American Revolution Bicentennial Symbol

The American Revolution Bicentennial symbol is derived from the stars, stripes, and colors of the United States flag.

The symbol takes the form of an American 5-pointed star in white, surrounded by continuous red, white, and blue stripes which form a second star. This double star is symbolic of the two centuries which have passed since the American Revolution.

These colorful stripes also evoke a feeling of festivity and suggest the furled bunting traditionally used in times of celebration throughout the nation.

The symbol is contemporary in design in keeping with the forward-looking goals of the Bicentennial celebration: "to forge a new national commitment, a new spirit for '76, a spirit which will unite the nation in purpose and dedication to the advancement of human welfare as it moves into its third century."

~~The basic configuration of the symbol should never be altered in any way. Specific guidelines for correct construction of the symbol are found on pages 10 and 11 of this Manual.~~

~~Portrayals of the symbol up to page 26 of this Manual should not be used for reproduction purposes. Artwork suitable for photographic reproduction of the symbol is found on pages 34-35.~~ formal exercises begin at 2:30 P.M. Those members of the faculty who will serve as marshals will be notified in advance, and those with doctoral-candidate advisees should appear without further notification.

Detailed instructions for assembly and procession are provided for each of the assisting faculty marshals. Also a detailed manual is prepared for the participants on the platform: President of the University, official guests, the master of ceremonies (usually the Dean of Faculties), the academic deans, and the men who read candidates' names and assist with diploma cases. Before recounting platform procedures a digression is in order.

We well realize there are inconsistencies among several facts: (a) the Commencement Program lists all valid degree candidates as explained above, not all of whom will be found qualified for their respective degrees at this commencement; (b) all of these candidates may participate in the exercises, have their moment of individual recognition on the platform, and stand with their respective group while the President makes his degree-conferral statement; (c) the conferral is not intended and must not be presumed for those who later are found to be not qualified. This apparent dilemma is solved in part by a paragraph in the front of the Commencement Program:

The students whose names are listed herein were considered candidates for the degrees indicated when the Program was printed; this is not an official degree list. The appropriate diplomas will be issued to candidates who successfully completed all requirements by the end of spring term.

This reservation is amplified by the master of ceremonies, whose opening remarks take this form:

Today's Program lists 1165 candidates for bachelor's degrees. . . . The University is happy to recognize individually all degree candidates who are present today. It is understood that the appropriate degrees and diplomas are those earned by listed candidates who successfully completed all requirements by the end of spring term. . . .

The ceremony of conferring degrees begins as the master of ceremonies continues:

The candidates from each College and School will be presented by the Dean or his representative, following the order of the Program.

Dean X rises and makes his formal speech (after which he and his

MEMORANDUM

Hays, Kansas
67601

To: Dr. John Garwood, Acting Vice-President Date: 4/26/76
From: James Forsythe Subject: 106-75-6

1. The Bicentennial Committee decided to have a graduating senior make a short statement about the Bicentennial. I will help prepare a statement. I have asked Sally War for a list of third-generation graduates. I will let you know the name as soon as I receive the list.

Perhaps we can list on the Graduation Program "Representative of the Bicentennial Graduating Class." The title could be "The Meaning of the Bicentennial."

2. List at the bottom of page one or two in capital letters "A Bicentennial Event."
3. You should also place on page one or two, and probably at the bottom of page two, "Fort Hays State--A Bicentennial Community."
4. Describe the Bicentennial Symbol on the last or the next to the last page of the program. It may be best to have the description on the last page. I will let you decide. You have a copy of the official description, and I suggest that we use that description as it is better than what I probably could write.
5. I will be out of town until next Monday, May 3. I will contact you then.

Thanks,
