKK shows the narrow range of people they represent.

The article also quoted T. Ray McJunkins, a black minister at the St. John's Missionary Baptist Church in Salina. He said, "Our city council seems to me, to be endorsing racism by letting a racist group assemble in our city."

I can understand why McJunkins is upset by the rally but I have to disagree with his comment because the city did what it had to do.

Under the First Amendment every one of us has the right to our views and the right to express those views peacefully.

Larry Flint, publisher of Hustler magazine said it best when he said, "If the First Amendment will protect a scumbag like me it will protect all of you. Because I'm the worst."

He may have been the worst, then again maybe not, but he was right about the constitutional protection. If any group is silenced because the rest of us do not like what they believe, or say...

Who is next?

LEONARD Allen

LAURIE

Does the Ku Klux Klan have the right to assemble, march, and rally in Salina?

According to the First Amendment to the United States Constitution, anyone has the right to peacefully assemble. That means the KKK has the right to peacefully march if they chose to do so.

As much as I am ashamed and disgusted by the KKK's beliefs, I have to allow them the right to assemble.

The Constitution allows them this right. If I take away their rights, then some right could be taken from me. I would not appreciate this at all so I respect their rights.

Apparently the KKK was granted permission to hold a rally at the city-county building in Salina. This rally was to take place as part of their national tour.

(Isn't it reassuring to know they tour the country holding rallies? Tongue-in-cheek here.)

Luckily, mother nature stepped in and made it difficult for the Klan to reach Salina. They had to postpone their rally for the time being.

I would be lying if I said I was disappointed the rally has been canceled, even if only temporarily.

It is my opinion that the KKK's rally in Salina would have been a great slap in the face to all Americans, other than people like themselves.

It is painfully obvious why any ethnic group would be offended by the rally.

I, as a white American female, am offended by the hate and ill logic these individuals spread. I certainly don't want to be associated with these heathens for any reason.

The rally would have been especially disturbing when you consider it was to take place near Martin Luther King, Jr. Day.

King was awarded a Noble Peace

Prize for his efforts towards achieving peace.

The KKK, in my opinion, has no concept of the term peace. I come to this conclusion from the fact that they want to discredit this holiday.

Martin Luther King, Jr. Day should be celebrated, in my opinion, as a day of peace.

It should be a day to reflect on how each and every one of us can be more gentle and respecting towards our fellow Americans.

This is only my perspective on this holiday. This is how I plan to teach my son how to celebrate Martin Luther King, Jr. Day.

One thing we, as Americans, can do to celebrate this holiday is join the Black Student Union and the Hays All-America City Council for a candle light vigil. The vigil is set for 2 p.m. at the Hays Public Library.

By joining these two groups, rather than the group of hate-mongers, we can all support the dream King hoped to see happen.

The dream is in our hands now.

Truth about Christmas brings gatherings into perspective

Debbie

Christmas is over, and I don't know about you, but I couldn't be happier about the fact another holiday is behind us.

If we didn't have to visit people we don't have much in common with it wouldn't be as bad. Like my Aunt Harriet who talks endlessly about her alien abduction. Or Uncle John who finds opening and closing cabinet doors, while praising the virtues of the amazing lubricant WD-40™ more interesting than participating in the festivities.

If we could be more honest about how we feel about giving presents to these people, it might be a little more bearable. For example, here are some gift tags could have used this year.

I DIDN'T WANT TO GET YOU THIS PRESENT BUT MOM SAID I HAD TO, or HERE'S YOUR PRESENT WHERE'S MINE?

And my favorite, THIS PRESENT IS THE LAST THING I COULD CHARGE ON MY VISA. HOPE YOU'RE HAPPY.

All in all I can't complain. I got some nice gifts for Christmas. I was even awarded custody of a family heirloom, the fruitcake no one has had the courage to eat for years. I asked my mother, "Does it bother anyone else that even mold doesn't grow on this stuff? Bacteria won't even eat it."

She told me not to make waves by asking questions, just keep it and give it to another relative for Christmas next year. There's nothing like family tradition.

Happy New Year

IMAGO brings vaudevillian chaos

Rod Smith
the university leader

Dancing frogs, colorful orbs, Jekyll and Hyde, and box-stacking sloths are all part of Imago, the nationally known theatre mask ensemble, which will kick off this semester's Encore series at 8 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 27 in the Beach/Schmidt Performing Arts Center.

Tickets for the show entitled "Frogs, Lizards, Orbs and Slinkys" went on sale Monday at the Student Service Center.

