Re: Faculty Line of March

Two marshals, one in front of each column, will lead the faculty clear down the center aisle. The two rows of faculty will then face each other as the remaining two marshals lead the candidates down between the faculty. The marshals leading the candidates will bring their charges clear to the front, then march around the front row (the right column going right; the left column going left) and begin filling the rows from the outside.

Once the candidates have passed down the center aisle, the faculty led by its marshals will follow and fill in their rows from the outside.