According to a Student Service Center representative, early ticket sales are going well, but there are still plenty of reserved and unreserved tickets available.

Ticket prices are: $11/$7 for the general public, $9/$5 for senior citizens and individuals 18 and under, $7/$3 for FHSU students.

For more information about the performance or a complete listing of ticket prices call the Student Service Center at 628-5306.

Essentially, Imago combines movement, mime and visual illusion to create its own self-contained world.

Since its inception in 1979, the troupe, whose 2-hour shows employ the use of clay, paper mache, wood, wire, foam, electronics, films, slides, lighting and music, has played to stellar reviews from Anchorage to New York and from Singapore to Seattle.

Imago's unusual images and creatures are the creation of Carol Triffle and Jerry Mouawad of Portland, Oregon.

This particular production has appeared on television specials and on stages in all fifty states and in three continents—Asia, Europe and North America.

Mouawad compared the physical comedy of the "Frogs..." production to vaudeville.

"Comedy, especially physical comedy, is reawakening," Mouawad said. "It reawakens our bodies to a giggly, uplifting sensation."

To Mouawad, the greatest reward of this physical comedy is the physical connection that it creates.

"A physical connection between performer and the audience can be delightful and life altering," Mouawad said. "Seeing the finest of physical and clown theatre has changed my own life."

According to Travis Crites, St. Francis senior, and a member of the Encore Series selection committee, Imago was selected to be part of the Encore series in hopes it would garner a similar response in those who see it.

"The committee tries to put together a package of events that will be culturally stimulating to both the students and the community," Crites said. "It's our job to put together a wide array of shows that will be culturally adept and at the same time meet the needs of the community."

I.B. Dent, special events coordinator, labeled Imago as primarily an adult show, but one that would appeal to individuals of all ages.

IMAGO, a theatre mask ensemble, will kick off the Encore Series' second semester with its production entitled "Frogs, Lizards, Orbs and Slinkys" at Beach/Schmidt Performing Arts Center on Monday, Jan. 27th at 8 p.m.

Likening it to a comic strip, Dent said: "A kid can laugh at it, and you can laugh at it too. While you're looking at it on one level, a child could see it at a different level."

"A child could go to it and like it cause it's cute and fun and there are animals and some imagination. But you'd be looking at it on a different level, getting more movement and tone," Dent said.

While Dent stressed the show as an adult one, a press release for the production took a slightly different approach, labeling it "appropriate for kids from 3 to 103."

"A movie you can see anytime," Dent said. "Once a movie is made, and it's on tape, then it's there forever. (Imago) will be performed one time, only. They'll perform other nights, but it'll never be the same."

Kuchar's exhibition not 'just a dream'

Laurie Bean
the university leader

The Hays Arts Council, 112 E. 11th, will hold an opening reception this evening from 7-9 p.m. The exhibit will feature works by Kathleen Kuchar, professor of art at Fort Hays State. The exhibit entitled "Just a Dream?" will run tonight through Feb. 14.

"I'll have 20 works on display of acrylic paintings and watercolor monotypes," Kuchar said.

Kuchar described the monotype as a printmaking technique. The watercolor is painted directly onto a sheet of plexiglass and allowed to dry.

Paper is then dampened and placed on the plexiglass. Then both the paper and plexiglass are run through a printing press.

Kuchar has been using this technique since 1991 when she took a monthlong class at a graphic arts studio in Florence, Italy.

"She (Kuchar) has had several solo exhibitions around town. This is her first at HAC," Brenda Meder, director of Hays Arts Council, said.

"She's a very prolific artist. Her work is so highly regarded."

The most prestigious statewide award Kuchar has received is the Kansas Governor's Artist of the Year Award in 1993, according to Meder.

Other honors Kuchar has received include a 1980 FHSU Pilot Award and being listed in Who's Who in American Art.

An auxiliary exhibit packaged with Kuchar's work is "Elementary Perceptions in Color." This portion of the exhibit will run until Friday, Feb. 1.

Works by students from Saint Joseph Elementary School will be shown. Included are pieces designed by students in kindergarten through the fifth grade.

All of the children whose works will be shown are under the instruction of Pam Huser, art and music instructor at St. Joseph's Elementary. Huser is a FHSU alumna.

For more information contact the Hays Arts Council at 625-7522.

Exhibit to open at Moss-Thorns

Laurie Bean
the university leader

Tonight, Jan. 17, an opening reception for the exhibit "Depicting Women" will be held at the Moss-Thorns Gallery of Art in Hays, 102 S. 10th.

The exhibit features the works of eight Manhattan area artists and runs through Feb. 14. The featured artists are Sylvia Cole Beeman, Ann L. Casel, Laura Farnell, Susan Ellis Givins, Deborah Green, Deborah Smith, Sally L. Thomas, and Vera S. Thomas. Manhattan and local artists will be exhibiting.

The exhibit features two-dimensional drawing and painting. Some three-dimensional pieces will also be shown. Kathleen Kuchar, professor of art, is the curator of the exhibit.

According to Kuchar, the group of women artists is a diverse group. The exhibit features a variety of styles and subjects. The artists have a different vision and perspective on the world. The exhibit is a celebration of women's art.

FHSU wrestlers experience success in Colorado

No. 20 Tigers defeat No. 19 Colorado School of Mines in dual

Nick Schwien
the university leader

"We had a great weekend in Colorado."

That's how Fort Hays State head wrestling coach Bob Smith described their performance in Colorado this past weekend.

The Tigers did indeed have an impressive showing by beating the No. 19 ranked Colorado School of Mines in dual play by a score of 35-3 on Jan. 9. The Tigers won all but one match.

On Jan. 10, the Tigers also defeated the Univ. of New Mexico in dual action by a score of 35-13.

On the same day, FHSU also faced No. 8 ranked Western State in dual action. The Tigers lost a close one by a score of 15-18.

Saturday, FHSU competed in the Borah Invitational at Western State University. The Tigers finished fourth as a team in the tournament. Six wrestlers placed in the top four at the tournament. R.J. Price, Yuma, Colo. sophomore, won the championship in the 134 pound class. Eddie Woody, Newton senior, placed second in the 150 pound class, after losing to an opponent from NCAA Division I Brigham Young University. Myron Ellegood, Garden City junior, placed third in the 158 pound class.

Three wrestlers placed fourth in their respective weight classes. They were Kevin McCullough, Effingham freshman, in the 118 pound class, Corey Alfonsi, Pampa, Texas sophomore, in the 167 pound class; and Josh Gooch, Wellington senior, in the heavyweight division.

"I thought everyone wrestled well," Smith said about the Borah Invitational.

Smith likes the idea that the Tigers have leadership from their three seniors, Corey Bickley, Otis, Colo., Woody, and Gooch.

Smith feels that this is one of the strengths of the Tigers squad this year, along with the help from graduate asst. Steve Kimpel. "Our conditioning is fine but we need to get individuals to improve on their own weaknesses and strengths before the next meet. We're at that point now where we just have to get them ready for regionals and nationals," Smith said.

The Tigers will have to contend with No. 8 Western State, No. 10 Adams State and no. 11 Chadron State to have a chance at the Rocky Mountain Athletic Conference Championship. The Tigers will face both Adams State and Chadron State in February.

FHSU also hopes to return some wrestlers to the NCAA Division II Championships this year. "I'm hoping we will get at least six to the national tournament. With a little luck we could have more. We have never had more than two, which was last year. I guess I'm expecting a lot but I think we can do that," Smith said.

The Tigers record is now at 3-1 for the year, which is the best start in the last five years for FHSU.

Three Tiger wrestlers also lead their respective weight classes in most matches won in the RMAC. Brian Allender, Hutchinson junior, leads the 142 pound class, Woody leads the 150 pound class and Gooch leads the heavy weight class.

Three wrestlers also rank in the top eight of NCAA Division II Wrestling. Woody is seventh in the 150 pound class, Ellegood is ranked sixth in the 158 pound class and Gooch ranks third as a heavyweight.

FHSU is ranked 20th as a team in the NCAA Division II Coaches' Top 20.

The Tigers travel to Warrensburg, Mo. to compete in the Central Missouri State University Roger Denker Open tomorrow.

-Why-

I'm back again to forecast what will happen in the world of college hoops for the weekend. The FHSU Tigers will roll over the Colorado School of Mines on their own court to keep the winning streak going. In my opinion, FHSU will win by at least 20 points. The Jayhawks will take on the Huskies of Connecticut and show them that they are the No. 1 team in Division I. Look for the big guys, Raef LaFrentz and Scott Pollard to have big games for the 'Hawks. And anyway, how can you root against them? Vaughn is back and has the offense geared up for high excitement. The Red Raiders will roll over the "Mildcats" of K-State at Bramlage. Enough said. Wake Forest will start playing again after a dismal performance against Virginia on Wednesday night. Tim Duncan will handle the offense for the Spurs. And finally, the Hawks at the Dean Smith Center will be a close one. Smith will be crying blue tears before a home win.
